Members of the House will know that our first priority is their safety and well-being. There is no benefit to the hostages in further speculation about their circumstances.

United Kingdom-French Relations

27. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of relations between the United Kingdom and France. [6864]

Mr. David Davis: Relations between the United Kingdom and France are excellent.

Transatlantic Co-operation

30. Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about steps to strengthen transatlantic co-operation. [6868]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The enhancement of the transatlantic relationship is a top foreign policy objective of the Government. The success of President Clinton's recent visit demonstrates the excellent state of relations between the US and UK.

NATO remains the indispensable cornerstone of western security, and the large north American contributions to the implementation force—IFOR—reflect the strength of the transatlantic link. The recently adopted EU/US political declaration and action plan sets out detailed undertakings for EU/US co-operation in a wide range of areas, including trade liberalisation. Complementary arrangements between the EU and Canada are also being considered.

EU Institutional Development

31. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about Her Majesty's Government's policy concerning the institutional development of the European Union. [6869]

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) in the House earlier today.

West Bank and Gaza

32. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his office is giving the Government of Israel in pursuing their policy of withdrawal from Palestinian territory. [6870]

Mr. Hanley: We welcome the redeployment of Israeli forces from the west bank and Gaza, a policy which we have consistently encouraged. Our aid to the Palestinians, of £83 million over three years, now with an additional £2 million which I announced yesterday in Paris, is a major contribution towards assisting Palestinian development, and promoting peace and stability in the west bank and Gaza strip.

39. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards self-rule in the west bank and Gaza. [6877]

Mr. Hanley: Israeli defence forces left Gaza and Jericho last year and, under the terms of the interim agreement, have now left all major towns of the west bank apart from Hebron.

Preparations are in hand for elections to a new Palestinian Council on 20 January.

Middle East Peace Process

33. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the middle east peace process. [6871]

Mr. Hanley: Implementation of the interim agreement has continued rapidly; the Israeli defence forces have left all major towns in the west bank apart from Hebron. Talks have also begun again between Israel and the Syrians, and we hope that the path will soon be clear to a lasting settlement in the middle east.

Land Mines

34. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects international agreement to be achieved to curtail land mine production, trade and use. [6872]

Mr. David Davis: We shall work to agree strengthened provisions on the use, as well as some restrictions on the transfer, of land mines at the conference reviewing the 1981 United Nations weaponry convention, when this resumes its work in Geneva between 15 and 19 January and between 22 April and 3 May 1996.

Thereafter, we shall take forward our proposal for a complementary land mine control programme, which seeks progressively to eliminate long-lived anti-personnel land mines, inter alia through restrictions on their production and stockpiling.

Good Governance

35. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that actions following the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Auckland in relation to good governance are being properly co-ordinated among member states. [6873]

Mr. Hanley: Responsibility for co-ordinating action among member states following the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Auckland in relation to the good governance rests with the Commonwealth's ministerial action group established in Auckland for which the Commonwealth Secretary-General and his staff provide support. The Foreign Minister of Zimbabwe agreed at the group's first meeting on 20 December 1995 to chair the group. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary is a member of the group.

Rwanda

36. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Rwanda. [6874]

Mr. Hanley: The situation has improved considerably since the 1994 genocide. We continue to support the efforts of the Rwandan Government, the promotion of reconciliation and rehabilitation, and efforts to return the large numbers of refugees still outside Rwanda.

Future Large Aircraft

37. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his counterparts in Bonn and Paris concerning the collaboration of the United Kingdom, Germany and France on the future large aircraft project; and if he will make a statement. [6875]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had discussions on this project. However, other Ministers and officials are in regular discussion with the partner nations in the future large aircraft project to establish whether the conditions set out by the Government last December for the United Kingdom to rejoin the programme can be met.

European Security and Foreign Policy

38. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had in recent weeks in regard to the future of European security and foreign policy arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [6876]

Mr. David Davis: I have had several discussion with my colleagues in the IGC reflection group about the future of the European foreign and security policy arrangements, most recently when the group met on 3 October.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary also discussed the future of European defence arrangements, including the Western European Union contribution to the intergovernmental conference with his WEU counterparts at the WEU Ministerial Council on 14 November.

Deregulation and EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next hopes to pay an official visit to (a) Athens, (b) Madrid and (c) Lisbon to discuss deregulation measures and the enforcement of EU directives. [6843]

Mr. David Davis: Neither my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary nor I has plans to visit Athens, Madrid or Lisbon to discuss deregulation measures and the enforcement of EU directives. My colleague the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster visited Madrid for this purpose in October and intends to meet Ministers from Athens and Lisbon early in 1996.

British Nationals (Assistance)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens required financial assistance from Foreign Office representatives last year; and how much of the money loaned has been recovered. [6854]

Mr. Hanley: In 1994 1,041 British nationals were given financial assistance totalling £75,635. So far, 62 per cent. has been recovered.

Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Commonwealth ministerial action group has to take evidence in public. [7605]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The Commonwealth ministerial action group agreed on 20 December 1995 to receive written submissions and to review its modus operandi wherever necessary but did not decide to take evidence in public.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the Commonwealth ministerial action group will be funded. [7607]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The Commonwealth Secretariat will provide administrative support for meetings of the group. Travel costs for members of the group will be met by their respective Governments.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions the Commonwealth ministerial action group is expected to meet over the next two years; and where the meetings will be held. [7604]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The group has no set meeting schedule and agreed at its meeting in London on 20 December 1995, to meet "as and when necessary". It agreed to hold a further meeting in London in April and to send a five-member mission to Nigeria to pursue "dialogue with the Nigerian Government". A date for this mission has not yet been agreed.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the reports of the Commonwealth ministerial action group to the Heads of Government will be published. [7606]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The group published a "Concluding Statement" after its first meeting on 20 December 1995, a copy of which has been placed in the Libraries of the House. The group's mandate is to report to Commonwealth Heads of Government who will exercise ultimate responsibility for deciding whether the group's reports should be published.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Public Libraries (Internet)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many public libraries in the United Kingdom are connected to the Internet. [8072]

Mr. Sproat: According to a recent survey by the Library and Information Commission, 142 library service points in the United Kingdom, 3 per cent. of the total, have at least one Internet connection, while 0.7 per cent. of service points provide Internet access for the public.

Queen Adelaide Coronation Crown

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage where the coronation crown of Queen Adelaide is to be kept for the nation. [8125]

Mr. Sproat: I refer to the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 855. The coronation crown of Queen Adelaide has not yet been presented to the nation. The manner of the presentation and to whom are matters for HRH Prince Jefri Bolkiah of Brunei.

Sports and Arts Councils

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will detail (a) the amount allocated to each of the United Kingdom's sports and arts councils from the national lottery and the amount of that allocation each body has offered, to date, to applicants, (b) the number of recipients in each sector and (c) the number and amount of applications lodged but not yet fully processed; and what assessment she has made of the performance of the distributing bodies and their present arrangements. [6690]

Mr. Sproat: It is too early to assess the performance of the distributing bodies in managing lottery funds.

The information on awards requested by the hon. Member is as follows:

	Amount allocated £ million	Value of awards made £ million	Number of awards made	Value of applications in progress £ million	Number of applications in progress

Library Authorities

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the spending per head of population of each library authority in England and Wales in each of the last five years. [8012]

Mr. Sproat: Such information is contained in the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy's "Public Library Statistics", copies of which are held in the House Library. Actual figures for 1995–96 are expected to be published later this month, but estimates are already available for 1996–97.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many mobile telephones have been supplied to her Department in each of the last eight years, and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [8033]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage was established on 13 April 1992 and figures can be provided only from that date. The number of mobile phones provided to the Department since then is as follows:

	Number of mobile phones	Number of suppliers
1995–96	4	2

Director General of Oflot

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on which date her Department first became aware of the flights taken by the Director General of Oflot; who was the most senior person to be aware of the flights prior to 11 December; for what reasons no member of her Department notified (a) the National Audit Office and (b) the Committee of Public Accounts prior to 11 December; in what circumstances her Department became aware of the flights; and when, thereafter, the first meeting took place between the director general and departmental officials or Ministers. [8118]

Mrs. Bottomley [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The brief prepared by the Office of the National Lottery for the director general's appearance before the Committee of Public Accounts on 11 December stated that the GTech corporate jet was used on occasions when it made operational sense to do so. My Department was first aware of this when the grade 3 head of arts, sports and lottery group read this brief on 4 December 1995. Full reports on the visits and travel arrangements were on Oflot's files and thus open to inspection by the National Audit Office from November 1994. It was for the director general as accounting officer, rather than for my officials, to answer any questions raised by the Committee about these matters.

The subsequent meetings at which the subject was discussed were on 12 December at one of the director general's regular informal liaison meetings with my officials; on 15 December, when the director general submitted to my Department his draft report to me; and on 18 and 19 December, when first the permanent secretary, and then I, discussed the report with the director general.

Royal Household Properties

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the properties currently lying vacant in the royal household and indicating in each case (a) its estimated value (b) whether it is in habitable condition and (c) its estimated maximum occupancy level. [7052]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 9 January 1996]: It is the royal household's policy not to leave properties vacant unless they require refurbishment between occupations. At any one time, 15 to 20 properties used for providing self-contained residential accommodation are likely to be undergoing refurbishment. There is currently one property, whose ownership is vested in my Department, which is currently vacant and will be placed on the market. The property is a three-bedroom terrace house, in a habitable condition, with an estimated value of £100,000.

Royal Palaces

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what funding was provided by her Department for the management of property services for occupied palaces in the last year for which figures are available. [7046]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The grant-in-aid from my Department in 1994–95 was £20.541 million.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Veterinary Medicines

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the 1994 report of the appraisal panel for human suspected adverse reactions to veterinary medicines will be published. [9027]

Mrs. Browning: I am pleased to announce that this report has been published. It sets out the conclusions of the appraisal panel drawn from the 144 human suspected adverse reaction reports which it considered during 1994. Of these, 99 related to organophosphorus sheep dips and 45 to other veterinary medicines, including mineral oil based vaccines, flea collars and pour-on products for dogs and cats. They were mainly reports received since December 1990, 20 per cent. of which were regarded as historical reports where the exposure and symptoms had occurred more than a year before the reports were received.

In many cases, the panel had inadequate information on which to make its assessment and its conclusions are based on a balance of evidence. They should not be considered to be a definitive clinical diagnosis. Of the 99 reports related to OP sheep dips, one acute reaction was assessed as category 1—clinical signs and symptoms typical of exposure to OP sheep dips combined with corroborating medical evidence—the first time the panel has classified a case in this category. The veterinary products committee advised, when considering the report, that such a conclusion is not unexpected, since it is known that exposure to organophosphates can result in acute symptoms. It is for this reason that advice aimed at minimising operator exposure is provided on product labels and in the "Sheep dipping" booklet.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Library of the House.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Wright: To ask the minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many meetings have been held by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee since its inception; what research it has commissioned; what reports it has made; and which of its papers have been (a) published and (b) not published. [7809]

Mrs. Browning: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee has met on 29 occasions since its inception in 1990. Its responsibilities include advising MAFF and the Department of Health on research priorities, but it does not commission research itself. It has published two reports, the most recent in February 1995. A copy is available in the Library of the House. Papers for the committee are internal to the committee and are not generally published.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many reports he has received from farmers alleging that when they have reported BSE symptoms to his Department's veterinary officers, they have not received advice as to the action they should take. [7988]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 9 January 1996]: We are not aware of any allegations. An advisory leaflet was sent to all registered cattle owners in 1990. The leaflet gives details of the action to be taken by farmers who suspect that an animal may be affected with BSE, and the action which will be taken by the Ministry when a suspect is notified.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the fatal toxicity levels of BSE in respect of (a) animals and (b) humans. [8096]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 9 January 1996]: It is not possible to quantify infectivity in any tissue in absolute terms because the agent itself has not been characterised, and it cannot be cultured or assayed in vitro. Quantification by bioassay provides an assessment of the amount of infectivity present in the source tissue, but it can be expressed only in relative terms specific to the experimental animal model used and the route of challenge. Quantification of the minimum amount of infective cattle brain needed to produce clinical disease in the challenged animal species has been carried out for mice, and is currently in progress in cattle in separate experiments by oral and intracerebral routes. Both experiments are incomplete and cannot yet be interpreted. No such assessment is possible for humans without deliberately exposing humans to BSE agent.

NORTHERN IRELAND

IRA

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what communications he, his Ministers or his officials have had with the IRA or members of the IRA since 1 September 1994; on what dates; which individuals were involved; what was the medium used; and what were the subjects dealt with. [7361]

Mr. Ancram: Ministers and officials have neither had nor sought any contacts with representatives of the IRA over this period.

Bryansburn Stream

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost and length of culverting of the Bryansburn stream and its tributary in the Kilcoolley estate in Bangor. [7383]

Mr. Ancram: Culverting of the open sections of the Bryansburn stream and its tributary would extend over some 350 m. Without a full engineering survey of the watercourses and the ground conditions, it is not possible to provide an accurate costing. A preliminary estimate of costs is in the range of £300 to £350 per metre, excluding design, supervision and overhead costs. The total cost would be at minimum £110,000.

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what efforts have been made by the Fair Employment Commission to provide more accurate monitoring returns in respect of (a) Belfast City Hospital HSS trust, (b) Belfast education and library board, (c) British Broadcasting Corporation, (d) Craigavon area hospital group trust, (e) Department of Finance and Personnel, Northern Ireland civil service, (f) Eastern health and social services board, (g) Green Park Healthcare trust, (h) North Eastern education and library board, (i) Northern health and social services board, (j) Office of Public Service and Science, (k) Royal Group of Hospitals HSS trust, (l) South Eastern education and library board, (m) Southern health and social services board, (n) Ulster, North Down and Ards Hospitals trust and (o) Western health and social services board. [7748]

Mr. Ancram: I have been advised by the FEC that it has no evidence that the named bodies are submitting inaccurate monitoring returns. In common with all registered concerns, these bodies are required to submit annual monitoring returns to the FEC, in accordance with the provisions of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989 and the Fair Employment (Monitoring) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1989.

Unemployment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the level of unemployment in each Northern Ireland parliamentary constituency (a) in July 1990, (b) in July 1995 and (c) at the latest available date. [8006]

Mr. Ancram: Information on the level of unemployment each Northern Ireland parliamentary constituency at these dates can be obtained from the NOMIS database, which can be accessed by the House of Commons Library.

Inward Investment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much inward investment has come to (a) Belfast, East and (b) other Northern Ireland constituencies in the last 10 years. [8058]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Inward investment projects secured by the Industrial Development Board, 1985–86 to 1994–95

	Belfast East			Other constituencies
	Projects	Jobs	Investment (£ million)	Projects	Jobs	Investment (£ million)

During the period 1985–86 to 1994–95 14 additional projects promising 1,903 jobs were secured without selective financial assistance. Although none of these projects located in the Belfast East constituency, 1,220 of the promised jobs were in projects located in Belfast city centre.

In addition to new inward investment projects a number of overseas-owned companies already located in Belfast, East benefited from further investment, towards which Government made a substantial contribution.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the locations of the inward investment projects promoted by the Industrial Development Board between 1 April and 30 November; and what was the cost involved in respect of each project. [7344]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 20 December 1995]: The inward investment projects secured by the Industrial Development Board between 1 April and 30 November 1995 are set out. The figures do not include one investment for which a formal announcement has still to be agreed with the company.

Economic, Social and Environmental Indicators

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what specific (a) economic, (b) social and (c) environmental indicators have been developed for (1) Belfast, East and (2) each of the other Belfast parliamentary constituencies. [8007]

Mr. Ancram: No formal economic, social or environmental indicators have been specifically developed for parliamentary constituencies. However, various statistical series, including unemployment and employment, are available at a parliamentary constituency level.

Industrial Development Board

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs were created by the Industrial Development Board from 15 April 1994 to 31 March 1995 and from 1 April 1995 to 30 November 1995; how many of those were the result of inward investment contracts; and what are the locations of these jobs. [7794]

Mr. Ancram: Information on job creations is not available in the manner requested or by location. However, details of jobs promoted by the Industrial Development Board in 1994–95 and for 1 April 1995 to 30 November 1995 are available by district council area and are set out in the table. The Industrial Development Board's own research shows that companies create approximately two thirds of all promoted jobs over a period of three to five years after acceptance of the Industrial Development Board's offer of assistance.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from (a) individual farmers and (b) farming organisations about the practical consequences of implementing EC directive 95/29 on livestock transport, in sparsely populated areas. [8197]

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland advised interested organisations in August 1995 of the provisions of directive 95/29. No representations were made at that stage. A formal consultation paper containing proposals for implementing the directive in Northern Ireland has recently been issued to interested organisations and comments sought by 2 February 1996. To date, no comments have been received.

Director of Research and Development, DHSS

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when it is intended to fill the post of director of research and development in the Department of Health and Social Services. [8134]

Sir John Wheeler: The intention is that a post of director of research and development for the health and personal social services will be filled during 1996.

Clinical Research Awards

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors underlay the non-award of clinical research awards in the current year. [8135]

Sir John Wheeler: In the current financial year, 16 clinical research awards were made for research fellowships.

In the next financial year, 1996–97, there will be continuing support for clinical research fellowships, and support for on-going PhD studentships.

Children's Specialties

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures have been taken to strengthen regional children's specialties. [8136]

Sir John Wheeler: The final stage of a major programme of redevelopment, costing about £10 million, is currently underway at the Royal Belfast hospital for sick children. This will include new operating theatres, an intensive care unit, an out-patients department and an accident and emergency department. The scheme is due for completion in 1998 and meanwhile the Government are satisfied with the present range and quality of regional medical services for children in Northern Ireland.

Nurses

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried students places (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study for each of the last five years. [8349]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

Project 2000

Year	Number of students who commenced training
1994–95	462
1992–93	687
1991–92	684
1990–91	389

Undergraduate students

Year	Number of degree students who commenced training
1992–93	32

The number for "salaried student places" is not held centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of nurses working in (a) private nursing homes, (b) private hospitals, (c) local authorities, (d) private residential homes, (e) the armed forces, (f) the prison service, (g) the occupational health service, (h) private industry, (i) self-employment and (j) any other categories; and if he will express the figures in terms of (i) total numbers and (ii) whole-time equivalents for each of the last five years. [8331]

Sir John Wheeler: The numbers of nurses working in the Northern Ireland Prison Service are as follows:

Number	3	3	5	12
WTE	3	3	5	12

This relates only to DHSS nurses and does not include prison officers who hold a nursing qualification.

The information relating to the other parts of the question is not centrally available.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, (i) qualified and (ii) registered with the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for each of the last five years; [8332]

(2) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, gave up their courses for each year of training for each of the last five years; [8337]

(3) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, gave up their training in (i) the first year, (ii) the second year and (iii) the third year for each of the last five years. [8338]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not held centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by what means he assesses the demand for conversion courses for second level registered nurses. [8334]

Sir John Wheeler: The demand for conversion courses for second level registered nurses is estimated by local employers in consultation with the colleges of nursing.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how he intends to estimate demand for nurses from the non-NHS sector; and how this information will be used to regulate the supply of nursing students. [8336]

Sir John Wheeler: The estimated demand for nurses from the non-NHS sector is regularly monitored through meetings between the working paper 9 group and the major providers of private care in the Province and through the "tracking system" operated by the national board which gives an estimate of the area of employment of new qualifiers.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the letter from the Data Protection Registrar concerning powers of the Child Support Agency to require the disclosure of personal data. [5302]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The letter referred to by the Data Protection Registrar in her annual report, together with my response, has been placed in the Library.

Ms. Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give a month by month breakdown of lost incoming calls recorded by the Child Support Agency's telephone system since April 1993. [4174]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 9 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency telephone system.

The information you have requested is not available from April 1993. Figures became available from September 1994. The attached table shows a month by month breakdown from September 1994 until October 1995.

Like any other business where a great deal of contact with clients is by telephone, it is worth pointing out that where calls are unsuccessful for whatever reason, be it the client choosing to ring at another time or experiencing difficulty in connection, there will almost certainly be future contact which will be successful.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the Child Support Agency uses calling line identification on incoming telephone calls. [6243]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. George Walden, dated 9 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency's use of calling line identification.

Calling line identification is a facility provided by British Telecom to all users, and is used by the Child Support Agency Centres to display incoming telephone numbers. The facility was activated by the Agency as a security aid to identify the source of abusive calls and bomb threats.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been collected by the Child Support Agency, each year, since its inception; what the running costs of the agency have been for each of these years; and how much has been passed on as a direct net financial gain to the parent with care. [6330]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 9 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about maintenance collected by the Child Support Agency.

The table attached shows the amounts of maintenance collected, and the proportion of maintenance paid to parents with care for each of the first two years of Child Support Agency operations and for the first seven months of the current year.

In addition, the Agency was involved in arranging maintenance for direct payment by the absent parent to the parent with care, amounting to an estimated £111 million during 1994–95. £70.67 million has been arranged between April and October 1995. Comparable figures are not available for 1993–94.

A proportion of the maintenance paid to parents with care will have offset benefit paid, but it is not possible to say how much. However, all maintenance paid to parents with care represents a financial benefit for the parent with care providing a firm basis for them to seek employment and claim Family Credit.

From launch on 5 April 1993, the Agency's net cost of operations during 1993–94 was £139 million as published in the annual accounts on 28 November 1994. The net cost of operations during 1994–95 was £192 million as published in the annual accounts on 18 July 1995. Expenditure statements in both annual reports are prepared on an accruals basis. The total Agency running costs budget for 1995–96 is £196.9 million.

I hope this is helpful.

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96 to October
Maintenance collected (£ million)	13.10	76.40	72.64
Maintenance collected and paid to parent with care (£ million)	2.99	27.89	29.97
Proportion of maintenance collected and paid to parent with care.	22.83 per cent.	36.51 per cent.	41.26 per cent.

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the average weekly maintenance payment via the Child Support Agency collection service for cases which are (a) fully compliant and (b) partially compliant, indicating separately type A interim assessments and full maintenance assessments. [6241]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. George Walden, dated 9 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about maintenance payments to the Child Support Agency.

You asked about the weekly maintenance in cases which are fully and partially paid. Whilst specific information on these cases is not available, the average amount of maintenance assessment in cases with an interim assessment is £95.29 and with a full maintenance assessment, when the absent parent has earned income, the figure is £39.69. The breakdown of cases is shown on the attached table.

I hope this is helpful.

Cases using the CSA collection service

	Number of cases involving type A interim maintenance assessments	Number of cases involving full maintenance assessments
Fully paid[1]	6,826	42,280
Partially paid[2]	16,521	74,601
Not paid	58,961	12,473
Total	82,308	129,354

[1] Full compliance—no payments outstanding.
[2] Partial compliance—at least one payment received in the last thirteen weeks.

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much is owing to the Child Support Agency collection service attributable (a) to type a interim maintenance assessments and (b) to full maintenance assessments, broken down by month from April 1994 until the most recent data available. [6242]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. George Walden, dated 9 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about how much is owing to the Child Support Agency collection service.

At the end of October 1995, the total outstanding debt amounted to £766 million. It is estimated that the proportion of this debt which is attributable to interim maintenance assessments (IMAs) is 65 per cent. (approximately £498 million), and 35 per cent. (approximately £268 million) is attributable to full maintenance assessments (FMAs). It is not possible to give a monthly breakdown from April 1994 as this information only became available from September 1995.

It is not possible to further break down the £498 million debt by category of IMA, but the vast majority of this debt can be attributed to category A IMAs. This is because the other types of IMAs (Category B, C and D) are used in circumstances where the absent parent is likely to be cooperating with the Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what checks are made by the Child Support Agency to ensure that it has correctly identified an absent parent before it contacts that parent. [7227]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Peter Thurnham, dated 9 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about checks made by the Child Support Agency prior to contacting an absent parent (AP).

Information about absent parents is provided to the Agency in the first instance by the parent with care (PWC) on a maintenance application form. The form requests details of the name, sex, date of birth, National Insurance number, and the address of the AP.

Where the PWC has provided a current address for the AP, and paternity is not an issue, the Agency issues a maintenance enquiry form by post to the AP. It is made clear to a person receiving a maintenance enquiry form from the Agency that the form has been issued on information provided to the Agency. The recipient is invited to contact the Agency for advice including those who believe they have been incorrectly identified.

Where the PWC is unable to provide a current address, the Agency takes action to trace the AP on the information provided by the PWC. The first step in this action is to use the Departmental Central Index (DCI) to find a match with the information that has been provided by the PWC. Where the information provided produces a single positive match with DCI, a maintenance enquiry form is issued to the address held. Where more than one possible match is found, a Child Support Officer (CS0) may then return to the PWC for any other information that can be given to enable a positive match to be made. If more information is received which allows a positive match to be made, a maintenance enquiry form is issued.

Where a positive match still cannot be made, the CSO will take specialist trace action to try to find the AP. The action taken will depend on the amount of information provided by the PWC, and may take the form of contacting other Government departments, for example, the Inland Revenue. Once again, a maintenance enquiry form is only issued when the CSO is satisfied that a positive match has been made.

Where more than one possible match exists and all attempts have failed to produce a positive match, the CSO will consider referring the case for a visit to be made to establish the identity of the AP. The officer who conducts such a visit would have all the available information on the AP, including description details provided by the PWC and a photograph if possible so that mistaken identity is avoided. In every case, at every stage, checks are made to ensure that the correct person has been identified before contact is made with the absent parent.

As with any human process mistakes can occur despite all our security measures, but they are very rare. Available data shows that out of 852,763 maintenance enquiry forms issued from April 1993 (the inception of the Agency), to October 1995, 222 of them (0.026 per cent) were issued to someone who in fact had no child maintenance liability in the case concerned. Of this relatively small number, by no means all were because the Agency acted incorrectly (PWCs sometimes give wrong information), but wherever our strict procedures are breached, disciplinary action is taken against any member os staff who is culpable.

I hope this is helpful.

Income Support

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) 16 and 17-year-olds and (b) 18 to 24-year-olds in each standard region currently claim (i) income support, (ii) income support with penalty deductions and (iii) bridging allowance do not receive any income from work, training or benefits; if he will distinguish between economically active and economically inactive claimants; and if he will provide this information for the summer quarter from 1992 to 1995. [4316]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information is in the tables. The income support figures requested are not available for summer 1992 or summer 1995; figures for May 1992 and February 1995, the latest figures are given instead.

The regional breakdown of bridging allowance recipients is not currently available.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

Note:
1. The figures will include some young people of 18 and over. Their numbers are very small and the Employment Service does not have a record of the figure.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many new claims for income support have been made by single mothers in each year since the introduction of the Child Support Bill; and if he will make a statement. [7228]

Mr. Evans: The available information is set out in the table:

1. Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. The years represented above are for the periods commencing May to February.
3. The number of awards has been estimated by looking at new lone parent family cases which appear in each of the four quarterly inquiries of each yearly period. However, no account has been taken of claims which start and end between inquiry dates.
4. Estimates cannot be made prior to May 1992 as the data are not available in the form required.

Benefits Agency Medical Service

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average period of general practice experience of a Benefits Agency medical service doctor in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Wales and (c) England. [6260]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ron Davis, dated 9 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what is the average period of General Practice experience of a Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS) Doctor in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Wales and (c) England.

All BAMS Doctors should have at least five years experience in General Practice, Occupational Medicine, Rehabilitation Medicine or similar related disciplines, when recruited. In some cases, however, the Benefits Agency will accept a minimum of three years for fee paid Doctors who have been working in a relevant specialist field.

Precise details of the number of years experience obtained in General Practice are not kept, but it is a prerequisite that BAMS Doctors must be experienced medical practitioners who have, since full registration, consolidated their clinical skills.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the maximum period of time which can elapse between a doctor's experience of general practice and employment by the Benefits Agency medical services; [6261]

(2) what is the minimum experience of general practice required for a Benefits Agency medical service doctor. [6262]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ron Davies, dated 9 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about what is the maximum period of time which can elapse between a Doctor's experience of General Practice and employment by the Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS) and what is the minimum experience of General Practice required for a BAMS doctor.

There is no specific period of time which can elapse between a Doctor's experience of General Practice and employment by the BAMS. Each case is, however, considered on its merits.

Doctors, employed on a permanent basis by BAMS, are required to have at least five years experience in General Practice. The BAMS prefer fee paid Doctors to have five years experience but will, in some cases, for example, if a fee paid Doctor has been working in a relevant specialist field, accept a minimum of three years experience.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of doctors who work for the Benefits Agency medical service on a part-time basis are currently in clinical practice in (a) the United kingdom, (b) Wales and (c) England; [6256]

(2) what percentage of current Benefits Agency medical service doctors are specialists in the field of mental health. [6258]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is available only at disproportionate cost.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Sheerman : To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cold weather payments have been made to the elderly or infirm in 1995. [7230]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested.

The social fund cold weather payment scheme triggered 13 times at five weather stations between January and March 1995. Approximately 11,000 payments worth £77,000 were made. So far this winter, the scheme has triggered 76 times at 47 stations throughout the country. As a result, nearly 3.8 million payments totalling almost £32 million have been made.

Pensioners

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on targeting help towards particularly needy pensioner groups. [8081]

Mr. Heald: We are pledged to maintaining the value of the basic state pension whilst focusing additional resources on those on a low income. Extra help, worth around £1.2 billion a year at current rates, has been made available to this group through the income-related benefits.

Appeals

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to accelerate the appeals procedure arrangements for which his Department is responsible. [8078]

Mr. Roger Evans: In conjunction with the independent tribunal service, the Department is continually looking for ways to improve the clearance times on appeals. This year, more appeals have been heard than at this time last year. Measures currently planned to improve the position still further include the introduction of a system of individual review for all cases over six months old and the reorganisation of administrative support to the tribunals.

Chronic Industrial Disease

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people were estimated to suffer from chronic industrial disease in each standard region of England, in England as a whole, and for the United kingdom, for each of the last available three years; and if he will make a statement; [8085]

(2) how many people were estimated to suffer from a chronic industrial disease in each health authority and for Wales as a whole in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [8084]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Industrial injuries disablement benefit is paid on a no-fault, non-contributory basis to employed earners who suffer loss of faculty, normally of 14 per cent. or more, as a result of certain prescribed diseases. The table gives the number of industrial injuries disablement benefit assessments in payment in each of the three years in Great Britain, Wales, England and the English regions. I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for information in respect of Northern Ireland.

Industrial injuries disablement benefit—number of assessments in payment in respect of prescribed diseases

Statutory Sick Pay

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further plans he has for lifting the burden from employers of operating the statutory sick pay scheme. [8624]

Mr. Lilley: I am issuing a consultation paper today which seeks views on a proposal which would grant employers exemption from operating the rules of the statutory sick pay scheme if they pay wages or occupational sick pay at or above the SSP rate. It would allow greater flexibility to employers and cut back on administration. The proposed arrangement would particularly benefit employers with occupational sick pay schemes by removing the need to keep two sets of records. It would also have the advantage of including smaller employers who do not have a formal occupational sick pay scheme but who offer more generous pay when employees are off sick. Employees' underlying entitlement to SSP would not be affected.

The proposal forms part of the Government's on-going deregulation programme of lifting burdens and builds on the easements to the SSP rules and the considerable reduction in mandatory record keeping which I am introducing from April 1996.

I consulted last March on whether employers should be allowed to opt out of SSP if they pay at least the equivalent in occupational sick pay. Employers' organisations were generally in favour of opting out as a means of reducing administration costs, but there were concerns that small businesses could not opt out as they do not generally have occupational sick pay schemes and that employees' statutory rights might be removed. The exemption scheme ensures that employees' rights during periods of sickness are fully protected by retaining the underlying liability to pay SSP, while reducing administrative burdens on businesses.

The new arrangements could be introduced from April 1997 by means of an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Sir Nicholas Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress Central London TEC and London East TEC are making in meeting the criteria for the award of three-year licence. [8622]

Mr. Paice: I am pleased to announce that the award of three-year licences to Central London TEC, Centec and London East TEC, Letec, which have now completed the process of meeting the rigorous standards we set.

Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what reports she has recently received on national vocational qualifications and Scottish vocational qualifications. [8623]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend is pleased to announce the publication today of a report by Gordon Beaumont, commissioned by the Department, on the most used 100 national vocational qualifications and Scottish vocational qualifications. I very much welcome this independent report from former industrialist and business man Gordon Beaumont which shows that there is much support for national vocational qualifications and Scottish vocational qualifications and the benefits they can bring to employers in improving performance and flexibility. It also suggests many ways in which delivery and take-up of the qualifications could be improved.

The report on the 100 most used NVQs and SVQs, which was commissioned following the Government's White Paper "Competitiveness: Helping Business To Win" is the culmination of a review headed by Mr. Beaumont which was asked to focus on the breadth of the qualification, the specification and assessment of knowledge and understanding, and on cost-effective assessment more generally. It makes recommendations on all these, and some wider issues.

The Department will welcome comments from the national council for vocational qualifications and the Scottish Vocational Education Council, Scotvec, on all these matters. The Government have written to the chairmen of both organisations asking for their responses to this report by the end of the month. Other interested bodies may send their responses to the address shown in the report. After receiving comments, the Department will draw up an action plan next month on how to implement agreed recommendations.

I should like to thank Mr. Beaumont and all members of the evaluation advisory group, which he chaired, for their dedication, energy and commitment in undertaking this considerable task.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Education (School Premises) Regulations

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what conclusion she has reached following the consultation on the revised Education (School Premises) Regulations. [9026]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I received 119 responses to the recent consultation exercise on the revised draft education (School Premises) Regulations. Comments were sent to us by local education authorities, schools, and a number of other organisations.

We have given careful consideration to the responses. The final version of the regulations and the circular will take account of a number of detailed points raised. The requirements in the current regulations that bear on the health, safety and welfare of pupils will be retained.

A number of the responses queried our proposal to deregulate area requirements for teaching accommodation and recreation areas. The Government are not, however, persuaded by the arguments that have been put forward for the retention of these requirements. In particular, we do not accept that the changes will mean that schools will have to accept more pupils or that there are any implications for class size. The powers of admissions authorities will be exactly the same as they are now, while the flexibility of governors and local authorities in the management of school facilities will be increased. We therefore propose to proceed with deregulation of these aspects of the regulations as originally proposed.

While we do not believe there is a case for maintaining the present statutory requirements, we do accept that local education authorities and school governors may find non-statutory guidelines useful for a variety of purposes. Two comprehensive sets of guidance will therefore be published, one covering school accommodation and one covering school grounds.

The guidance will set out a range of possible gross floor and site areas for schools, related to pupil numbers. It will also illustrate appropriate areas for the various curriculum activities, taking into account the requirements of the national curriculum. In conjunction with design bulletins on specific subjects, the guidance will provide benchmarks for LEAs and others to consider when assessing existing premises and when planning capital projects.

We now expect to lay the Education (School Premises) Regulations before Parliament in February.

HOME DEPARTMENT

European Union

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what communication he has received from (a) the Commission of the European Community and (b) the Government of any of its member states concerning those matters of common interest listed in article K1 of the treaty on European Union; what proposals he has received for conventions under the provisions of article K3 2(c); and what (i) material and (ii) information he has published relating thereto. [8254]

Mr. Howard: The Commission, which has a limited right of initiative under article K3(2) of the treaty on European union, has issued three communications to the Council of Ministers concerning matters of common interest under article K1. These related to immigration and asylum policies, a European Union action plan to combat drugs and the possible application of article K9 of the treaty. The Commission has also submitted proposals for a Council decision establishing the convention on the crossing of the external frontiers of the member states and for a convention on the protection of the Communities' financial interests.

Member states enjoy the right to initiate action in all the areas of common interest listed in article K1 and regularly make proposals for specific measures or projects in the Justice and Home Affairs Council and its associated working groups. The Council of Ministers has adopted conventions on simplified extradition procedures, fraud, Europol and the customs information system. Draft instruments currently under negotiation by the member states include: the convention on external frontiers and the associated convention on the European information system; a second stage convention on simplified extradition procedures; and a convention on mutual recognition of driving disqualifications.

Any proposal or communication from the Commission to the Council of Ministers is deposited in Parliament. In accordance with the procedures for scrutiny of European Community documents, the Government publish an explanatory memorandum for each document deposited. Proposals arising from intergovernmental co-operation on justice and home affairs under title VI of the treaty are subject to the separate arrangements for Parliamentary scrutiny of work which apply to that title.

Surinder Singh Judgment

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the additional entitlements of European nationals to bring relatives into the EU and the UK in consequence of the Surinder Singh judgment in the European Court; and if he will publish a booklet explaining the situation; [8521]

(2) what are the implications of the Surinder Singh case in the European Court in so far as the immigration law and the primary purpose rule are concerned; and what estimate has been made of the numbers of persons who have taken advantage of the implications of the judgment. [8522]

Miss Widdecombe: Nationals of the other member states of the European Economic Area are free to come to the United Kingdom with their close family members to exercise rights conferred under the provisions of the treaty of Rome relating to the free movement of workers and rights of residence.

Those rights were not affected by the Surinder Singh judgment, delivered by the European Court of Justice in July 1992. The effect of that judgment is that where a British citizen returns to the United Kingdom after exercising treaty rights in an economic capacity in another member state, his or her third-country national spouse and other close family members are entitled to enter and reside in the United Kingdom under European Community law.

In giving effect to the judgment, we require that the British citizen must have exercised substantive treaty rights in another member state, normally for a period of at least six months, as a worker or in another economically active capacity; those who resided abroad as tourists or students, for example, do not qualify. The primary purpose rule does not apply but the application is refused if the marriage is one of convenience. If the marriage ends in divorce, or if the British citizen goes abroad, the third-country spouse will no longer have a right to reside here under European Community law.

Since the judgment was delivered, we have received 73 applications based on it, of which 59 have been granted.

Europol Convention

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what drafts of the Europol convention concerning the establishment and powers of a European police office were (a) published by Her Majesty's Government and (b) sent to police authorities or their representative organisations; what outline (i) proposals and (ii) drafts were sent to select committees of both Houses of Parliament; when the convention was signed and by whom on behalf of the United Kingdom; and which drafts were considered at ministerial meetings and on what occasions. [8303]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The final text of the Europol convention was published, and laid before Parliament, on 8 December last year. Drafts of the convention were not public documents and therefore were not published nor made generally available. The police service were closely consulted throughout the negotiation of the convention through police representative organisations.

An explanatory note on the draft convention was submitted on 22 February 1994. Supplementary explanatory notes, with revised drafts of the convention, were provided on 17 November 1994 and on 31 May 1995. The final text of the convention, together with an accompanying explanatory note, was forwarded on 28 July last year.

Various aspects of the negotiation of the Europol convention were discussed at meetings of the Justice and Home Affairs Council between late 1993 and 1995, but specific drafts of the convention were not considered in detail.

Agreement was reached in principle to the terms of the convention at the European Council meeting at Cannes in June 1995. The convention was subsequently signed on 26 July by Mr. David Bostock, the United Kingdom's deputy permanent representative to the European Union.

South Yorkshire Constabulary (Charges)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the South Yorkshire constabulary charge for the police safe scheme and similar services. [8415]

Mr. Maclean: I understand that South Yorkshire police do not charge for the keyholder list services which they provide.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by month since Doncaster prison was opened the number of people detained under immigration powers and held at the prison, indicating from what countries the detainees originally came. [8053]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about immigration detainees held at Doncaster prison.

The number of detainees held at Doncaster are listed by month in the attached table, together with the countries of origin.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners were transferred from Doncaster prison in each month since it has been opened, indicating the reason for the transfer in each case, and the name of the prison to which the transfer was made; [8051]

(2) how many prisoners were transferred to Doncaster prison in each month since it has been opened, indicating the reason for the transfer in each case, and the name of the prison to which the transfer was made. [8052]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about transfers in and out of Doncaster prison since it opened.

There are around 2,500 prisoner movements into and out of Doncaster each month. This information could therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Winson Green Prison

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the average occupancy at Winson Green prison in each of the last five years; [7954]

(2) what has been the average prison officer establishment at Winson Green prison in each of the last five years. [7955]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about the average prisoner population and the average number of prison officers at Birmingham prison in each of the last five years.

The average prisoner population over the last five years is shown in table one, attached.

The average number of officers working in each of the last five years is given in table two.

Year	Average prisoner population
1991	956
1992	911
1993	793
1994	752

Table 2

Year	Number of discipline officers	Discipline officers plus miscellaneous officers such as trades and catering officers
1994	345	425

The figure for 1991 are not exact as the method of recording the information at that time was not completely reliable.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total cost of running Winson Green prison in each of the last five years at (a) actual prices and (b) current prices; and what are the budgets for 1995–96 and 1996–97. [7956]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the cost of running Birmingham prison.

The total net operating costs for the years 1990–91 to 1994–95 at actual and current prices and the present budget for 1995–96 are set out in the attached table. The budget for 1996–97 has not yet been decided.

Financial year	Actual prices £ million	1995–96 prices £ million
1990–91	14.9	17.7
1991–92	16.9	18.9
1992–93	17.7	19.1
1993–94	15.7	16.4
1994–95	16.1	16.5
1995–96	16.8	16.8

The costs for the years 1990–91 to 1992–93 are calculated on a different basis to later years in that they include notional charges for opportunity cost of rent and depreciation.

Probation Committees

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations are undertaken before appointments are made to local probation committees. [7951]

Mr. Sackville: The majority of probation committee members are magistrates, elected by their benches. Where committees choose to co-opt members of the local community it is for them to decide how to do so: many committees place public advertisements to attract people with suitable interests and experience. Where committees co-opt members of local authorities, as they are required to do in metropolitan areas and may decide to do elsewhere, they should consult the authorities concerned about the appointments.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how local probation committees are accountable to their communities. [7948]

Mr. Sackville: Local probation committees are responsible to their communities through the management of services: by the publication of Her Majesty's inspection reports, annual reports and by an obligation under national standards to liaise closely with local communities.

Risley Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to implement the recommendation of Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons into the women's prison at Risley in respect of the women's health care centre. [8176]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the provision of a new female health care centre at Risley prison.

The recommendation by HM Chief Inspector of Prisons that a new health care centre for women be provided at Risley was accepted. But no promises could be given about the timing of this new provision. This will depend on the redevelopment programme at Risley and on money for new buildings being available.

There are no funds presently earmarked for this scheme but it will continue to be considered alongside other schemes when money is allocated.

The Chief Inspector's most recent report on Risley (the report of an unannounced visit) was published in November 1995. No special mention was made of health care provision for women.

Prisons (Allocation of Sexes)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to discourage the practice of allocating women to wings of male prisons. [8257]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the practice of allocating women to wings of male prisons.

The Prison Service is currently developing a strategy for the future provision of female places. This strategy will be reported to the Home Secretary in the spring of this year.

At present 314 women are held in units at five male prisons. These prisons provide a total of 344 places in areas with a specific shortage of female provision. The current female provision at male establishments allows women to be kept closer to their home areas.

The accommodation provided at these establishments enables female prisoners to be housed in dedicated units on a shared site with distinct access to particular prison facilities.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people lost eligibility for compensation in respect of the death of a relative under the 1994 criminal injuries compensation scheme when the CICB scheme was re-introduced; and what has been the saving to public funds. [8161]

Mr. Maclean: The eligibility of a claimant for compensation can be determined only by reference to the individual circumstances of the case in the light of the relevant scheme. In the great majority of cases where an application was made in respect of a fatal case under the former tariff scheme, the claimants' eligibility for payment had not been determined when that scheme was withdrawn.

Information on numbers of applications for fatal awards under the tariff scheme, the relationship between the applicant and the victim in those cases, and payments made, was contained in answers given to the hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael) on 28 November 1995, Official Report, columns 652–53.

New Hall Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional inmate places he expects will be available for use by the end of 1996 at Her Majesty's prison New Hall, Wakefield. [8329]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about New Hall prison.

The Prison Service has no plans at present to increase the number of places at New Hall by the end of 1996.

Probation Staff

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list those prisons which have made probation staff redundant over the last year; and if he will make a statement; [7387]

(2) if he will make a statement in respect of those prisons which have reduced (a) sex offenders and (b) drug treatment programmes over the last year; and if he will make a statement; [7388]

(3) what reductions in probation work, including courses dealing with offending behaviour, have been made at (a) Winchester, (b) Birmingham and (c) Little Hey prisons; and if he will make a statement. [7389]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alan Beith, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about redundancies among prison-based probation officers; reductions in prison sex offender and drug treatment programmes and reductions in prison probation work at Winchester, Birmingham and Littlehey prisons during the last year.

No prisons have made probation staff redundant. Probation officers work in prison establishments on secondment from their home probation services. They remain subject to the conditions of service of their local Probation Committee.

Detailed information about treatment programmes for drug misusers in individual prisons is not held centrally but every prison must develop a local strategy to reduce the supply and demand for drugs, to rehabilitate drug misusers and to minimise the potential for damage to the health of prisoners, staff and the wider community.

With the exception of Littlehey prison, there has been no reduction in sex offender programmes at any prison and there has been no reduction in probation work at Winchester or Birmingham. At Littlehey, probation staff, with uniformed staff, lead sex-offender treatment programmes. A combination of factors including sick leave and staff changes led to the cancellation of some sex offender treatment sessions during the summer.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria he will use for determining whether an upheaval has taken place in a country for the purposes of determining whether asylum seekers claiming after entry into the United Kingdom should qualify for income support; and which countries he assesses to be currently undergoing such an upheaval. [7400]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. and learned Friend will notify the Benefits Agency if a country undergoes a fundamental change in circumstances such that people are not normally being required to return to it for the time being. Each upheaval will be separately assessed and a judgment made as to whether people should be required to return. This assessment will be based on the latest available relevant information from a wide range of sources.

Internet

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what web site his Department maintains on the Internet; what information is provided there; how often it is updated; what is the address; and if he or his Department answers questions and supplies additional information through the Internet. [7570]

Mr. Howard: My Department does not maintain its own World Wide Web site on the Internet, but uses (a) the electronic news distribution service of the Central Office of Information for the publication of press releases on the web, and (b) the web site known as the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency Government information service, maintained by CCTA—the Government centre for information systems—for other information. My Department does not yet have its wwn home page, but has four separate presences on the web as follows:

(a) Press release

(address-http://www.coi.gov.uk/coi/depts/GHO/GHO.html)

(b) Research & Statistics Department, for publication of statistics which are also published in conventional form address-http://www.open.gov.uk/home_off/rsdhome.htm)

(c) United Kingdom Passport Agency, for general information about passports and passport offices

(address-http://www.open.gov.uk/ukpass/ukpass.htm)

(d) Immigration & Nationality Department, for general information about immigration and nationality

(address-http://www.open.gov.uk/coi/ind.htm).

Press releases and statistics are published as they are published on paper. Information from the United Kingdom Passport Agency and the immigration and nationality department is updated as necessary. Neither I nor my Department at present uses the Internet for answering questions or supplying additional information.

Prison Service Staff

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison service staff were employed, by category and in total in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [7369]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question requesting information about the number and category of staff employed by the Prison Service in each of the last five years.

The attached tables, copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House, are based on information held in the personnel information computer system. They show the total Prison Service staff, broken down by grade and gender, at the beginning of each financial year since 1990, except for 1991 where the 1 April figure is unavailable and so the figure for 1 October has bee used instead.

Mr. Clive Broomfield

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to be able to answer the hon. Member for Lewisham, East's letters of 19 July, 2 October and 1 November on behalf of Mr. Clive Bromfield. [6921]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. Richard Tilt to Ms Bridget Prentice, dated 11 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about when you will receive full replies to your earlier letters on behalf of Mr. Clive Bromfield.

Your letters were passed to me for answer as I have operational responsibility for the Prison Service. I hope to be able to send a full reply shortly.

National Lottery

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the awards made to charities in Worcestershire from national lottery funds; and what is the size of the grant and total project cost in each case. [6132]

Mr. Sackville: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for National Heritage on 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 61. This includes details of the grants given by the National Lottery Charities Board to charities and voluntary groups based in Worcestershire.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service Management Functions

Dr. Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what delegations have been made in 1995 under the Civil Service (Management Functions) Act 1992; to whom those delegations were made; and what were the main conditions that were attached to them. [8645]

Mr. Freeman: The table lists delegations made under the Civil Service (Management Functions) Act 1992 since the last report to Parliament, Official Report, 11 January 1995, col. 140. In some cases, for staff appointed by statutory office holders, Ministers were statutorily required to give consent to terms and conditions of service. For such staff, delegation has been effected by waiving that requirement, subject to the conditions attached to the delegation.

List of delegations made in 1995 under The Civil Service (Management Functions) Act 1992

Delegation	Nature of delegation	Recipients	Main conditions

Office of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and Health Service Commissioner

HOUSE OF COMMONS

House Library Department

Mr. Bennett: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what consideration the House of Commons Commission has given to the proposal of the Information Committee regarding the name of the House Library Department; and if he will make a statement. [7985]

Mr. Beith: At its last meeting, the Commission considered a proposal to change the name of the Department of the House of Commons Library to that of the House of Commons Library and Research Department. After careful consideration, and taking account of the advice of the Information Committee and of the high reputation of the House of Commons Library, the Commission decided against the change in name.

Upper Waiting Hall Exhibitions

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to "Schizophrenia-Fear, Fact or Fiction" to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall. [8555]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 25 March to Friday 29 March 1996.

ENVIRONMENT

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has made it a condition of any applications for privatisation, ownership or operation of the docklands light railway that (a) fare levels are the same as for London Underground Ltd., (b) it will remain part of the London public transport zone scheme, (c) zone-period passes will remain valid at London fare levels and (d) the pensioners' pass scheme will continue for this line. [8249]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government's policy is that the docklands light railway will continue to participate in the London public transport zone scheme and to participate in the joint through-ticketing arrangements, including Travelcard, when its operations and management are franchised to a private sector operator later this year. Passengers should therefore, as now, be able to use the full range of London-wide tickets on the DLR at the same prices as on London Underground. The DLR currently sets its own fares for DLR-only journeys and this will also continue after franchising. The DLR takes part in the London boroughs concessionary travel scheme and offers pensioners and others free travel, as on London Underground. Our policy is that this should continue, subject to funds continuing to be available from the boroughs.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give for each year of the operation of the docklands light railway, (a) the number of train miles in service, (b) the number of passenger miles travelled, (c) the cost (i) per train mile and (ii) per passenger mile of all costs other than capital for construction, (d) the subsidy per passenger mile and (e) the percentage of non-capital costs received from passengers and London pooled income. [8250]

Sir Paul Beresford: The following table sets out the relevant statistics on the docklands light railway from 1 April 1992, when the Secretary of State for the Environment took on responsibility for the railway:

Docklands Light Railway 1992–93 to 1995–96

		1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	[1]1995–96
(a)	the number of train miles in service	0.69 million	0.65 million	1.05 million	1.24 million
(b)	the number of passenger miles travelled	20 million	24 million	37 million	46 million
(c)	(i) the operating cost per train mile	£28.0	£29.3	£23.2	£18.1
	(ii) the operating cost per passenger mile	£0.95	£0.79	£0.62	£0.48
(d)	the subsidy per passenger mile	£0.77	£0.60	£0.43	£0.27
(e)	the percentage of non-capital costs received from passengers and London pooled income.	23 per cent.	24 per cent.	30 per cent.	42 per cent.

[1] Estimated outturn figures.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the capital investment, at constant prices, including additional costs arising from adjustment to control or signalling systems, for each phase of construction of the docklands light railway and the estimated cost of its extension to Lewisham together with the contributions to that capital expenditure not originating from public funds, stating their respective sources. [8248]

Sir Paul Beresford: The capital cost of the docklands light railway, at constant 1995 prices is as follows:

Initial railway: £90 million

Extension to Bank and upgrading: £295 million

Extension to Beckton: £280 million

Resignalling/improvements: £56 million

Prime contract: £30 million

Total: £751 million

Olympia and York made a contribution of £95 million at 1995 prices to the Bank extension and Canary Wharf station. The extension of the DLR to Lewisham will be built as a joint venture under the Government's private finance initiative at a cost of over £100 million. The amount of private sector investment will be established following the tendering exercise now under way.

New Unitary Authorities

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the last date on which orders must be placed for the establishment of new unitary authorities so that elections can take place on 2 May. [8625]

Sir Paul Beresford: There is no strict requirement to lay a structural change order by a particular date. However, where there is to be reorganisation, it is our policy that there should be full elections to the future unitary authority the year before the transfer of responsibilities. As a result, given the requirements governing the publication of the notice of election in the Local Elections (Principal Areas) Rules 1986 along the administrative needs of the returning officer, we consider that an order should be made not less than two months before the date of the election to which it relates.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 11 January. [8138]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 11 January. [8139]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is in Paris representing Her Majesty's Government at the commemorative service for the late President Mitterrand.

Regulators

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the regulators, indicating their dates of appointment, period of tenure, salary, including any performance-related element, and their previous employment prior to employment with salary plus bonuses, where these are (a) known and (b) in the public domain. [8121]

The Prime Minister: The information is shown in the table:

Office	Regulator	First appointment	Term	Salary[1]	Former employment	Former salary[2]
Electricity supply	Professor Stephen Littlechild	1st September 1989	5+5	102,500	Birmingham University	—
Fair trading	Mr. John Bridgeman	1st October 1995	5	130,000	British Alcan	191,000
Gas supply	Ms Clare Spottis-woode	1st November 1993	5	90,000	Self employed	—
National lottery	Mr. Peter Davis	25th October 1993	5	84,255	Sturge Holdings plc	—
Rail	Mr. John Swift	1st December 1993	5	131,650	Queens Counsel	—
Telecommunications	Mr. Donald Cruickshank	1st April 1993	5	126,400	NHS Scotland	—
Water services	Mr. Ian Byatt	1st August 1989	5+2	81,381	HM Treasury	59,800

[1] No regulators receive performance related pay.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

East Timor

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, column 839, of whom inquiries were made to investigate the reports about Hawk aircraft flying over East Timor and by whom; and what criteria were applied to judge the validity of the information. [8011]

Mr. Hanley: Various inquiries were made of confidential sources, which it would not be proper to disclose. As I said in my answer on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 839, we have looked into the reports about Hawk aircraft over East Timor but have found no evidence to substantiate them.

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in his Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by him before they are sent; and if he will identify such letters to which amendments by him have been made in 1994–95. [7831]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Parliamentary questions are passed to the head of an executive agency for reply when the matter is one delegated to him or her under the agency framework document. The relevant Minister may see a copy of the reply before it is sent, but would not normally intervene in operational matters. Records are not kept of any amendments by Ministers.

Kashmir

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps the Govnerment have taken to secure the release of the European hostages in Kashmir. [7941]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We are co-operating closely in Delhi, Srinagar and capitals with the Indian and other Governments concerned, and continue to work for the safe and early release of Paul Wells, Keith Mangan and the other hostages. All Governments involved, the relatives, and a number of interested groups in the region have appealed for the immediate and safe release of the hostages.

We keep in close touch with the families and give factual briefing also to the constituency Member of Parliament involved.

Harjit Singh

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his latest discussions with the Indian Govnerment regarding the case of Harjit Singh. [8177]

Mr. Hanley: We remain in touch with the Indian authorities about the case of Harjit Singh. The latest court hearing was on 28 November, when the judge ordered an inquiry by the Central Bureau of Intelligence. We await its outcome.

Anglo-French Military Co-operation

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all committees which members of his Department assist or serve upon which discuss military co-operation between Britain and France as part of their remit. [8281]

Mr. David Davis: Military co-operation between Britain and France is discussed in the following committees: the Franco-British Joint Commission on Nuclear Doctrine and Policy; the Franco-British Euro Air Group steering group and working group; and the UK-France political/military working group. There are also a number of multilateral groups which discuss multilateral military co-operation.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in what circumstances an individual earning £18,000 per year and renting out a property would qualify for legal aid. [7798]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: An applicant will satisfy financial qualifications for legal aid if disposable income and capital fall within the statutory requirements. Disposable income and capital is that which is left from total income and capital after certain allowances have been deducted. Non-contributory civil legal aid as available if an individual's disposable income and capital are below £2,425 and £3,000 respectively. If disposable income falls between £2,425 and £7,187, or £7,920 for personal injury cases, respectively, an individual will have to pay a contribution. If disposable income and capital are above the upper limits then an individual will be outside the scheme. In criminal cases an applicant will receive non-contributory legal aid if weekly disposable income and capital is below £47 and £3,000 respectively. A contribution will be required if weekly disposable income and capital is above those limits. There are no upper limits in criminal legal aid.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the criteria for eligibility for legal aid. [7799]

Mr. Evans: The financial eligibility criteria for both civil and criminal legal aid are set out in my answer today to the hon. Member's question about the circumstances in which an individual earning £18,000 per year and renting out property would qualify for legal aid.

In civil cases, the applicant must also satisfy the Legal Aid Board that he or she has reasonable grounds for taking, defending or being a party to proceedings, and that it is reasonable in the particular circumstances of the case for legal aid to be granted. These tests must be met throughout the time that the case is legally aided.

In criminal cases, the court must also be satisfied that it is in the interests of justice that the applicant should have legal representation. In deciding whether it is the interests of justice, the court must take several factors into account, including whether the charge against the defendant is so serious that he or she may be imprisoned or lose his job if convicted or whether there is a substantial point of law to be considered in the case.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps a member of the public can take to ensure that a fraudulent claim for legal aid is properly investigated. [7800]

Mr. Evans: Members of the public can write to the Legal Aid Board if they have any evidence or suspicion that a fraudulent claim has been made for civil legal aid or for green form advice and assistance. The board will investigate any allegations of fraud. Allegations of false declaration of means by an assisted person are referred to the Benefits Agency to investigate further. If the allegations are substantiated, the Legal Aid Board revokes the legal aid certificate and the assisted person is liable to pay all costs incurred. Certain cases may be referred to the police who will consider prosecution under section 39 of the Legal Aid Act 1988.

Members of the public who have evidence of a fraudulent claim for criminal legal aid should write to the relevant court. The courts investigate allegations of fraudulent claims and refer substantiated allegations to the police.

Interdepartmental Working Group on Marriage

Mr. Sims: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress has been made by the interdepartmental working party on marriage. [9473]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The interdepartmental working party on marriage is working on a summary of its findings so far. It hopes to hold a seminar for interested service providers and researchers in February or March this year to discuss these findings before finalising them. The working party is grateful to all those groups who have responded so fully and promptly to its questionnaire.

The working party has given a preliminary indication of the types of initiatives at which it believes resources may need to be targeted. These are:

- marriage preparation projects;
- encouraging people to access services before a problem becomes a crisis;
- encouraging innovation as one service will not suit the needs of every person seeking help—there needs to be variety; and
- looking at whether some families have more specific needs, for example it is not clear whether the needs of stepfamilies and families from ethnic minorities are being met at present.

The Government intend to work with organisations which seek to support marriage in examining the potential of these initiatives. Following consultation with these organisations at the planned seminar, the Government will consider bids for the funding of pilot projects in areas with particular potential for reducing the incidence and costs of marriage breakdown. The primary purpose of this exercise will be to evaluate the effectiveness and value for money of potential initiatives, particularly in the area of marriage preparation and new types of service provision. Organisations will need to specify how they will demonstrate the effectiveness and value for money of their service in preparing any such bids.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Overdue Commercial Debt

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to review the case for a statutory right to interest on overdue commercial debt; and what form that review will take. [9378]

Mr. Page: The 1994 White Paper "Competitiveness—Helping Business to Win"—Cm 2563—announced a package of measures which the Government would introduce to tackle late payment. It also committed the Government to review the case for statutory interest

"if there has not been a significant improvement within the next two years"

There have been some signs of improving payment times in the UK, but late payment continues to be of concern to a number of small firms. Therefore, even though the package of measures now largely in place has not been so for long enough to have had an impact on late payment, I have decided to look again at the arguments for and against statutory interest. The review will be in the context of my wider consideration of how the problem of late payment can best be addressed. I have today invited relevant submissions from representative bodies who responded to the public consultation in November 1993. The submission will be considered alongside research and survey evidence. The outcome of the review will be published in the summer.

EU Structural Funds

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if there will be a revision of the areas eligible for grant from the EU structural funds under objective 2. [9379]

Mr. Eggar: The European Commission has been reviewing the current list of areas, but is not committed to revising it. The Government's view is that revision would not be in the national interest.

I am glad to say that, at an informal meeting of EU Ministers which I attended in Madrid on 1 December, there was general consensus on the part of member states in favour of "complete continuity" between the current list of areas, which expires at the end of 1996, and the list for the period 1997–99.

A formal decision from the Commission is expected during the coming weeks.

Arms Sales

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what criteria are used in checking end-use certification of arms sales; and what information the Government publish on this matter. [7689]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 10 January 1996]: Appropriate documentation to provide evidence of end-use must be supplied in support of applications for individual licences to export arms and military equipment. If the consignee is an overseas Government, the applicant must provide a copy of the official order or the appropriate parts of the contract. In respect of small arms, requirements vary according to the country of destination: for many countries the applicant provides appropriate import certification from the authorities in the importing country. In all other cases, specific end-use undertakings have to be provided in a prescribed format and on the end-user's headed notepaper. The information in the supporting documentation is assessed by the Department of Trade and Industry export control organisation, and by other Government Departments from which the DTI takes advice in considering the application. The Government give guidance on the type of supporting documentation which must be supplied, the circumstances in which they are required, the information they need to contain and the format in which they must be supplied.

Nigeria (Arms Embargo)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he has taken on the European ban on arms exports to Nigeria; and how this applies to (a) dual use goods and (b) existing contracts. [7688]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 10 January 1996]: In common with arms embargoes against other countries, the embargo against Nigeria is enforced by means of the export licensing regime operated by the Department of Trade and Industry. Any licence applications which may be made in respect of embargoed goods to the relevant destinations are considered in light of the terms of the embargo in question. The embargo against Nigeria includes all military, security and paramilitary goods and arms, ammunition and related material which is listed in schedule 1, part III, group 1 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994. The embargo does not include other categories of goods which are controlled under that order, although such goods remain under strict licensing control. Nor does it extend to existing contracts for defence equipment for which individual licences have been issued.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to reject all further licences for the sale of arms to Nigeria; and if he will make a statement. [6939]

Mr. Oppenheim: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Streatham (Mr. Hill) on 12 December 1995, Official Report, columns 599–600.

Interreg Programme

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the amounts of money paid or committed in respect of projects in each of the member states of the European Union under the Interreg programme for each available year since its inception. [7038]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 December 1995]: I have information about amounts of money committed in respect of projects only in the UK. Interreg grants so committed have been as follows:

1991: £3.7 million

1992: £8.2 million

1993: £17.3 million

1994: £6.7 million

1995: £1.5 million

Total allocations of Interreg II A grants for 1994–99 are as follows:

	Ecu million
UK	109.4
France	24.6
Germany	402.2
Italy	347.4
Spain	564.7
Netherlands	69.1
Belgium	8.2
Luxembourg	3.5
Republic of Ireland	133.5
Denmark	17.7
Portugal	339.7
Greece	59.5
Sweden	39.5
Finland	43.7
Austria	42.7

For Interreg I, the amounts are not available to me.

Ceramic Industry (Quotas)

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement in respect of the retention of existing quotas relating to the ceramic industry. [6937]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Commission is about to report to member states on the operation and future of the EC's quotas on certain imports from China, including ceramicware. The Government will consider the report once it is available.

Army Vehicle Contracts

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has made to the Ministry of Defence regarding contracts for (a) army field ambulances and (b) non-military vehicles for use in Germany. [7141]

Mr. Oppenheim: My Department keeps in close touch with the Ministry of Defence on major procurement programmes, including the two mentioned by the hon. Gentleman. Our objective is to ensure that the industrial implications of purchasing decisions are taken fully into account.

The Government are committed, however, to full and open competition for defence contracts and final decisions on particular contracts will quite rightly be based primarily on value for money and operational considerations.

Companies Act 1985 (Definition of Harm)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what definition he uses of harm to the public when deciding whether to make a direction under section 32 of the Companies Act 1985. [6682]

Mr. Oppenheim: No definition of harm to the public is used when considering whether to make a direction under section 32 of the Companies Act. I assess each case on its merits, taking into account the circumstances.

When deciding such cases, I consider whether there are reasons for thinking, or evidence indicating, that the public would be likely to suffer harm as a result of the name. There must be evidence of harm or of the likelihood of harm; mere speculative harm would not be enough. I also take care to consider the likely impact of a direction on a company's business.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received recently about manufacturing investment in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the north west region. [7649]

Mr. Oppenheim: I and other DTI Ministers regularly receive representations about manufacturing industry and manufacturing investment. For example, in the north-west, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade discussed issues facing manufacturers at a meeting with the Consortium of Lancashire Aerospace on 24 November. He has also recently received representations on behalf of the automotive sector in the north west.

Postage Costs

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effect of (a) 1p, (b) 2p, (c) 3p and (d) 5p increase on the cost of (i) first-class and (ii) second-class stamps on firms with under (1) 100, (2) 50, (3) 20 and (4) 10 employees. [7554]

Mr. Oppenheim: None. It is for the Post Office to assess the detailed impact of any changes in letter tariff rates on its customers and on mail traffic volumes. The impact on companies of higher postal charges will depend on the nature of their business rather than on the number of employees. An increase of 1p on first and second-class letter tariffs equates to a 0.008 per cent. increase in the retail prices index. By international standards, UK letter tariffs represent very good value for money both in terms of cost and of quality of service. Royal Mail's letter tariffs last increased in November 1993 and the Post Office is committed to maintaining the present rates until March 1996, the longest period of stability since the 1960s.

Insolvency Agency

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to make an announcement about the future of the Insolvency Agency. [7755]

Mr. Oppenheim: I expect to make an announcement about the future of the Insolvency Service at the end of January 1996.

Company Failures (Construction Industry)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many construction industry related companies have failed in each of the last five years. [8262]

Mr. Oppenheim: The following table shows company insolvencies, including partnerships, for the construction industry in England and Wales, 1990–94.

Company Insolvencies: construction industry

HEALTH

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5852]

Mr. Horam: The available information is shown in the table. Information for financial years 1990–91 to 1992–93 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Financial year	Total amount excluding VAT (£)
1993–94	326,740

NHS Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the management costs of national health service trusts in England for the financial year 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [8455]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, South (Mr. Hawkins) on 4 December 1995, Official Report, column 37.

NHS Contracts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 24 November 1995, Official Report, column 336, if he will provide a breakdown of NHS contracts by (a) type and (b) region. [3330]

Mr. Malone [pursuant to his reply, 14 December 1995, c. 804]: I regret that my previous reply is incorrect. It should read as follows:

The numbers of national health service contracts, by regional health authority, for the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 are shown in the tables. The information available on contracts by type is contained in the "Review of Contracting" for 1994–95, copies of which are available in the Library.

Edgware General Hospital

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings he has had with opponents of the closure of the accident and emergency department of Edgware general hospital; if he has completed reconsideration of the proposals to close the Department; and if he will make a statement. [8000]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend has discussed the issue on a number of occasions with interested parties. Most recently he met two deputations on 13 December 1995. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, East (Mr. Dykes) on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1140.

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received opposing the closure of the accident and emergency department of Edgware general hospital. [8003]

Mr. Malone: Approximately 5,000 such representations have been received, mostly pre-printed postcards.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Probation Officers

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors have led to the retention of the social work qualification for probation officers following its abolition in England and Wales; and what proposals he has to bring Northern Ireland into line with England and Wales. [8305]

Sir John Wheeler: There is no statutory requirement in Northern Ireland for probation officers to hold a social work qualification. However, it has been a policy of the Probation Board for Northern Ireland, for many years now, to recruit only those with such a qualification. Developments in England and Wales, following abolition of the social work qualification, will be watched closely. Any proposal to change the current Northern Ireland arrangements will be made in accordance with the particular needs and circumstances of Northern Ireland.

Nurses

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total number of second level registered nurses; and how many are currently undertaking training to convert to first level registration. [8335]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 10 January 1996]: The total number of second level registered nurses is not held centrally. This information is available on the database of the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting situated at 23 Portland place, London. The total number of second level registered nurses currently at 31 December 1995 undertaking training to convert to first level registration is 331.

Government Purchasing Service

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the prior options study of the Northern Ireland Government purchasing service was completed; and what has been the outcome of the study. [9377]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: On 7 March 1995 my right hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) announced that the functions of the Government purchasing service of the Department of Finance and Personnel would be subject to a prior options study. That study is now complete and I have concluded that the functions should be undertaken in future by a new next steps agency. It is my intention to begin preparations for the launch of such an agency so that it might begin operation from 1 April 1996. I am satisfied that will ensure continuous improvement through partnership with suppliers to deliver long-term benefits for Northern Ireland and improve competitiveness in the market place.

I also believe that the agency, in time, might prove suitable for privatisation, and I intend to look again at this possibility in due course. In the interim, there are a range of services associated with the work of the proposed agency which could be contracted out and steps will now be taken to market test these activities.

TREASURY

Government Activities (Efficiency)

10. Mr. Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to increase efficiency in the Government's activities. [7085]

Mrs. Angela Knight: We have already reduced the cost of Government by more than £500 million a year. Provision for the running costs of civil departments for 1998–99 is more than 12 per cent. lower than this year.

Investment

11. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase investment in the economy of the United Kingdom. [7086]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Industry is expanding capacity as needed. In the third quarter of 1995, manufacturing investment was 12 per cent. up on a year earlier, and 21 per cent. higher than at the end of 1993. This shows that we have created the right climate for investment.

23. Ms Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to meet representatives of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss investment in British industry. [7098]

Mrs. Angela Knight : My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer regularly meets representatives from the Confederation of British Industry to discuss a range of issues.

Economic Performance

13. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic position of the United Kingdom in relation to competitor countries. [7088]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The UK is well placed in relation to competitor countries, with healthy growth, low inflation, sound public finances, falling unemployment, a competitive exchange rate and rising investment.

22. Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's economic performance relative to that of other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries. [7097]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In its 1995 survey of the UK economy, the OECD said that the UK was "among the pace setters" in its supply side reforms, adding that

"the sweeping structural reforms launched in the 1980s are yielding dividends in a more flexible, competitive and less inflation-prone economy", which grew faster than the OECD average in both 1993 and 1994, and is forecast to have done so again in 1995.

Savings

14. Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policies to encourage saving. [7089]

Mr. Jack: The Government believe in encouraging saving and rewarding thrift. That is why we reduced the rate of tax on savings income from 25 per cent. to 20 per cent. for basic rate taxpayers in the recent Budget, benefiting 14 million savers who are basic rate taxpayers. This builds on our successful schemes such as PEPs and TESSAs and reinforces the benefit to savers from the best inflation record for almost 50 years.

Inflation and Interest Rates

15. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he had received following the December figures on inflation and interest rates. [7090]

Mrs. Angela Knight: We have received a number of representations welcoming lower interest rates and the best performance on inflation for almost 50 years.

19. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on interest rates. [7094]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Interest rates were cut by ¼ per cent. to 6½ per cent. on 13 December. This cut in rates was appropriate and fully consistent with meeting the inflation target of 2½ per cent. or less.

Fraud

16. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to combat fraud. [7091]

Mr. Jack: The Government attach a high priority to tackling all types of fraud and abuse. The measures we have introduced to combat social security fraud are already saving the taxpayer over £1 billion a year, expected to reach £2.5 billion a year by 1998–99. Customs and Excise is strengthening its intelligence and investigation activities, including over 200 more staff over the next three years, while Inland Revenue attaches similar priority to tackling fraud. In addition, the Treasury has recently issued its annual letter on fraud within Government Departments, so that managers throughout Government will be aware of fraud risks, and will be able to strengthen systems to counter those risks.

Tax Revenues

17. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of tax revenue is raised through (a) direct taxes and (b) value added tax; and what were the percentages raised through these taxes in 1979. [7092]

Mr. Jack: The shares of direct taxes and VAT in total taxes and national insurance contributions were 55 per cent. and 18 per cent., respectively, in financial year 1994–95. Comparable figures for 1979–80 were 56 per cent. and 12 per cent.

The share of income tax has fallen from 29 per cent. to 27 per cent. over the same period.

Budget Representations

18. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the Budget. [7093]

Mr. Waldegrave: As usual, my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer received a large number of representations in the run-up to the Budget and he has also received a number since he made his Budget statement in November.

Pensioners' Savings

20. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of pensioners have savings or investment income. [7095]

Mr. Jack: Around three-quarters of pensioners now have some investment income.

Government Spending

21. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to reduce wasteful Government spending. [7096]

Mr. Waldegrave: We have sharply reduced civil service running costs. We have undertaken fundamental expenditure reviews and senior management reviews of nearly all major Departments. All Departments are required to produce annual plans to show how they will improve efficiency by market testing, contracting out and other means and all next steps agencies are set specific efficiency targets.

Economic Growth

24. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what level of growth is forecast in the economy of the south-west region by the end of 1996. [7099]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government do not produce regional economic forecasts. However, gross domestic product for the UK as a whole is forecast to grow by 3 per cent. in 1996.

Small Businesses

25. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what impacts his Budget announcements will have on small businesses. [7102]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Budget will encourage growth in output and jobs in small firms.

Single Currency

26. Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to British banking and industry of the conversion to a single currency; and who will bear the cost. [7103]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government have not made a firm estimate of the transitional costs to banks and industry, associated with the change to a single currency, that would be incurred if the United Kingdom participated in the third stage of economic and monetary union. Such costs would be met by those affected, and they would be among the factors that would need to be taken into account, at the appropriate time, when the Government make their assessment of whether it is in the United Kingdom's interest to join a move to the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Under protocol 11 of the EC treaty, the United Kingdom will not be obliged or committed to move to the third stage of economic and monetary union without a separate decision to do so by the Government and Parliament. We will agree to take part in a single currency only if it is in our interests to do so, given the circumstances at the time.

Cider

27. Sir Colin Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates will be the additional revenues arising from sales of premium ciders and the change in duty on cider levy and strength greater of 7.5 per cent. alcohol. [7104]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Financial Statement and Budget Report showed that the duty increase on very strong ciders is estimated to raise £10 million in its first full year, over and above what would be gained from increasing the duty in line with inflation.

Public Spending

28. Dr. Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what priority he attaches to cutting public spending as a proportion of gross domestic product. [7105]

Mr. Waldegarave: The Government are determined to reduce the share that they take of national output below 40 per cent. and we are on track to do so.

Low Incomes (Budget Effects)

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of the Budget on the poorest 10 per cent. of the population. [7101]

Mr. Jack: All income tax payers will gain from income tax cuts in the Budget. Pensioners and others on low incomes will gain from rising benefits, mostly uprated by 3.9 per cent. from April, or 3 per cent. for income-related benefits. All households stand to gain from our sound economic policies, which have already cut unemployment by over 700,000 since 1992.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organic Cultivation

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage more farmers to adopt organic methods of cultivation. [7716]

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Dr. Wright) on 6 July 1995, Official Report, column 365.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what number of suspected BSE cases were notified during the past 12 weeks. [7990]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The number of suspected BSE cases notified and placed under restriction in the 12 weeks from 26 September 1995 to 19 December 1995 was 3,996.

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in his Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by him before they are sent; and if he will identify such letters to which amendments by him have been made in 1994–95. [7836]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Parliamentary questions are passed to the head of an executive agency for reply when the matter is one delegated to him or her under the agency framework document. The relevant Minister may see a copy of the reply before it is sent, but would not normally intervene in operational matters. As far as I am aware, no replies have been changed by Ministers in this Department in the period in question.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from marine heritage organisations concerning EU regulations and consequential United Kingdom legislation requiring owners of sound, seaworthy and hand built traditional wooden vessels used for fishing to be destroyed, or rendered incapable of use on water or being disposed of to any private person or body for uses other than fishing, under any scheme of registration as a condition of receiving de-commissioning grant; and what replies he has sent [8216]

Mr. Baldry: I have recently received representations from the following organisations with regard to the decommissioning of traditional wooden fishing vessels:

The 40+ Fishing Boat Association of the British Isles

The Colne Smack Preservation Society

The Historic Warship Preservation Society

In replying to all these bodies, I have made it clear that it is a requirement of Council regulation 3699/93 that decommissioned vessels are permanently excluded from fishing in Community waters. Experience has shown that it is only by requiring vessels to be made permanently unseaworthy that we can guarantee meeting our obligations. It is also a requirement that vessels of less than 25 gross registered tonnes have to be scrapped to qualify for Community aid. Nevertheless, I am always willing to consider any suggestions an applicant may make for alternatives to scrapping which provide the same degree of certainty in protecting public expenditure.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5721]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Quantifiable administration costs incurred to date on PFI amount to some £20,000 annually. Forecast future costs are broadly similar.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Aboriginal Artefacts

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what reports she or her predecessors have received from United Kingdom museums regarding the offer for sale of aboriginal artefacts from the Broome area of Western Australia; and if she will make a statement. [8002]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is not aware of any reports received by her, or her predecessors, from United Kingdom museums regarding the offer for sale of Aboriginal artefacts from the Broome area of Western Australia.

Iron Age Artefacts (Theft)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what reports she has received alleging the theft and sale to the British museum of historic artefacts from the Salisbury area; and if she will make a statement. [8001]

Mr. Sproat: I understand from the British museum that it purchased a collection of bronze artefacts of the British iron age of unknown provenance.

Research by the museum into the provenance of a group of miniature bronze shields included in this collection led to arrests in 1993. A site at Netherhampton, Wiltshire, was excavated by the museum and confirmed as the source of an extensive hoard which included these shields.

On 2 May 1995 the finders of the hoard were convicted. Ownership of the shields has now reverted to the estate of the owner of the land on which the shields were found.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Chief Inspector of Schools

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library copies of advertisements for the post of chief inspector of schools together with the job description and contract of employment and the minimum period in respect of the current terms of office or the renewal of contract; and what (a) advice and (b) instructions were issued by her to the panel which appointed the present incumbent. [8253]

Mr. Robin Squire: The chief inspector of schools is appointed by Order in Council, under the provisions of the Education (Schools) Act 1992, on similar terms and conditions as apply to other senior public appointments. The Education (Schools) Act 1992 specifies a term of appointment of not more than five years, with the possibility of re-appointment after that period.

The present chief inspector, Chris Woodhead, applied for the post through open competition and was appointed following consideration of the applicants by a selection board. The board was chaired by the first civil service commissioner. The appointment is for five years from 1 September 1994. A copy of the advertisement and job description for the post has been placed in the Library. The chief inspector's contract of employment is personal between him and the Department.

Grant-maintained Status

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from (a) organisations representative of (i) parents and (ii) school governors, (b) denominational bodies, (c) organisations representing voluntary-aided schools and *(d)*other bodies, in respect of simplified procedures for obtaining grant-maintained school status without balloting parents of pupils currently in attendance at schools. [8252]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department's consultation paper, "Self-Government for Voluntary Aided Schools", set out a number of possibilities for giving voluntary-aided schools only easier access to self-government. My right hon. Friend received the following responses:

Body	Number of responses
(a) Organisations representing:
(i) parents	2
(ii) school governors	6
(b) Denominational bodies	69
(c) Voluntary aided schools	1,632
(d) Other bodies (including local authority associations, local education authorities, teacher unions, bodies representing grant-maintained schools and former voluntary GM schools)	246

A summary of responses has been placed in the Library.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the TECs that have still to meet the criteria for the award of a three-year licence; and what percentage this represents. [8450]

Mr. Paice: As of today, 47 TECs in England have been awarded a three-year licence, which represents 64 per cent. of the network. TECs have until 1997 to meet the standards. The following TECs are still working towards the criteria:

Birmingham
Bolton Bury
Bradford and District
CAMBS (TEC)
CEWTEC
CILNTEC
ELTEC (East Lancashire)
Essex
Greater Peterborough
Hampshire
Heart of England
Kent
LAWTEC
Manchester
Merseyside
METROTEC (Wigan)
North West London
North London
North Yorkshire
Northamptonshire
Oldham
Sandwell
St Helens Chamber of Commerce, Training and Enterprise
Surrey
Sussex Chamber of Commerce, Training and Enterprise
Wight Training and Enterprise Council
Wiltshire

Many of these TECs are close to completing the process and I expect shortly to make further announcements of TECs to be awarded licences.

Training, North-West

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money in (a) cash terms (b) real terms at 1991–92 prices her Department provided of training in the north-west region in each year from 1990–91 to 1993–94; and how much money has been allocated for training in the north-west in 1995–96. [7652]

Mr. Paice: There are no consistent figures available for all the years requested owing to changes in regional boundaries and the setting up of the Government office for Merseyside.

In the first year of the present structure—1994–95—the amount spent on training in the north-west was £136.25 million.

For 1995–96, the Government office for the north-west has been allocated £169.826 million to spend on training. This does not include training initiatives run at a national level which cannot be disaggregated to a regional level.

WALES

Apprenticeships

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many apprentices under the new apprenticeship scheme have received bursaries; and what proportion this represents of the total number. [7746]

Mr. Richards: A total of 498 young people started modern apprenticeships in manufacturing engineering in Wales in 1994–95. Of these, 188 or 37.75 per cent. were in receipt of a bursary. A total of 1,780 young people have commenced modern apprenticeships so far in 1995–96. Of these, 75 or 4.2 per cent. are in receipt of a bursary.

Bursaries are available, for the first year of training only, to young people following modern apprenticeships in manufacturing engineering who are attending college on a full-time basis and who are non-employed.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of "The Bay Study—A Strategy for Water Uses" report of Cardiff Bay development corporation. [7965]

Mr. Hague: A water use strategy for the bay is an operational matter for the corporation and will emerge from discussions with the local authorities, other public bodies and possible users.

Home Insulation

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homes he expects to be insulated under the energy efficiency scheme in the next financial year; and how many homes were insulated under the scheme in 1994. [7816]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No separate estimates are produced for Wales. The home energy efficiency scheme is run on a Great Britain basis and 450,000 homes received grants in 1994–95. The Government expect a further 600,000 to be given in 1995–96.

Cancer Patients

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many patients were diagnosed as suffering from cancer in each health authority and for Wales as a whole for each of the last available three years, expressing each figure as a percentage of the corresponding population. [8086]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 10 January 1996]: The information is given in the following table:

Number of newly registered cancers

	Clwyd	East Dyfed	Gwent	Gwynedd	Mid Glamorgan	Powys	South Glamorgan	West Glamorgan	Pembrokeshire	Wales

Nursing and Midwifery Students

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, for each of the last five years; [8352]

(2) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, gave up their courses for each year of training for each of the last five years; [8358]

(3) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, (i) qualified and (ii) registered with the UKCC, for each of the last five years; [8357]

(4) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery

students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, gave up their training in (i) the first year, (ii) the second year and (iii) the third year, for each of the last five years. [8359]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 10 January 1996]: Information in the form requested relating to salaried students and undergraduate students is not available centrally. The available information is given in the following table.

Work Force Planning

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what studies his Department has undertaken into work force planning in the last five years. [8354]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 10 January 1996]: Work force planning information is collected for certain non-medical and dental staff groups in the NHS on an annual basis. To reduce the burden on the service the information requested centrally was reduced considerably in 1995. Only information which enables decisions on student intake numbers to be made for those staff groups planned and funded centrally is now collected.

Nurses

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total number of second level registered nurses; and how many are currently undertaking training to convert to first level registration. [8356]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 10 January 1996]: This information is not held centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of nurses working in (a) private nursing homes, (b) private hospitals, (c) local authorities, (d) private residential homes, (e) the armed forces, (f) the prison service, (g) the occupational health service, (h) private industry, (i) self-employment and (j) any other categories; and if he will express the figures in terms of (i) total numbers and (ii) whole time equivalents. [8351]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 10 January 1996]: Information is not available centrally for all categories requested. The available information, which relates to staff with a nursing qualification, is given in the following table. In addition, there were 24,728 whole-time equivalent staff in the nursing and midwifery group in the NHS at 30 September 1995. This figure excludes pre-registration learner nurses and any staff with a nursing qualification not working in the nursing and midwifery group but includes auxiliary staff within the group who do not have a nursing qualification.

Category	Number	Whole-time equivalent
Private nursing homes (at 31 March 1995)	3,833	2,687
Private hospitals and clinics (at 31 March 1995)	280	253
Armed forces (at 1 December 1995)[1]	9	n/a
Prison service (at 31 December 1995)[2]	14	n/a
General Practitioner support staff (at 1 October 1994)	n/a	611

n/a - not available.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he intends to estimate demand for nurses from the non-NHS sector; and how this information will be used to regulate the supply of nursing students. [8353]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 10 January 1996]: Nurse training numbers are based on the requirement for newly qualified nurses identified in trusts' annual workforce plans. Allowance is also made for additional nurses working in the independent sector and with general practitioners.

To estimate demand outside the NHS, private hospitals, nursing homes and HM prisons are invited to provide information on their novice recruit requirements as part of the NHS Wales work force planning cycle.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales by what means he assesses the demand for conversion courses for second level registered nurses. [8355]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 10 January 1996]: The demand for conversion courses for second level registered nurses is assessed by the trust which employs the nurses.

Housing Revenue Account Subsidy

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will reach his decisions on housing revenue account subsidy for 1996–97. [9497]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: We have decided to confirm the proposals which were set out in the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. Sweeney) on 28 November 1995, Official Report, column 600. These included an average guideline rent increase of 92p per dwelling per week and per dwelling management and maintenance allowance to be kept at broadly the same as in 1995–96. The other proposals, including one to limit rent rebate subsidy, are also confirmed with minor adjustments.

Tables setting out each authority's rent guideline and management and maintenance allowance for 1996–97 have been placed in the Library of the House.

DEFENCE

Mr. Fouad Makhzoumi

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the occasions since 1979 on which he, his predecessors or officials of his Department have met Mr. Fouad Makhzoumi; what was the subject of each such meeting; and if he will make a statement. [7802]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have nothing to add to the replies which my predecessor gave to the hon. Members for Cunninghame, North (Mr. Wilson) and for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) on 24 April 1995, Official Report, columns 394 and 396.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many mobile phones have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [8035]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Following the introduction of the Department's new management strategy in 1991, responsibility for the procurement of mobile phones was disaggregated to local budget holders. No central records are held and information could be produced only at disproportionate cost. I shall write to the hon. Member regarding the position prior to 1991.

Mutual Defence Agreement

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to amend the 1958 United States-United Kingdom mutual defence agreement to allow greater nuclear co-operation between Britain and France before the next amendment conference in 2005. [8265]

Mr. Arbuthnot: None.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if an office has been established for the purpose of co-ordinating Anglo-French nuclear co-operation similar to the existing atomic co-ordinating office, established to facilitate the 1958 US-UK mutual defence agreement. [8271]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No.

Nuclear Weapons (France)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that no French Government officials work at, or use, the facilities at the atomic weapons establishment. [8273]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No. Such a policy would be contrary to the Government's aim of deepening defence nuclear co-operation between the United Kingdom and France.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions there have been with the United States on the extent to which Britain can assist France in its nuclear weapons design, development and production programme. [8275]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We hold regular discussions with both the United States and France on a range of issues related to nuclear weapons.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance is (a) being given and (b) planned to be given to the French Government to assist in the construction of PALEN. [8266]

Mr. Arbuthnot: It is not our practice to reveal such details.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what procedures are in place to facilitate Anglo-French nuclear co-operation; [8267]

(2) what assistance is (a) being given or (b) planned to be given to the French Government to assist them in developing the facilities and equipment necessary for computer simulation and above ground experiments in respect of nuclear testing. [8268]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 16 October 1995, Official Report, column 37.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if any memoranda of understanding have (a) been negotiated and (b) are currently under negotiation or consideration to formalise aspects of Anglo-French nuclear co-operation; [8284]

(2) if he will list all treaties and memoranda of understanding which currently exist between Britain and France with regard to nuclear co-operation. [8272]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor) on 24 October 1995, Official Report, column 587.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last five years French Government officials have visited a Untied Kingdom atomic weapons establishment. [8274]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have nothing to add to the answers I gave the hon. Member on 16 October 1995 Official Report, column 37, and to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 31 October 1995, Official Report, columns, 155–56.

British Aerospace

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what payments his Department has received in the last five years from British Aerospace for services provided to British Aerospace; and what services were provided. [7603]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 9 January 1996]: This is a matter for the chief executive of the agency concerned. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. A. Rowe to Mrs. Ann Clwyd, dated 11 January 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence what payments his Department has received in the last five years from British Aerospace for services provided to British Aerospace, and what services were provided. As Chief Executive of the Defence Bills Agency I have been asked to reply.

The value of payments received from a customer is commercially sensitive information and therefore cannot be divulged.

Our payment records for British Aerospace, or indeed any customer, detail invoice number and value. In order to ascertain the type of supply or service covered each invoice would need to be retrieved and examined. Due to the level of business we have with British Aerospace this information could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However, examples, of the goods and services covered by the invoices are the provision of training, sale and loan of equipment, and levies due in respect of commercial sales.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Services Bandsmen

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bandsmen (a) there are currently and (b) there were in 1990 in each of the services regular bands and in each band in the Territorial Army. [7984]

Mr. Soames: The breakdown of established figures for bandsmen for the three services, including the Territorial Army, is shown in the table.

Navy (RM)	227	377
Army (Reg)	1,162	1,991
Army (TA)	864	992
RAF	206	244

The reorganisation of regular Army bands over the last three years has resulted in a reduction from 69 to 30 bands. Fifty seven bands which existed in 1990 no longer exist, and 18 new bands have been created. In 1990, 43 bands were established with 22 bandsmen, 14 with 34, three with 35, five with 49 and one with 30. There were an additional 25 staff. There are now 22 bands with 35 bandsmen and eight with 49.

The reorganisation process in the other two services and the TA has not been so dramatic. Comparative figures for 1990 and 1996 are shown in the tables:

Procurement Executive

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the estimated (a) costs and (b) savings to public expenditure by financial year in respect of the establishment of the new building for the Procurement Executive at Abbey Wood, Bristol. [8199]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The estimated works cost of the Abbey Wood development, inclusive of site acquisition, construction, fitting out, professional works management fees and VAT, is £254.1 million at 1993 prices—£273.4 million at 1995 prices. Expenditure on works is estimated to be complete by the financial year 1998–99, allowing for the payment of retentions covering warranty and defect liability periods. The associated direct relocation cost, inclusive of staff relocation costs, removals, recommissioning of transferred IT systems and buy-out of London weighting allowance, is estimated at £79.8 million at 1993 prices—£85.5 million at 1995 prices—with the bulk of expenditure estimated to be completed by the financial year 2000–01 allowing for detached duty and housing cost allowances.

The net savings to the defence budget supported by the establishment of the new headquarters at Abbey Wood, Bristol for the Procurement Executive on completion of collocation are estimated at £86 million at 1993 prices—£92 million at 1995 prices—in the financial year 1997–98 rising to £105 million at 1993 prices, £113 million at 1995 prices, by the financial year 2004–05, and continuing annually thereafter.

When other exchequer costs and benefits are taken into account, and subject to finalisation of plans for the re-use or disposal of existing accommodation, the Department estimates the net savings to public expenditure are estimated at £67 million at 1993 prices—£72 million at 1995 prices—in the financial year 1997–98 rising to £94 million at 1993 prices, £101 million at 1995 prices, by the financial year 2004–05, and continuing annually thereafter.

Post project evaluation will be carried out by early 1997 to assess the extent to which estimated savings are being achieved.

Porton Down (Experiments)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many occasions studies involving service volunteers at Porton Down started without the permission of the Committee on the Safety of Human Experiments or the Independent Ethics Committee; and if the Committee on the Safety of Human Experiments included members who were not on the staff or Porton Down; [7309]

(2) what information has been kept on the register of work maintained by the Committee on the Safety of Human Experiments described in his answer of 6 July, Official Report, column 369; when this register was set up and whether it is still kept; where the register is kept; who has access to the register; whether any part of the register is unclassified; and whether the register is available to be consulted by service volunteers who have taken part in the service volunteers programme. [7310]

Mr. Soames: These matters are for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 11 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence asking for further details about the register of work maintained by the Committee on the Safety of Human Experiments (COSHE) mentioned in my letter to you of 6 July 1995 (Official Report, column 369) and on how many occasions studies were started involving service volunteers without permission of the committee have been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes CBDE as one of its divisions. I am replying to both questions in this letter.

The register referred to in my answer of 6th July comprises of a list of the study protocols approved by the Committee for the Safety of Human Experiments (COSHE) since its inception. It is a classified document held in the archives of the Medical Countermeasure Centre at CBDE Porton Down. Access is limited to those managing the Service Volunteer Programme.

Since their inception no studies have ever been undertaken without the consent of either the COSHE or the Independent Ethics Committee. The COSHE was a committee of Porton Down medical practitioners and sometimes including external experts.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down started its policy of providing details, if requested, of the studies in which a service volunteer participated to medical practitioners who are responsible for the medical care of the individual concerned; what details are currently provided; and, since this policy began, whether the individuals concerned have always been allowed to see these details if the medical practitioner wished to show such details to the individual; [7294]

(2) if volunteers can inspect or obtain copies of contents of the paper folder referred to in his answer 18 July, Official Report, column 1174, containing details of their participation in the service volunteers programme at the Chemical Defence Establishment, Porton Down; if this paper folder contains laboratory reports and scientific data about the experiments in which they participated; and when the establishment started the practice of maintaining paper folders on each volunteer; [7311]

(3) if all service volunteers in the service personnel programme at the Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down since 1965 have been informed of the name of the chemical or chemical agent which was being tested on them before the test started. [7305]

Mr. Soames: These matters are for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 11 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence asking for further details of the information contained in the paper folders, mentioned in my letter to you of 18 July 1995 (Official Report, column 1174), relating to service volunteers at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE), Porton Down; what information was released to volunteers and their medical practitioners; and whether volunteers were informed of the substances being tested on them have been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Defence Research and Evaluation Agency (DERA) which includes CBDE as one of its divisions. I am answering all three questions in this letter.

The paper folders to which I referred in my letter of 18 July have been used at CBDE Porton Down since 1980 and contain details of medical examinations conducted on each volunteer as they join and leave CDBE. Access to this information is now in accordance with the 'Access to Health Records Act 1990' which gives patients the right to see or obtain copies of their health records compiled after 1 November 1991. In fact, it has always been CBDE policy to release medical details to medical practitioners on request. Experimental data and study details are held separately and this information is also usually available to medical practitioners on request. Medical practitioners are at liberty to show any of this information to their patients.

Volunteers at Porton Down have always, as a matter of course, been informed of the name, nature and possible short term outcome of any chemical or chemical agent used in studies in which they are going to participate. The only exception was in studies using psychotomimetric drugs, such as the trials involving LSD in the 1960s, where it was considered that to do so might prejudice the scientific integrity of the study. Those volunteers were, however, informed of the nature of the drug and the type of short term effects it might induce. Once any volunteer has been given this information they are given time to consider and ask further questions before proceeding with the trial. They are free then, and at any subsequent time during the study, to withdraw without giving a reason. These safeguards have been enshrined in the Nuremburg Code since the 1940s but had, to the best of our knowledge, always been the practice at Porton Down.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down recruited volunteers for its service volunteers programme. [7297]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 11 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE) at Porton Down recruits volunteers for the service volunteer programme has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes CBDE as one of its divisions.

CBDE recruits volunteers for the research programme by placing its requirements in Defence Council Instructions, a form of internal notices, which are issued to all military units. Service personnel wishing to volunteer apply to their unit's administrative staff who pass the details to CBDE.

I hope this information is useful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service volunteers were involved in the trials to determine the dispersion of chemical agents carried out in the underground sampling chambers at the Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down; which chemical agents were used in trials in these underground chambers; if these underground chambers were used for any other purposes; and in what year these underground chambers were last used. [7307]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 11 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many service volunteers were involved in the trials to determine the dispersion of chemical agents carried out in the underground sampling chambers at the former Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down, which agents were used in these trials, what other studies were conducted in the underground chambers and in what year they were last used has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE) as one of its divisions.

No service volunteers have been involved in the studies conducted using the underground sampling chambers at CBDE Porton Down. These chambers, which were originally water reservoirs for the now demolished farmhouse known as Old Lodge, were last used in the early 1960s for trials with riot control agents such as CS.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent tests and studies involving service personnel in the service volunteer programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down since 1965 have conformed to the Nuremburg code and Helsinki declarations on medical research on humans in respect of compensation; and if he will make a statement. [7308]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 11 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking whether tests and studies involving service personnel in the service volunteer programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE) at Porton Down since 1965 have conformed to the Nuremburg Code and Helsinki Declaration on medical research on humans with regard to the principle that persons should be compensated for any injury or loss caused by the experiments has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes CBDE as one of its divisions.

All volunteer studies conducted at CBDE since 1965 have been carried out according to a written protocol approved by the Committee for the Safety of Human Experiments (COSHE), a committee of Porton Down medical practitioners and sometimes including external experts. Since 1991 protocols have been formally submitted to an independent Ethics Committee for approval before the studies begin. Any member of HM Armed Forces who suffers an injury that is attributable to service (including participation in studies at CBDE Porton Down) would be entitled to a War Pension. Claims for compensation, other than for a War Pension would be considered on a case by case basis. Compensation would be awarded, if appropriate, following a full examination of the facts.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rules govern participation by service personnel who have recently given blood in the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down; what is the reason for this policy; and when it was introduced. [7301]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 11 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what rules govern the participation by service personnel who have recently given blood in the service volunteer programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down, what is the reason for this policy and when it was introduced has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes CBDE as one of its divisions.

It is CBDE's policy that those who participate in the Volunteer Programme must be medically fit to take part in the studies required. It is therefore part of the procedures for acceptance onto the programme to conduct a medical examination of the volunteer.

When a study will involve taking multiple blood samples the medical examination includes a red blood cell count. If this is not within acceptable parameters (perhaps as the result of recent blood donation) the volunteer is not accepted for the study. Trials since the early 1940s have involved multiple blood sampling and we believe that the policy of using red blood cell count as part of the acceptance procedure for this type of study has existed since this date.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what details of experiments are given to hon. Members who write to the Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down requesting information about such experiments on behalf of individuals who have taken part in those experiments during the service volunteers programme; and if such hon. Members receive more detailed information of such experiments than the patient's medical practitioners. [7356]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 11 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking whether the information given to honourable members about the service volunteer programme at the Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down is more detailed than that given to the volunteers' medical practitioners has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes CBDE as one of its divisions.

It has been CBDE's policy for many years to provide details of the type of studies in which a volunteer participated to an honourable member requesting this information on behalf of a constituent. The information provided to the honourable member is similar to that provided to the volunteer's medical practitioner with the exception that any medical details regarding the individual are provided solely to their medical practitioner and not to a third party such as the honourable member.

I hope this information is helpful.

SCOTLAND

Dounreay (Leukaemia)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what investigation is being made currently into leukaemia clusters around Dounreay. [7253]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 20 December 1995]: No studies relating solely to the area around Dounreay are currently being carried out but monitoring of the incidence of leukaemia in the area continues. Other relevant studies include the Scottish contribution to the Government-funded childhood cancer case control study. Linked to a parallel study in England and Wales, this is the largest investigation yet undertaken into the causation of childhood leukaemia and will cover all cases of childhood cancer registered in Scotland in the period 1991–94.

Water Rates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what basis the water authorities in Scotland will calculate the revenue which the unitary councils will be expected to collect in water rates. [4444]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 December 1995]: The three new public water sewerage authorities will set charges for their services in charges schemes for their areas. The unitary councils will be required to demand and recover unmeasured domestic water and sewerage charges payable for these services under a charges scheme less any reduction to such charges for which the Secretary of State may provide in exercise of his powers under section 81 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements he is proposing in respect of the liability of the new unitary councils in Scotland to collect water rates. [4442]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 December 1995]: My right hon. Friend will make an order under section 79 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994 requiring local authorities to demand and recover domestic unmeasured water and sewerage charges on behalf of the new water and sewerage authorities.

Oil Spillages

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many oil spillages have been detected around the coast of Scotland in each of the last three years; how many sea birds and mammals were affected; and how many prosecutions were entered against those causing the spillages. [7656]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 9 January 1996]: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate advises that in each of the last three years for which complete figures are available there have been the following number of prosecutions:

1994: Five

As the number of oil spillages detected in Scottish waters is an operational matter for the Coastguard Agency, I have asked my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport to ask the chief executive of that agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 9 January 1996:

The Minister for Transport has been asked by the Secretary of State for Scotland to reply to part of your recent Question about oil spillages around the cost of Scotland and the affect on sea birds and mammals. I have been asked to reply as the query deals with a matter for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive of the Coastguard Agency.

In the three years period 1992 to 1994, there have been 477 reported oil pollution incidents in Scottish waters. Of these, 144 were reported in 1992, 178 were reported in 1993 and 155 were reported in 1994.

In 1992 238 birds were affected by oil around the coast of Scotland. During the BRAER spill in January 1993, some 1500 to 1600 birds of all species were found dead, according to the report by the Ecological Steering Group on the Oil Spill in Shetland (ESGOSS) into the Environmental Impact of the Wreck of the BRAER. The ESGOSS report does not attribute any mammal deaths directly to the effects of the BRAER spill. During 1994 366 birds were affected by oil around the Scottish coastline.

Mr. J. Easson and Sons

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what factors have led to his Department's delay in responding to inquiries made by the hon. Member for Dunfermline, West in respect of Mr. J. Easson and Sons. [7747]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 9 January 1996]: My noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture in Scotland wrote to the hon. Member on 5 January 1996 in relation to her inquiries on behalf of Mr. J. Easson and Sons. This followed lengthy and detailed discussions between the UK Agriculture Departments and the Intervention Board executive agency.

Urban Programme

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the urban programme will continue as a specific grant in 1996–97; and when he will make an announcement about its future. [7761]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The urban programme will continue as a specific grant in 1996–97 although, as normal, grant payments will largely be devoted to reimbursing, in arrears, expenditure already incurred on approved projects. Views on the future of the urban programme as a specific grant were invited in the consultation paper "Devolution of Power to Councils" which was published on 29 December. The consultation period will end on 15 March and my right hon. Friend will announce his decision once he has given careful consideration to the responses received.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mobile phones have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [8039]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table:

Year	Number of mobile phones	Number of suppliers
1989	21	2
1990	29	2
1995	72	3

Nursery Schools

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by new local authority area, the number of nursery schools currently provided by local authorities. [8183]

Mr. Raymond Robertson [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The information is in table 6.1 of the new councils statistical report prepared by the Scottish Office and published by the Government statistical service in May 1995.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from (a) individual farmers and (b) farming organisations about the practical consequences of implementing EC directive 95/29 on livestock transport in sparsely populated areas. [8201]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Of the 91 formal responses from organisations in Scotland to the consultation paper issued in October last year on the implementation of EC directive 95/29, 36 have offered specific comments on livestock transport in sparsely populated areas. These comprise 29 responses from farming organisations and seven from individuals who are, or are associated with, farmers.

BBC Transmitter System

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what grant assistance will be available from local enterprise companies in Scotland following the proposed privatisation of the BBC transmitter system for the construction of boosters. [7998]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 10 January 1996]: It is the responsibility of individual local enterprise companies to make decisions on applications for grant assistance for projects in their area. Any applications involving booster construction would have to be considered against the local enterprise company operating guidelines laid down by Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, the overall resources available and their relative priority against other projects.

Scottish Ambulance Service

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements exist to provide for the public accountability of the Scottish ambulance service for its management policies and practices and to ensure its employees are not subject to victimisation. [7999]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 10 January 1996]: The Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust is a self-governing body with its own board of directors. The trust has freedom to organise its affairs subject to the legal framework within which it operates, the guidelines laid down by the Scottish Office and the contracts negotiated with purchasers.

The trust chairman and his board are accountable to the Secretary of State via the management executive of the NHS in Scotland.

A copy of the Scottish ambulance service's policy and procedure for the resolution of differences between the trust and its employees has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what instructions, and on what dates, were issued to the Central Legal Office by the Scottish ambulance service in respect of the case of Mr. D. Allan Bruce of Kinlochiervie; and what action the Central Legal Office took in response to each instruction. [8285]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 10 January 1996]: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a signed copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in implementing the recommendations made by the efficiency scrutiny of the Scottish Office on sponsored non-departmental public bodies. [9474]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The results of the efficiency scrutiny of my Department's sponsorship of non-departmental public bodies were announced to the House on 19 October 1994, Official Report, columns 285–86. The recommendations included new training and development programmes for staff involved in sponsorship; the provision of more advice and assistance to sponsor staff; and action programmes for putting strategic frameworks into place for each NDPB as appropriate.

I am pleased to announce that the recommendations contained in the scrutiny report have been achieved ahead of target and copies of the implementation report have been placed in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Loss of Benefit

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what protection is afforded to people who lose social security benefits because of a change in legislation. [4096]

Mr. Burt: When there is a change in legislation affecting people already in receipt of a specific social security benefit, the extent to which, if at all, transitional protection arrangements will be required depends on a number of circumstances, including the purpose and nature of the benefit in question, the likely needs of those in receipt of it who may be affected by the change, and what other help is available to meet those needs. Consequently, protection may not be available for every beneficiary against all changes. Where protection is given sometimes it is for rights or concessions awarded to existing claimants, and sometimes for existing amounts of money paid to them. Protection against the effect of a change in legislation can also be offered by means of a lengthy period of introduction of the new rules, or by announcement of the change many months ahead of the date on which it is due to come into effect.

For such changes in the law there are procedures for consultation with the Social Security Advisory Committee—and, where appropriate, with the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council or Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board—and, concerning housing benefit and council tax benefits, with organisations representing the local authorities.

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what provision will be made on the proposed social security legislation to protect claimants who have made their plans on the basis of the benefit they would have received under the existing legislation. [4117]

Mr. Burt: The need for transitional protection is considered in accordance with the individual circumstances of proposed policy changes. In announcing proposals on 29 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made it clear that the proposal to limit housing benefit for some people under 25 living in private rented accommodation will not affect those in receipt of housing benefit prior to January 1996, which is 92 per cent. of the total, unless they change their address or have a break in entitlement of more than four weeks. Also, those who make a new claim between 2 January 1996 and 7 October 1996 will not be affected by the new rules until the date of the first review of their claim after 7 October 1996. The announcement of the proposal to bring the mobility component of disability living allowance into line with similar benefits which are withdrawn during hospital stays also made it clear that those who have been in hospital for 12 months or more, for example, will continue to receive the mobility component at an amount equivalent to the lower rate. Also mobility agreements, for a car or wheelchair, funded by the mobility component of disability living allowance, which are current when a person enters hospital will continue for the full term of the agreement.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the amount of down time recorded for the Child Support Agency's operational accounting system in each months since April 1993. [4077]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. The available information is in the table.

Period	Service availability percentage
3 August 1994–9 August 1994	99.8

The operation accounting system went live on 7 June 1994.

Pensioners (Benefit Take-up)

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the number and proportion of pensioners in the United Kingdom who do not take up (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit to which they are entitled; and what is the estimated value of the unclaimed benefits. [7646]

Mr. Heald: The most recent information is for 1993–94 and applies to Great Britain.

The latest figures for take-up are contained in the "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take Up in 1993/94" which was published on 15 December 1995, copies of which are in the Library.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the mean and median periods of time in weeks that people who have submitted an appeal against the decision by the Benefit Agency to stop their incapacity benefit have to wait before a hearing is held. [7795]

Mr. Burt: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in his Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by him before they are sent; and if he will identify such letters to which amendments by him have been made in 1994–95.

Mr. Burt: Parliamentary questions are passed to the head of an executive agency for reply when the matter is one delegated to him or her under the agency framework document. The relevant Minister sees a copy of the reply before it is sent, but would not normally intervene in operational matters. No record is kept of any amendments suggested by Ministers.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the pension for (a) a couple and (b) an individual in 1979; and what it would currently be if the pension had been uprated in line with (i) inflation and (ii) earnings. [8080]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

	November 1979 £	April 1995 (if increased in line with RPI) £	April 1995 (if increased in line with average earnings) £
Standard rate cat. A RP for a single person	23.30	56.95	77.75
Standard RP for a married couple	37.30	91.15	124.65

1. Calculations are rounded to the nearest 5p at each uprating date.
2. Increases in RPI are calculated using the retail prices index (all items) as supplied by Central Statistical Office.
3. Earnings increases are calculated using the average earnings index (whole economy unadjusted) as published by the Central Statistical Office.

Poverty

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent assessment he has made of the extent of poverty in the United Kingdom. [8082]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: There is no simple or meaningful way to define or measure poverty. Income is not always an accurate guide to living standards, especially among households in the lowest income deciles.

National Insurance

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to change the means of levying national insurance. [7100]

Mr. Heald: None.

Equal Treatment

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each form of institutional discrimination listed by his Department between men and women for social security benefit purposes; what is the approximate number of claimants affected by each different form and the approximate annual cost of removing each form if there were no retrospective effect of removal; and what assessment he has made as to what extent each form is necessarily and objectively to the difference in pensionable age; and if he will make statement. [1080]

Mr. Heald [holding answer 23 November 1995]: The table sets out the different treatment of men and women in the social security system. These either relate to the differences in pensionable age or are otherwise considered to be permitted in law. Estimates of the financial effects of equalisation depend on the basis on which provisions are equalised.

The Pensions Act 1995 introduces further equalisation into the social security system linked to an equal state pension age. The financial implications of this Act are contained in the report by the Government Actuary on the financial provisions of the Bill on the national insurance fund, Cm 2714.

Benefit	Description
Unemployment benefit[1]	The maximum age for receipt is 65 for women, 70 for men. The age at which the benefit rate changes to the retirement pension rate is 60 for women, 65 for men.
Long-term incapacity benefit	The maximum age for receipt is 60 for women, 65 for men.
Short-term incapacity benefit	The maximum age for receipt is 65 for women, 70 for men. The age at which the benefit rate changes to the retirement pension rate is 60 for women, 65 for men.

Transitional invalidity allowance and related age addition to retirement pension[2]	The upper age limit for acquiring entitlement to the lower rate of allowance was 55 for women, 60 for men.
Widow's payment, widowed mother's allowance, widow's pension	Married women are entitled on widowhood where statutory conditions are satisfied. There are no equivalent benefits for men.
Category A retirement pension (own insurance)	The minimum age of entitlement is 60 for women, 65 for men. Women may defer their entitlement in order to receive increments between age 60 and 65; men between 65 and 70. Entitlement to retirement pension is calculated on a working life of 44 years for women, 49 for men.
Category B retirement pension (spouse's contributions	A woman must be aged 60 and over and (i) married to husband who is entitled to category A retirement pension, or (ii) widowed after age 60 and late husband satisfied contribution condition for category A retirement pension, or (iii) widowed before age 60 and in receipt of widow's pension at that age in consequence of husband's death. A man is entitled only where (i) both he and his late wife were over pensionable age when she died and (ii) she satisfied the contribution conditions for category A retirement pension.
Retirement pension—earnings-related additional pension (SERPS) 1986 Act changes to SERPS calculation for people reaching pensionable age from 6 April 1999 affect men born after 5 April 1934 and women born after 5 April 1939
Graduated retirement benefit	The minimum age of entitlement is 60 for women, 65 for men. The amount of graduated contributions paid to obtain one graduated retirement benefit "unit" was £9.00 for women, £7.50 for men.
Reduced earnings allowance[3]	Recipients transfer to retirement allowance at age 60 for women, 65 for men.
Increase of unemployment benefit or short-term incapacity benefit paid at the lower rate in respect of a dependent child. Child dependency increase are available for women from age 60, men from age 65.
Increase of category A retirement pension for adult dependant. A woman claiming an adult dependency increase of retirement pension for a dependent husband has to satisfy the condition that she was entitled to an increase of unemployment benefit or incapacity benefit immediately before claiming her pension. There is no similar condition for a man claiming an increase of retirement pension for his wife.
Child benefit	A wife or mother of the child(ren) has priority of entitlement over a husband or father.
Family credit	In couples cases the claim is made by the woman and any benefit paid to her.
Guardian's allowance	A wife has priority of entitlement over husband.

[1] Jobseeker's allowance will replace unemployment benefit in October 1996. JSA will cease at pension age. As pension ages are aligned under the 1995 Pensions Act, different treatment will be reduced.

[2] Invalidity addition was abolished from 13 April 1995 but continues in payment to former invalidity benefit recipients.

[3] Women aged 60 and over and men aged 65 and over before 10 April 1989 continue to receive a frozen rate of reduced earnings allowance.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of doctors who currently work for Benefits Agency medical services on a part-time basis have undertaken further education on clinical topics in the last year in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Wales and (c) England; and what percentage of this further education was related to mental illness. [6254]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ron Davies, dated 10 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what percentage of Doctors who currently work for Benefits Agency Medical Services (BAMS) on a part-time basis have undertaken further education on clinical topics in the last year in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Wales and (c) England; and what percentage of this further education was related to mental illness.

Information about the further education on clinical topics undertaken by BAMS Doctors is not available.

Fee paid Doctors are contracted on a self-employed basis and are paid hourly for a three and a half hour, half day session. All these Doctors, approved to apply the new medical test for Incapacity Benefit, have received a flexible modular training course during the past year.

Twenty per cent of the modules are related to the assessment of mental health problems and the application of the mental health questionnaire for the medical test for Incapacity Benefit.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of Benefits Agency medical services doctors work for the BAMS (a) full-time and (b) part-time in (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) Wales and (iii) England. [6263]

Mr. Evans: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ron Davies, dated 10 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what percentage of Benefits Agency Medical Services (BAMS) Doctors work for the BAMS (a) full-time and (b) part-time in (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) Wales and (iii) England.

Details requested are outlined below. Both permanent and fixed term appointment Doctors are employed full time by the BAMS. You should know, however, that some Doctors employed on a permanent basis may also work part-time. Fee paid Doctors are contracted on a self-employed basis and are paid hourly for a three and a half hour, half day session.

Percentage

	Permanent/fixed term appointments	Fee paid
United Kingdom	16	84
Wales	18.55	81.45
England	14.80	85.20

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, by region, the total number of doctors employed (a) full-time and (b) part time by the Benefits Agency medical services; how many Benefits Agency medical services doctors in each region are aged (i) 65–70 years and (ii) over 70 years; and what are the terms of their Benefits Agency medical services contract. [6321]

Mr. Evans: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. William Etherington, dated 10 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list, by region, the total number of Doctors employed (a) full-time and (b) part time by the Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS); how many BAMS Doctors in each region are aged (i) 65–70 years and (ii) over 70 years; and what are the terms of their BAMS contract.

Information that is available in the outlined in Appendix A.

Fee paid Doctors are contracted on a self-employed basis and are paid hourly for a three and half hour, half day session.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Family Credit

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the backlog of family credit renewal claims awaiting processing during 1995; what change there has been in them in the last year and for what reasons; and what action is proposed to revise such backlog. [6317]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Nicholson, dated 10 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the backlog of Family Credit (FC) renewal claims awaiting processing during 1995; what change there has been in them in the last year and for what reasons; and what action is proposed to revise such backlog.

At 30 November 1994, there were 34,570 outstanding renewal claims and at 30 November 1995, this had reduced to 33,191. This figure has varied during the year from between 25,589 and 37,168.

When a customer wishes to renew entitlement to FC, a renewal claim is required. Such claims may be submitted up to four weeks prior to the expiry of the previous award. This four week period enables enquiries to be made without the customer suffering a gap in benefit payments.

The FC Unit expect to receive a total of 900,000 renewal claims in the current financial year. The number of renewal claims received does vary throughout the year with two peak renewal periods, March and September. The Secretary of State has set two demanding targets for the clearance of all claims, including renewal claims to FC. These are that 60% of claims be cleared within 13 working days and that 95% be cleared within 42 working days. The FC Unit has achieved these targets throughout the current financial year. At the end of November 1995, the clearance of renewal claims stands at 71.3% cleared within 13 days and 98.5% cleared within 42 days.

Management controls are in place to ensure that a high standard of service is maintained and that renewal claims to FC are decided as quickly as is possible.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of continuing medical education modules undertaken by all Benefits Agency medical services full-time doctors is dedicated to psychiatry and medical illness. [6272]

Mr. Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ron Davies, dated 10 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what proportion of continuing medical education modules undertaken by all benefits Agency Medical Services (BAMS) full-time Doctors is dedicated to psychiatry and medical illness.

Approximately thirty per cent of the modules are devoted to psychiatric evaluation and assessment of effects of mental health problems.

A balance of the modules is devoted to disability awareness and advances in management and evaluation of commonly occurring or complex medical conditions.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Claimant Deaths

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the average length of time that elapses between the death of (a) a benefit claimant and (b) a pension claimant and the notification of the relevant benefit agency. [6269]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jon Owen Jones, dated 10 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what estimate he has made of the average length of time that elapses between the death of (a) a benefit and (b) a pension claimant and the notification of the relevant Benefit Agency (BA).

Statistics on the time that lapses between the death of a customer and the notification to the BA are not kept. Experience shows that in the event of a death, the BA is notified, in the majority of cases, directly by the next of kin, solicitor, executor or nursing home. The death is usually reported direct to the BA within a few days and the computer systems are updated immediately.

Once the relevant computer system has been updated any future payments will be suspended. The date of death is "broadcast" via the Departmental Central Index (DCI) to every other benefit system. This will automatically activate a suspension of future benefit payments, where appropriate, on those benefit systems.

As an additional safeguard, the Registrars pass details of the deaths, reported to them, to the Office of Population Censuses and Survey. The details are then transferred to a tape which is sent to the Contributions Agency. The details from this tape are passed to the DCI which then broadcasts to every benefit computer system. This process takes approximately [illegible] weeks.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Written Answers to Questions

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Central Office of Information

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if all the functions of the Central Office of Information will be sold if it becomes privatised; and if he will make a statement; [8494]

(2) what negotiations are being carried out in respect of privatising the Central Office of Information; and if he will make a statement. [8477]

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Milton Keynes, North-East (Mr. Butler) on 23 November 1995, Official Report, column 235, in which I confirmed that the Central Office of Information will continue as a next steps agency.

Open Government Code

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will provide details of the publicity programme aimed at the general public designed to spread knowledge of the open government code; and how much newspaper advertising has been undertaken. [8558]

Mr. Willetts: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 9 January, Official Report, column 121, setting out details of the publicity programme for the code. Paid newspaper advertising has not been used as part of the programme.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6397]

Mr. Freeman: the table shows costs for the running of the OPS private offices since 1990–91 with an estimate for 1995–96.

Total staff costs	263,919	247,428	393,933	547,917	575,761	475,756
Entertainment	110	329	1,152	1,002	3,373	1,259
Stationery	641	1,774	3,863	2,262	8,386	30,193

Expenditure on the other items in each of the last five years is not collected in the format requested but is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department which was £64,646,000 in 1994–95[1]. Projections for 1995–96 are in line with overall expenditure for next year published in the Public Expenditure Survey statement.

[1] This includes the running costs for the Office of Science and Technology, now transferred to the Department of Trade and Industry.

Ministerial Travel and Accommodation Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. [6416]

Mr. Freeman: The total costs for these items for the Chancellor and the Parliamentary Secretary and the private offices are given in the table.

	1991–92 £	1992–93 £	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 (est.) £
Overseas travel and accommodation (Minister and advisers)	nil	10,432	30,710	17,700	65,000
Car and chauffeuring costs	56,869	122,734	194,460	138,936	114,561
Ministerial security costs	nil	nil	nil	nil	nil
Domestic travel and accommodation (Minister and advisers)	48	17,473	9,898	7,210	9,100

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what legal costs arising from the Scott inquiry have been incurred by his Department on behalf of Ministers and ex-Ministers; and if he will name the individuals concerned; [8757]

(2) what legal costs arising from the Scott inquiry have been incurred by the Department on behalf of current and past (a) civil servants and (b) advisers and secondees. [8744]

Mr. Freeman: No legal costs have been incurred by my Department on behalf of Ministers, ex-Ministers, civil servants, former civil servants or other advisors or secondees of my Department in connection with the Scott inquiry. The cost of any advice in connection with the Scott inquiry given by Government lawyers as part of their normal duties cannot be quantified.

Photocopiers

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 121, what factors led his Department to accept photocopiers on variable contracts of three, four and five years over and above the leasing costs; and what is the minimum contractual cost of using and maintaining (a) the 18 photocopiers on three-year contracts, (b) the three photocopiers on four-year contracts and (c) the four photocopiers on five-year contracts. [8920]

Mr. Willetts: The factors taken into account when deciding the length of contract include the size of the machine, the projected copy volumes and the need for flexibility in the light of changing circumstances.

The minimum total cost of leasing (a) the 18 photocopiers on three-year contracts is £36,806 per annum, (b) that of the three photocopiers on four-year contracts is £15,969 per annum and (c) that of the four photocopiers on five-year contracts is £3,315 per annum.

Cabinet Committees

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many times (a) the Ministerial Committee on the Environment, (b) the Ministerial Committee on Competitiveness and (c) the Ministerial Committee on Economic and Domestic Policy have met since 1 January 1995; [8670]

(2) how many papers have been placed before the Cabinet between 1 July and 31 December 1995; how many of these papers were accompanied by a statement of the likely environmental implications; and for each paper which had environmental implications statements which Government Department took the lead in preparing the paper. [8671]

The Deputy Prime Minister: "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" makes clear that papers or other information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet or Cabinet Committees are not normally made public, in order to protect the principle of collective responsibility. It also makes clear that the papers for the Cabinet and Cabinet Committees should, wherever appropriate, cover any significant costs or benefits to the environment.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many mobile telephones were supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each year how many suppliers were involved. [9125]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, Official Report, 9 January, column 121.

HEALTH

Breast Cancer

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will launch a publicity campaign to raise the awareness of breast cancer in older women, with particular reference to breast screen tests; and if he will make a statement. [8428]

Mr. Horam: The national breast screening programme, with Age Concern, has launched an educational drive to inform women aged 65 and over of the importance of continued breast awareness and about their right to request breast screening every three years.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those health authorities who currently refuse to breast screen women aged 65 years and over. [8427]

Mr. Horam: There are no such authorities.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will defer all further hospital closures, including those pending until alternative arrangements have been put in place for patient care with particular reference to elderly patients. [9154]

Mr. Horam: No. Decisions on hospital closures are primarily for local health authorities, and are referred to Ministers only where the community health council contests the proposed closure.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts have been required by him to pay to central funds all or part of their reserve because they have had an excessive cash surplus; and what amounts were involved. [8731]

Mr. Horam: None.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts have borrowed on an unguaranteed basis; and to what level in each year since their inception. [8713]

Mr. Horam: It is the responsibility of individual national health service trusts to secure best value for money from their borrowing. Information on trust borrowing on an unguaranteed basis is not available centrally.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received from experiments undertaken on mice as to the cross-species movement of BSE and the possible barrier to the harming of human beings by infected poisons from animals; and if he will make a statement. [8695]

Mr. Horam: We are aware of the research currently being conducted by Professor John Collinge to investigate whether bovine spongiform encephalopathy, BSE, can be transmitted to mice which have been genetically engineered to carry the human prion protein. Recently published interim results show that, after inoculation with BSE infected material, such mice have failed to develop spongiform encephalopathy within the time taken by similar mice following inoculation with Creuzfeldt-Jakob disease infected material. While this is encouraging, considerable further research is need before any firm conclusions can be drawn about the theoretical risk of BSE transmission to humans.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the allocations made to individual trusts to pursue private finance initiative bids. [9033]

Mr. Horam: National health service trusts develop outline business cases for capital investment at their own expense. Where an outline business case is approved, regional offices have discretion to allocate funds for development of the full business case for the investment, a process which includes exploring the potential for a private finance solution. The capital investment manual, copies of which are available in the Library, suggests a budget of around 1 per cent. of the estimated value of the capital investment for the preparation of the outline and full business cases, including any costs incurred in testing for private finance, as well as other costs, such as design work. Actual figures on amounts allocated to develop full business cases are not available centrally.

Health Authorities

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health authorities in England in order of population. [8877]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table. The table relates to current 1995–1996 district health—authority boundaries and is based upon the resident population estimates for mid-1994, the latest available.

NHS Trusts (Borrowing)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts have been given permission by the Secretary of State to borrow in currencies other than sterling, indicating the amount and the currency concerned. [8712]

Mr. Horam: No trust has been given permission by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to borrow in currencies other than sterling.

Discharged Mental Health Patients

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department maintains on (a) suicides and (b) homicides committed by (i) current and (ii) discharged mental health patients. [9101]

Mr. Bowis: Information on homicides and suicides by current and recently discharged mental health patients is collected by the confidential inquiry into homicides and suicides by mentally ill people. The inquiry is funded by, but independent of, the Department of Health.

Carers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what current instructions he has issued to local authorities on the effects of means testing of those patients in need of long-term care on caring spouses and family; and if he will make a statement. [9118]

Mr. Bowis: The most recent guidance to local authorities was issued in December in circular LAC(95)21, and an amendment to the charging for residential accommodation guide was issued at the same time, advising local authorities that they should consider use of their discretion where a married resident in residential accommodation is the main recipient of a couple's income at the point when a financial assessment is made, and also advises what factors and circumstances should be taken into account. Copies of the circular and the charging for residential accommodation guide are available in the Library. The Government intend to change the regulations with effect from April 1996 so that local authorities will be required to disregard half of the occupational pension of a resident whose spouse remains at home.

Residential and Nursing Homes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will conduct a survey for publication of the practice of all local authorities to establish whether they are exercising the discretion to disregard spouses of which they were reminded in his Department's circular LAC(94)1 in January 1994, paragraph 2.2 regarding charges for residential or nursing home accommodation; if he will require an authority failing to exercise this discretion in favour of spouses to provide an explanation; and if he will make a statement. [9121]

Mr. Bowis: We have no plans to do so. It is for local authorities to decide how and to what extent they exercise their discretion. Regulations will however, shortly be laid before Parliament to require local authorities to disregard from the means test half of the occupational pension of a resident whose spouse remains at home.

Single-sex Wards

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to improve the provision of single-sex accommodation by NHS trusts. [7531]

Mr. Horam: It is for health authorities and trusts to decide how best to use the accommodation available to them.

Female NHS Managers

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of non-clinical managers in the NHS earning over £30,000 per year were women for each year since 1991; [7532]

(2) how many chief executives of hospital trusts were women in each year since 1991. [7534]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures his Department is taking to improve the representation of women in the higher levels of management in the NHS. [7533]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health, on behalf of the national health service, is a founder member of opportunity 2000—the business-led campaign to improve the representation of women at the top of organisations.

The NHS women's unit was established in October 1991 to take forward work on implementing Opportunity 2000 and eight goals were issued to the service for achievement by 31 December 1994, including a goal to increase the proportion of women in general management posts from 18 per cent. in 1991 to 30 per cent. in 1994.

As part of the policy review in March 1995, a special survey was undertaken which showed that women had been appointed to 38 per cent.—83 out of 214—of vacant chief executive general manager posts filled in the three years to 31 December 1994, with women now occupying 28 per cent. of posts at this level.

The NHS executive was commended on its outstanding achievement at the first Opportunity 2000 awards ceremony held in October 1995. Building on this success, a new set of goals was issued to the service for achievement by 30 September 1998 including a goal to increase the percentage of women in top management posts to 35 per cent.

Cervical Cytology

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of GP practices met higher rate targets for cervical cytology services by family health services authority for each year since 1990. [7535]

Mr. Malone: Target information is collected at general practitioner, not practice, level. The percentage of unrestricted principles meeting both the lower and the higher targets for April 1990 to April 1994 will be placed in the Library.

Abortion

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the district health authorities not currently purchasing abortion services; and if he will make a statement. [7536]

Mr. Horam: Health authorities are responsible for securing services to meet the health needs of their population. Information about individual health authority plans is not available centrally.

Mixed-sex Wards

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how his Department is monitoring the performance of NHS trusts on meeting the patients charter standards on mixed-sex wards; [7537]

(2) how many NHS trusts are currently meeting the patients charter standard on mixed-sex wards. [7538]

Mr. Horam: It is for health authorities to monitor the performance of those hospitals with which they place contracts. Their annual patients charter reports should include information on hospitals' performance against the standards. In addition, the national health service executive has commissioned a survey in two regions on policies relating to mixed-sex wards and the suitability of wards for mixed-sex use. The results of that survey will be available shortly.

Derriford Hospital (Correspondence)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter dated 21 August from the consultant in pain management at Derriford hospital, Plymouth; and what factors have prevented him from replying hitherto. [8186]

Mr. Horam: Officials have now replied to the inquiry. I regret the delay which occurred; this was due to an oversight.

Care Programme Approach

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, column 945, which (a) health authorities and (b) trusts have (i) implemented and (ii) not implemented the care programme approach. [9185]

Mr. Bowis: The national health service executive has requested reports on the progress made towards fully implementing the care programme approach.

NHS (Unnecessary Treatments)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent reports he has received alleging (a) unnecessary and (b) ineffective treatments provided by the national health service; what proposals he has to remedy such defects; and if he will make a statement. [8562]

Mr. Horam: A great deal of scientific evidence now exists about the effectiveness of health services. Improving the effectiveness of services is a priority for the national health service.

On 10 January, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the publication of "Promoting Clinical Effectiveness". The booklet has been developed to support the work of all those involved in identifying and reviewing the effectiveness of clinical services. It explains where to get information on effectiveness, how this information can be used to improve services locally and how the results of change can be monitored. The NHS executive will hold health authorities to account for increasing their investment in healthcare which is now known to be more effective. Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Blood Supplies

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has received on the levels of blood held at the blood transfusion centres; and what changes have taken place during the last six months of 1995 at each of these centres. [8563]

Mr. Horam: Blood stocks at blood centres are quite low at present, but this is often the case at this time of year because of seasonal and other fluctuations in supply and demand. Stocks at blood centres are not the whole picture. Hospitals also have their own blood banks, drawing supplies from the national blood service blood banks.

The figures over the last six months for individual centres are:

	12 July	16 September	13 September	11 October	15 November	13 December
Brentwood	752	1,796	1,296	1,079	1,108	1,077
Cambridge	658	2,169	1,052	591	620	527
Colindale	1,390	1,620	1,399	1,216	1,024	952
Tooting	1,411	1,885	2,091	1,536	1,786	1,497
Birmingham	1,622	3,275	3,467	2,139	2,729	[illegible]
Bristol	1,343	2,033	1,695	1,295	1,565	[illegible]
Oxford	748	1,973	1,562	1,307	1,175	727

	12 July	16 September	13 September	11 October	15 November	13 December
Wessex	804	1,966	1,923	1,761	1,849	1,061
Lancaster	421	624	646	568	329	358
Leeds	1,866	2,596	2,281	2,408	1,168	920
Liverpool	1,604	2,516	2,139	2,372	1,341	954
Manchester	751	1,412	601	742	825	527
Newcastle	965	1,920	1,667	1,456	1,045	1,044
Trent	950	2,165	1,535	1,318	1,213	1,147
Totals	15,485	27,950	23,354	19,788	17,777	12,934

These figures are based on the position on the middle Wednesday of each month. There have been no organisational changes at any of the blood centres during this period. The National Blood Authority arranges for supplies to be moved between centres as necessary, so assistance can be given if there are particular problems in any area.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) guidelines and (b) other advice has been issued to (i) NHS bodies and (ii) other organisations regarding the use of the private finance initiative. [9082]

Mr. Horam: Current guidelines and advice on the private finance initiative issued by the national health service executive are as follows:

"The Capital Investment Manual" (HMSO 1994),

"Private Finance and Capital Investment Projects", (HSG(95)15),

"Information Management and Technology (IM&T) Procurement and Private Finance" (HSG(95)48).

Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

It is not part of our responsibility to issue guidelines or advice on private finance to other organisations. Guidelines issued by the Treasury on private finance matters across the public service, including the NHS, is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which capital projects are currently being considered under the private finance initiative; and what is the cost of each project. [9055]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) gave him on 28 November 1995, Official Report, column 608.

Since that reply, two further schemes with a capital value more than £1 million have been approved by the national health service executive under the private finance initiative, as follows:

South Buckinghamshire NHS trust; new hospital developments at High Wycombe and Amersham at a capital value of £35 million

Havering Hospitals NHS trust; renewal and maintenance of engineering plant and equipment through a technical service programme. Capital value £2.1 million.

Elective Surgery

Mr. Austin Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the number of cancellations of elective surgical admissions by NHS trusts in Greater London in (a) October, (b) November and (c) December; and if he will make a statement; [9163]

(2) how many cancellations of elective non-urgent surgical admissions were made by the Greenwich Healthcare NHS trusts (a) over the weekend of 5 January and (b) on 8 January; and if he will make a statement. [9162]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

In Vitro Fertilisation

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list those health commissions which have decided that in vitro fertilisation services will (a) be routinely purchased and (b) not be purchased; and if he will make a statement; [8580]

(2) if he will make it his policy to ensure that in vitro fertilisation services are available from every health commission; and if he will make a statement. [8581]

Mr. Horam: Information about individual health authority plans is not held centrally.

Decisions about provision, priority and resources for infertility services, including in vitro fertilisation treatment are made by individual health authorities, who are in the best position to determine priorities in the light of local needs and circumstances. Decisions must be made on the basis of sound evidence.

Medical Locums

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 November 1995 on national health service staff, Official Report, column 614, if he will provide details of medical locums by specialty. [8652]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 9 January Official Report, column 74.

"NHS Magazine"

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost so far of producing and distributing "NHS Magazine"; how much has been raised from advertising; and if he will make a statement. [8921]

Mr. Horam: The national health service executive is reducing the volume of publications issued and targeting printed communications more precisely to ensure resources are used to best effect. As a result of a review of publications, the executive ceased production of six NHS newsletters, making an estimated annual saving of £227,000. The executive is also seeking a more cost-effective approach, supporting the costs of the "NHS Magazine" with advertising.

"NHS Magazine" acts as a vehicle for sharing best practice within the NHS. It also carries the most up to date quarterly data about NHS performance, helping to ensure that the service remains properly accountable to those it serves.

Production costs/gross revenues broken down by issue are:

	Issue 1 £	Issue 2 £	Issue 3 £
Production (Editorial/photography/ design/reproduction, print)	41,886	43,914	50,486
Advertising revenue	10,900	16,850	30,500

Distribution costs for the first three issues were £17,664.

Emergency Admissions (London)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made on the impact of other hospital care of the number of emergency medical admissions to London hospitals during the current winter; and if he will make a statement. [9165]

Mr. Horam: Health authorities and national health service trusts are responsible for ensuring that local healthcare needs are met.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency medical admissions were made by each London NHS trust in each month during the period October 1994 to January 1996. [9200]

Mr. Horam: Information on method of admission by region of treatment is published in "Hospital Episode Statistics—Volume 1", copies of which are available in the Library. The latest year for which information is available is 1993–94.

Edgware General Hospital

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his policy that no changes will be made in relation to the closure of the accident and emergency department of Edgware general hospital until the assurances given by his predecessor in the debate on 10 May 1995, Official Report, columns 784–85, have been fully implemented. [8585]

Mr. Malone: Yes.

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make an official visit to Edgware general hospital. [8578]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Acute Bed Closures (London)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute beds closed in each London NHS trust during the period 1993 to 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9164]

Mr. Horam: The information available centrally provides details of the average daily number of available beds in each national health service trust for 1993–94 and 1994–95. This information is published annually in Bed availability for England, copies of which are available in the Library. Organisational changes mean that the data for each trust may not be strictly comparable over time.

Working Lunches

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent in his Department and its associated agencies on working lunches in the year 1995–96 to date; and what is the projected amount for the full year. [9170]

Mr. Horam: The amount of expenditure on working lunches to the end of December this financial year is:

Department	182,889
Agencies	333
Total	183,222

It is expected that hospitality expenditure for the Department will continue at the current rate for the remainder of the year. The agencies are projecting total expenditure for the year of the order of £380.

Income Support

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidelines for hospitals for reimbursement of travel costs for those in receipt of income support; if the guidelines recognise the UB40 as a proof of receipt of income support; what proof of being in receipt of income support is required for those not paid by an order book; and what was the last occasion on which the guidelines were amended. [9530]

Mr. Horam: The guidelines for reimbursement of the cost of travel to hospital do not recognise form UB40 as proof of receipt of income support because not everybody who is issued with that form is in receipt of that benefit For those who are not paid income support by an order book, one of forms B3, C3, FF260 or FF260A covering the day they attend the hospital, can be presented as proof of eligibility.

The guidelines were last amended in October 1994 with a reminder being sent out in May 1995. The list of documents which can be produced as proof of eligibility was reviewed in 1995 and set out in leaflet H11 which was effective from April 1995.

Copies of the guidelines and of leaflet H11 have been placed in the Library.

Waiting List Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the level of waiting list initiative funding and how many patients have been treated (a) by region and (b) by district and in each year since its inception. [9513]

Mr. Horam: A national waiting time fund existed from 1987–88 to 1993–94. Distribution was to regional health authorities and details of the allocations made are shown in the table. Information on allocations to districts is not available centrally.

The numbers of patients treated under waiting list initiatives are not separately identified. From September 1987 to September 1995 the number of patients waiting more than 12 months has reduced from 209,440 to 27,900 and the number waiting more that two years has fallen from 90,470 to nil.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information his Department holds on the proportion of waiting list initiative funding that has been spent in the private sector; [9538]

(2) what monitoring is undertaken of clinical standards for the private sector in respect of patients being treated under the waiting list initiative. [9517]

Mr. Horam: Information on the proportion of waiting list initiative funding spent in the private sector is not available centrally. Monitoring of the standard of care, wherever it is provided, is a matter for the relevant purchaser.

Environmental Pollution Report

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates and on what matters, in connection with the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Environment", he has made representations to the Secretary of State for Transport. [9095]

Mr. Horam: There have been many contacts between my Department and the Department of Transport concerning the Royal Commission report since its publication in October 1994, including several discussions at both official and ministerial level.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

New Facilities

32. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what new facilities are planned to be available after the next general election. [7473]

Mr. Beith: The major new facilities planned are the phase II new parliamentary building, which is due to open in 1999, and a visitors' centre in Westminster hall. In addition major improvements to existing facilities are planned including the improvement of access by disabled people, the refurbishment of the Refreshment Department and the installation of the parliamentary data and video network.

HMSO Privatisation

38. Mr. Miller: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what assessment the Commission has made of the effect of services to hon. and right hon. Members of the proposed privatisation of HMSO; and if he will make a statement. [7480]

Mr. Beith: The Commission's views are set out in the letter from the Speaker to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which was published in Hansard on 11 December, columns 455–57. That letter laid down a number of safeguards which the Commission consider necessary to protect the interests of the House in the event of HMSO being privatised. The Commission will continue to take a close interest in the progress of preparatory work for privatisation. In particular we will want to be satisfied that the safeguards are adequately secured by the contract to be drawn up between the House and a privatised Stationery Office.

Legionnaire's Disease

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if he will make a statement on the risk of legionnaire's disease in the parliamentary estate. [7485]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I have been asked to reply.

The water systems throughout the parliamentary estate are regularly tested for the legionnella bacterium as part of routine maintenance work. This work also includes sterilisation of cooling towers and shower heads, and keeping the domestic hot water temperatures above the tolerance of the bacterium. The results of recent routine tests showed slightly raised levels which have been dealt with by pasteurisation and chemical sterilisation. It is also proposed to make minor changes to plumbing in remote areas to help maintain safe water temperatures.

Refreshment Facilities

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what plans he has to upgrade refreshment facilities for large groups of visitors to the House. [7475]

Sir Colin Shepherd: On 12 July 1994, the House approved the first report of Session 1992–93 from the Catering Committee, "Refreshment provision for line of route visitors". One recommendation was that the area currently occupied by the Westminster hall cafeteria should be converted to a visitor centre, which would provide light refreshments for the public, but that this should only take place once a suitable alternative has been found for the present lunchtime users.

Although initial discussions between officials have been held regarding the proposed nature of a visitor centre, I do have to advise the hon. Member that some 500 people, mainly staff, have lunch daily in the Westminster hall cafeteria; the other outlets currently available to staff would not be able to accommodate the extra customers if the Westminster hall cafeteria was closed before the opening of the new cafeteria in the phase II parliamentary building, which I understand, will not be until 1999. It is therefore highly unlikely that a visitor centre could be open before then.

Privileges Committee

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Lord President of the Council what contact, direct or indirect, he has had with the chairman of the Press Complaints Commission in regard to the findings of the Privileges Committee in its first report for the session 1994–95 as they affect the Sunday Times and the Committee's call for further examination by the commission of the complaint made against that newspaper; what developments there have been since the Privileges Committee's findings were published; and if he will make a statement. [8593]

Mr. Newton: At his request, I met my right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Wakeham, chairman of the Press Complaints Commission, on Monday 20 November 1995 to discuss progress on this matter. Lord Wakeham has recently written to me, as Chairman of the Committee of Privileges, reporting on the position. I have arranged for copies of his letter to be placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Playing Fields

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she will be in a position to consult on the proposal contained in the Government's policy statement "Sport: Raising the Game" that the Sports Council should be given the status of a statutory consultee on planning proposals affecting playing fields. [9684]

Mr. Sproat: The Government are seriously concerned at the loss of playing fields. We attach high priority to ensuring that people have access to a range of high quality sports facilities. There is a clear need to improve consultation between the Sports Council and local planning authorities whenever proposals for the development of playing fields arise. We are, therefore, issuing today, jointly with the Department of the Environment, a consultation paper on the proposal that the Sports Council should become a statutory consultee on planning proposals affecting all playing fields, not only those used by schools.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EU Energy Council

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Energy Council meeting on 20 December 1995. [8692]

Mr. Eggar: The Council considered several issues and received reports on matters of interest. I represented the United Kingdom. Progress was made in a number of areas. In particular, political agreement was reached on a proposed directive on energy efficiency standards for fridges and freezers, the aim of which is to establish minimum standards and thus help to limited CO^2 emissions. The directive provides for a 15 per cent. reduction in electricity consumption for all new models over three years.

The Council also adopted a common position on the Commission's proposed regulation on the registration of crude oil imports.

It was not possible to reach a common position on the electricity liberalisation proposal. Ministers agreed however that there had been a convergence of positions during the Spanish presidency and that work should be continued during the Italian presidency with a view to possible agreement early in 1996.

The Council considered a Commission proposal for the repeal and/or simplification of several EU legislative measures in the energy efficiency, oil and gas sub-sectors. In particular, political agreement was reached on a Commission proposal to simplify regulation 1056/72 on the notification of investments.

Also, the Council received presentations/reports from the Commission on a number of items. These included a presentation of its energy policy White Paper; a report on gas supply and prospects to 2020; and its proposal for a second SAVE programme, aimed at encouraging best use of energy efficiency technology.

The presidency gave a progress report on informal contacts with the European Parliament on Energy TENs prior to the convening of the conciliation committee. Progress reports were also given on the energy charter treaty, SYNERGY and on the energy aspects of the Barcelona Euro-Med conference.

EU Industry Council

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Industry Council held on 20 December 1995. [8691]

Mr. Eggar: The meeting examined further a Commission proposal to authorise the payment of exceptional state aid for Irish Steel under article 95 of the ECSC treaty. This matter was previously discussed by the Council on 7 November 1995, when the Government declined to agree the proposal in view of concerns about possible adverse effects on the United Kingdom steel industry.

Bilateral discussions between the UK and Ireland immediately prior to the 20 December Council resulted in agreement on a revised aid package subject, at the insistence of the UK, to a number of strict conditions. These include, over five years, caps on Irish Steel's overall production, limits on sale of hot rolled products into the EU—under 300kt in the first year—and an undertaking that the company will not, over the same period, extend its current range of finished products. Overall the conditions are stricter than those attached to the previous article 95 decisions of December 1993. The Government believe that these improvements over the original Commission proposal meet the objective of ensuring that jobs in Ireland are not preserved at the expense of jobs in the UK.

The amended proposals was accepted unanimously by member states. Formal approval will take place at a future Council.

Ice Cream

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he has received a report from the Director General of Fair Trading in relation to the provision of evidence by Bird's Eye Wall's to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission investigation into the supply of ice cream; what advice the director general of Fair Trading has given him in respect of such evidence; when he expects to take further action; and what action he proposes to take to ensure that accurate information is available to the director general. [9053]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have received a confidential report from the Director General of Fair Trading on this matter. It is not the practice of the Department to comment publicly on such reports. Any decisions which need to be taken will be announced in due course.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total number of industrial tribunals held in each of the last five years in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (b) the Glasgow area; and in what percentage of cases the appellant was successful. [9036]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information requested is as follows:

	Total number of cases determined at hearing	Percentage of successful cases
1990–91
England	9,118	50
Wales[1]	630	44
Scotland	1,682	42

Iraq (Military Equipment)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what inquiries he has made into the issue by the Export Credits Guarantee Department of financial guarantees to United Kingdom financial institutions in relation to trade with Iraq which may have breached the Government's guidelines on the export of military and related equipment; and what action, if any, has been taken as a result; [7801]

(2) if he will estimate the amount paid by the Export Credits Guarantee Department to the Midland bank since 1980 in respect of trade with Iraq by (a) Astra Holdings, (b) British Aerospace, (c) Royal Ordnance, (d) Vickers, (e) Racal (f) Plessey and (g) Thorn EMI; what assessment he has made of whether the relevant guarantees related to trade in breach of the Government's guidelines on the export to Iraq of military and related equipment; what action he has taken; and if he will make a statement; [7803]

(3) if he will estimate the amount claimed by United Kingdom clearing banks since 1980 in respect of Export Credits Guarantee Department guarantees given in relation to trade with Iraq; what proportion of this sum he estimates was claimed in relation to trade in breach of the Government's guidelines on the export to Iraq of military and related equipment; and if he will make a statement. [7804]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 11 January 1996]: The consistency of ECGD support for certain export contracts with Government guidelines on trade for Iraq at the times is a matter which Sir Richard Scott may cover in his forthcoming report, on which I cannot comment at this stage. However, it has always been a condition of ECGD support that exporters obtain the requisite export licences.

Amounts paid by ECGD to Midland bank since 1980 under guaranteed lines of credits extended to Iraq included sums relating to contracts undertaken by Racal and by Thorn EMI, but not in relation to any of the other companies named. The total principal value of claims paid by ECGD in respect of these contracts was approximately £22 million.

It has been the practice of successive Governments not to disclose the details of individual contracts without the agreement of the parties concerned.

The total of claims paid under ECGD guarantees in relation to trade with Iraq was £683 million as at 31 December 1995. Of this, £578 million was paid to banks under buyer credit and line of credit facilities; the balance having been paid to banks under buyer credit and line of credit facilities; the balance having been paid directly to exporters under short-term or supplier credit facilities. As against the figure of £578 million, recoveries of £72 million have been made, bringing the total outstanding unrecovered claims for buyer credit facilities to £506 million. A breakdown of the amounts claimed as between United Kingdom clearing banks and other banks, or of the amounts held by individual banks for their own account where loans have been syndicated, is not readily available.

Huw Evans

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his letter to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West of 29 December, if he will give his current estimate of the length of time to be taken by the Employment Agency's standards office in Birmingham for its investigation into Allied Medicare Services and the employment of Huw Evans as a temporary auxiliary nurse in south Wales hospitals. [9183]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The investigation is under way, but it is too early to say when it will be completed. I shall write to the hon. Member by the end of the month to let him know progress.

Electromagnetic Compatibility Directive

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received in respect of the simplification of United Kingdom regulations to enforce the EC electromagnetic compatibility directive, particularly regarding the impact of the regulations on smaller firms; and if he will make a statement. [9461]

Mr. Page: The electromagnetic compatibility directive 89/336/EEC was implemented by the Electromagnetic Compatibility Regulations, SI 1992 No. 2372, which came fully into force on 1 January 1996. Under the regulations all apparatus marketed in the United Kingdom, including imports, must satisfy the requirements of the directive and carry CE marking. The main requirements are that apparatus should not cause excessive electromagnetic interference or be unduly affected by it.

There are three ways of demonstrating compliance: self-certification to the relevant European standard; preparation of a technical file assessed by a competent body; and type examination. Testing is not mandatory except for apparatus designed for the transmission of radiocommunications.

No representations have been received concerning simplification of the regulations but the Department continues to receive requests for advice on how to comply. The Government have provided extensive advice in the period up to January 1996 and have established regional EMC clubs. Technical telephone helplines, funded by DTI, are also currently available.

Clothing (Labelling)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to ensure that clothes retailed in the United Kingdom which carry "Made in the UK" labels are manufactured in the United Kingdom. [9108]

Mr. John M. Taylor: It is an offence under the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 to supply or offer for sale any goods, including clothing, with a false or misleading indication of their origin.

Departmental Buildings

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of the buildings constructed for his Department in each year since 1979. [7547]

Mr. Lang: The cost of buildings constructed for the DTI are set out in the table. Similar information is not readily available for the functions transferred to the Department under the Machinery of Government changes earlier this financial year.

Financial Year	£ million
1979–80 to 1983–84	nil
1984–85	9
1985–86	9
1986–87	12.3

1989–90	9.1
1990–91	12.3
1991–92	9.1
1992–93 to date	nil

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many mobile telephones have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [9131]

Mr. Lang: Central records are not kept of procurements of mobile telephones which are now procured locally. However it is estimated that, excluding next steps agencies, there are currently in the region of 800 mobile telephones in use in my Department which have come from a variety of suppliers.

Environmental Pollution Report

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what dates and on what matters in connection with the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Environment", he has made representations to the Secretary of State for Transport. [9100]

Mr. Page: There have been many contacts between my Department and the Department of Transport concerning the royal commission report since its publication in October 1994, including several discussions at both official and ministerial level.

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in his Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by him before they are sent; and if he will identify any such letters to which amendments by him have been made in 1994–95. [7826]

Mr. Lang: Parliamentary questions are passed to the head of an executive agency for reply when the matter is one delegated to him under the agency framework document. The relevant Minister may see a copy of the reply before it is sent, but would not normally intervene in operational matters. I am not aware of any recent replies that have been amended.

Business Start-up Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many grants representing what total sums and with what average value were awarded under the business start-up scheme in each region of Britain in each year of the scheme's existence. [7583]

Mr. Paice: I have been asked to reply.

The precise information requested is not available. Starts by region are available for 1994–95 and are given in table 1. Total expenditure and number of starts in England for each year of the programme are given in table 2. In 1994–95 the scheme was absorbed with the single regeneration budget.

Table 1: Business Start-up Scheme: Starts by English Region 1994–95

Region	Starts

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid-for-trade Provision

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the 10 companies which have been leading indirect beneficiaries of aid-for-trade provision spending since the scheme's inception; and what percentage of total aid-for-trade provision spending each has attracted. [8236]

Mr. Hanley: The 10 companies which have won the most ATP supported business as prime contractors since the scheme's inception in 1978 are:

Company	ATP allocation (£ million)	Percentage of ATP total
Trafalgar House (including Davy and John Brown Engineering)	164.27	11.91
GEC	154.00	11.17
Balfour Beatty	105.85	7.68
Rolls Royce (including NEI)	68.82	4.99
Biwater	61.59	4.47
AMEC	58.70	4.25
Foster Wheeler	53.85	3.90
Snamprogetti UK	47.18	3.42
Siemens Plessey	43.04	3.12
Philips UK	34.11	2.47
Total	791.41	57.38
ATP total allocated[1]	1,379.21	—

[1] Due to rounding the totals may not balance. (The Balfour Beatty figure includes £24.37 million spend in respect of the Pergau hydro electric project before 1994–95. This project is no longer being financed by the aid and trade provision.

It is not possible to provide figures for the amount of business retained by the prime contractor as opposed to the amount handled by subcontractors. It should however be noted that the extent of subcontracting is normally considerable.

General Electric Company

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total value of contracts awarded to GEC by the Overseas Development Administration in each year since 1990. [8237]

Mr. Hanley: The only relevant contracts awarded since 1990 are two contracts, one to the value of £450,000 awarded in 1991, and a second worth £494,974 in 1992 to separate companies owned jointly by GEC and Alcatel Alsthom of France.

The ODA has financed several contracts between GEC or its subsidiary companies and overseas clients. Since 1990, we have supported a number of such contracts, including in 1993 and 1994 grants to finance two power projects in India totalling £81.8 million and in 1995 a grant of £15.516 million for a power project in Indonesia.

Non-governmental Organisations

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the amount of grants to NGOs from the ODA and (b) the amount of UK aid money disbursed through NGOs in the last year for which figures are available. [8946]

Mr. Hanley: All expenditure from the ODA to non-governmental organisations, NGOs, is provided on a grant basis. The sum of all grants for 1994–95 made by the Overseas Development Administration to United Kingdom NGOs for work in developing countries was £173,124,136, as detailed in the table. The comparable figure in 1992–93 was £141,791,127, in 1993–94 it was £148,610,155.

In addition, we made grants to United Kingdom NGOs for work in eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union—in 1994–95 amounting to £11,989,655. The comparable figure in 1992–93 was £5,634,899; in 1993–94 it was £9,839,600.

United Kingdom NGOs also draw substantially on European Community aid programmes to which we contribute.

The table provides details of all ODA grants in 1994–95.

Development Aid

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much development aid is spent on (a) a multilateral basis and (b) a bilateral basis; and what are the most recent projections for the allocation between bilateral and multilateral between 1995–96 and 1998–99. [9102]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for York (Mr. Bayley) on 10 January, Official Report column 223–24.

Multilateral Institutions

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those multilateral institutions with which Her Majesty's Government are in financial arrears. [8947]

Mr. Hanley: The UK is not in financial arrears to any of the multilateral development institutions of which it is a member.

Bilateral Aid

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of bilateral aid has been fully tied to the purchase of goods and services from the United Kingdom since 1990–91. [8872]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply I gave on 14 December 1995, Official Report, column 751.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requirements are made of NGOs to evaluate their programmes when receiving United Kingdom official aid. [8870]

Mr. Hanley: The Overseas Development Administration's joint funding scheme, JFS, is the principal channel of United Kingdom official aid for the development activities of UK NGOs.

NGOs in receipt of JFS support are required to undertake a degree of evaluation on all of their programmes. This takes the form of annual reports of progress, often supplemented by separate studies to evaluate the impact of their work.

Rwanda and Burundi

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to increase assistance to (a) Rwanda and (b) Burundi. [9180]

Mr. Hanley: Since October 1993, Britain has committed £93 million and £2.6 million in bilateral emergency and rehabilitation assistance to Rwanda, including Rwandan refugees in neighbouring countries, and Burundi respectively. Future aid levels will reflect need, the capacity of NGOs and UN agencies to deliver assistance to those most at risk, and the absorptive capacity of the relevant Governments.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Preparation of Public Bills

41. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make a statement on the use of Parliamentary Counsel and private draftsmen and women in the preparation of Public Bills. [7483]

Mr. Newton: The Government and the House are, in my view, well served by Parliamentary Counsel in the preparation of legislation. As an experiment, to test the feasibility and cost-effectiveness of an alternative approach, my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has employed private sector lawyers to draft parts of the Finance Bill currently before the House.

Prime Minister's Question Time

43. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Lord President of the Council what representations he has received regarding the length and format of Prime Minister's Question Time. [7486]

Mr. Newton: The Procedure Committee has produced a report on Prime Minister's questions which my right hon. Friend and I are studying.

Railtrack Privatisation

44. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he intends to bring forward proposals for legislation about the privatisation of Railtrack. [7487]

Mr. Newton: No further legislation is needed to complete the privatisation of Railtrack.

Lockerbie

45. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will set up a Select Committee to examine the on-going implications of the destruction of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie. [7488]

Mr. Newton: As I told the hon. Gentleman in my replies of 23 October 1995 and 27 November 1995, there are no plans to do so.

Written Parliamentary Questions

46. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Lord President of the Council what proposals he has to improve the procedure for obtaining answers to written parliamentary questions; and if he will make a statement. [7489]

Mr. Newton: If the hon. Gentleman has some particular proposal to make, perhaps he could let me know.

Parliamentary Procedures

47. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will introduce a procedure whereby hon. Members may briefly raise matters of interest without notice. [7490]

Mr. Newton: I have no plans to do so.

ENVIRONMENT

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was spent on official hospitality by the Property Services Agency in 1993–94 and 1994–95; and what is projected for 1995–96. [9168]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is as follows:

Expenditure in 1993–94 (excluding teas and coffees): £50,380.45

Expenditure in 1994–95 (excluding teas and coffees): £2,457.10

Estimated expenditure in 1995–96 (excluding teas and coffees): £117.51

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 22 November, Official Report, column 122, if he will make a statement on the number of inquiries generated for each of the 14 energy efficiency products. [9128]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: As assessment will be carried out following the voucher book scheme's conclusion on 31 March.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households were insulated under the home energy efficiency scheme in each of the past five years; and what is his current estimate for (a) the present financial year and (b) 1996–97. [9529]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The home energy efficiency scheme began in January 1991. The total numbers of grants paid in Great Britain in each year since the scheme began, and estimated for the present financial year, are as follows:

Year	Great Britain
1990–91	7,582
1991–92[1]	167,849
1992–93	204,130
1993–94	270,148
1994–95	449,902
1995–96	[2]600,000

[2] Estimate.

The allocation of funds for 1996–97 will enable at least 400,000 grants to be paid at the present mean value. However, additional resources will be available from contributions paid by eligible householders who are not on benefit after 1 April 1996. This means that the average job will cost less in grant because of the contribution, and considerably more than 400,000 jobs should be carried out.

Rents

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average rent paid by tenants of (a) private landlords and (b) local councils; and what were the equivalent figures in each category for 1978–79 in actual and real terms. [8529]

Mr. Curry: The figures are given in the table:

Average rents in England, 1978–79 and 1994–95

Year	Local authority tenants £ a week	Private tenants £ a week
1994–95 (actual)	[1]35.79	[2]69.00
1978–79 (actual)	[3]5.90	[4]6.70
1978–79 (1994–95 prices)	17.21	19.50

Estimates from the family expenditure survey and the 1978 private renters survey are subject to sampling variability.

Council Tax Valuation Appeals

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals against council tax valuation banding have been received; and what percentages of these appeals have been (a) resolved, (b) withdrawn or (c) are still outstanding (i) nationally and (ii) by valuation office in the London region. [8973]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Valuation Office agency had received 1,046,969 valid banding proposals in England by 30 November 1995, of which 93.2 per cent. had been resolved, including 22.1 per cent. withdrawn, leaving 6.8 per cent. outstanding. Details for VOA London region offices are:

VOA local office	Number received	Percentage resolved	Percentage withdrawn	Percentage outstanding
Barking	5,079	90.9	37.0	9.1
Bromley	20,008	93.8	25.2	6.2

Admiralty Arch

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration his Department has given to the future of Admiralty arch; which estate agent was employed to consider the sale of Admiralty arch; which independent advisers were involved in this decision; and if he will make a statement. [8992]

Sir Paul Beresford: Prior to, and since the relocation from the majority of the building by the Ministry of Defence, my Department has actively been canvassing use by other Departments and agencies. No estate agents have been employed to consider the sale of Admiralty arch but consultants, Knight Frank, have been commissioned to advise on the possible future uses of the property, including any private finance initiative opportunities. Their report is awaited.

Non-domestic Rates

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to amend the Non-domestic Rating (Unoccupied Property) Regulations 1989 (S.I. 1989 No. 2261) so that the benefit of the rate reduction can only be claimed by a landlord; and if he will make a statement. [9519]

Sir Paul Beresford: Liability for rates attaches to the beneficial occupier of the hereditament; or if it is empty, whoever is entitled to occupy it. Any benefit arising from empty property relief should therefore go to the same person who is liable for the rates, whether it be the owner, landlord, lessee or tenant.

We have no plans to change this.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources he will make available to authorities that have been or are to be reorganised on 1 April 1995, 1996, or 1997 for reorganisation costs incurred by them in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [9667]

Mr. Curry: On 20 October I invited authorities that have been or are to be reorganised on or before 1 April 1997 to submit estimates of the amount of expenditure they expect to incur on transitional costs of reorganisation in 1996–97. On the basis, inter alia, of the information provided by the authorities, I have decided the maximum amounts to allocate towards such costs in 1996–97. I have given priority to authorities to be reorganised in 1996. The majority of authorities to be reorganised in 1997 asked for allocations in respect of redundancy to be deferred until the mid-year review in October 1996 and the allocations listed, for those authorities, are not intended to cover redundancy costs.

The amounts are as follows:

Maximum amounts: £ thousand rounded

Authority	1996–97	Cumulative total 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97
1995 Reorganisation
Isle of Wight Council	500	4,437
1996 Reorganisations
Hartlepool Borough Council	2,150	5,898
Redcar and Cleveland Council	3,400	6,037
Middlesbrough Borough Council	2,750	5,104
Stockton-on-Tees Borough Council	3,250	6,678
North West Somerset Council	3,000	6,250
South Gloucestershire Council	3,500	5,300
North Lincolnshire Council	3,500	5,300
North East Lincolnshire Council	4,000	5,900
North Yorkshire County Council	400	1,400
Selby District Council	100	610
1997 Reorganisations
Bedfordshire County Council	300
Luton Borough Council	3,250
Milton Keynes Borough Council	2,500
Derbyshire County Council	300
Derby City Council	2,500
Bournemouth Borough Council	2,500
Poole Borough Council	2,500
Durham County Council	300
Darlington Borough Council	2,500
East Sussex County Council	300
Brighton Borough Council	350
Hove Borough Council	350
Hampshire County Council	300
Portsmouth City Council	2,500
Southampton City Council	2,500
Staffordshire County Council	300
Stoke on Trent City Council	2,500
Wiltshire County Council	100
Thamesdown Borough Council	2,500

Buckinghamshire and Dorset county councils did not submit bids. The councils of the East Riding of Yorkshire, Hull City, Bristol City, Bath and North-east Somerset and York district are being asked to reconsider whether the reorganisations in their area could be implemented more economically. If they submit revised bids by the end of January, they will be considered and allocations made during February.

I shall make a further announcement about allocations to authorities for which reorganisation orders have not yet been made.

Housing Association Tenants

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the results of the consultation exercise on the Government's proposals in respect of right-to-buy and purchase grants for tenants of housing associations and independent social landlords. [9698]

Mr. Curry: Following the publication of the housing White Paper, "Our Future Homes", over 3,000 copies of the consultation paper on purchase grants for housing association tenants were sent out to interested parties, and 341 responses have been received.

I have carefully considered the views of many housing associations that future HAG-funded properties should not be subject to the new right to buy. But the Government continue to believe that tenants ought to have this new right, and provision for this will appear in the forthcoming Housing Bill.

I have, however, decided to make a number of changes to the schemes as originally proposed in the light of the responses received. These changes are:

the exemption from the schemes of properties in all rural communities of less than 3,000 population, because of the particular difficulties in providing replacement properties; replacement properties need not be new-build, but could be either rehabilitated existing stock or bought on the open market if this represents the best value for money; associations will be allowed to offer tenants alternative properties from their stock, for which purchase grant will be available;

Housing Association grant repayment may be waived on all receipts from sales to tenants on condition that they go into the ring-fenced fund to provide replacement properties;

Large-scale voluntary transfer associations will be treated in the same way as other associations—that is they will not have to bear the burden of grant themselves, as originally proposed; in the statutory scheme, associations—and other independent social landlords—will not be required to sell properties where the outstanding private sector debt is greater than the market value; in the voluntary scheme, participating associations will not be required to sell where:

the property was built entirely by private donation or funds;

properties are subject to restrictive legal covenants or agreements;

the costs of acquisition and improvement (but not repair), or the outstanding private loan debt on the property, are greater than the market value.

I have deposited a list of responses to the consultation paper in the Libraries of both Houses, and copies of individual responses are available through them.

Red Lion Fireworks

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to what destination the three container loads of Red Lion fireworks were re-exported on 23 September, referred to in his answer of 6 November, Official Report, column 602. [8923]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Red Lion fireworks were re-exported on 23 September to Dublin.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the performance and effectiveness of the Health and Safety Executive regarding the import of dangerous fireworks following the case of Kanash Ltd. and Red Lion. [8922]

Sir Paul Beresford: I consider that the Health and Safety Executive took appropriate enforcement action: Kanash complied fully with all the prohibitions placed upon it, and HSE ensured, subsequently, that all the recalled Red Lion brand fireworks were destroyed.

Inner-city Shops

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has to zero-rate inner-city shops; [8590]

(2) if he will make it his policy to select Hillfields in Coventry as a pilot area for zero-rating. [8595]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government have no plans to zero rate inner-city shops.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many vacant shops there are in inner-city areas in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Coventry. [8592]

Sir Paul Beresford: We do not hold such information for England centrally.

As part of our advice on planning town centres and retail developments in planning policy and guidance note No. 6—PPG6—we advise local authorities to monitor vacant properties in their town centres. I understand that Coventry city council will shortly be publishing information about vacant shops in its unitary development plan.

The information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from organisations concerned with the blighting of inner-city areas and shopping centres. [8591]

Sir Paul Beresford: We occasionally receive correspondence about blight. Most of my correspondence on shopping centres relates to the damaging effects on them of out-of-centre and out-of-town shopping developments.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the difficulties of letting vacant shops in inner-city areas. [8594]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. This is primarily the responsibility of local regeneration partnerships, including local authorities.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many vacant shops have been deliberately damaged to avoid paying the business rate levy in the last two years. [8596]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not available.

Shops (Business Rates)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has to vary the business rate levy to reflect the ability of shop-owners to pay the business rate; [8597]

(2) what plans he has to change the business rate levy on vacant shops in inner-city areas. [8589]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

Environmental Pollution Report

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what dates and on what matters, in connection with the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Environment", he has made representations to the Secretary of State for Transport. [9093]

Sir Paul Beresford: There have been frequent contacts between my Department and the Department of Transport about the report since its publication in October 1994, including discussions at both ministerial and official levels.

Green Ministers

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish the minutes of the meetings of the Green Ministers; [8672]

(2) when the Green Ministers last met; who attended; and what issues were discussed; [8673]

(3) if he will publish a list of the contacts of green officials for each Government Department; [8674]

(4) if he will publish a regular six-monthly list of environmental appraisals by Government Departments. [8675]

Mr. Clappison: Green Ministers last met on 6 July 1995 and discussion included progress on priorities and targets in the 1995 "This Common Inheritance" annual report and possibilities for the 1996 report, indicators of sustainable development, quality in town and country and green housekeeping activities. Almost all Green Ministers attended or were represented at that meeting. A further meeting scheduled for 2 November had to be postponed and will now take place on 29 January. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will discuss then with colleagues whether minutes of meetings and a list of official contacts should be published.

The Government are committed to reporting further on the use of environmental appraisal in Government policy, but we have already published "Environmental Appraisal in Government Departments", a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library.

Housing Stock

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce new measures to assist local authorities to tackle the maintenance problems of the housing stock. [9476]

Mr. Clappison: None. Local authorities have very substantial resources available to maintain their housing stock and they should ensure that they use this money effectively. About £2,320 million per year is being spent on the repair and maintenance of local authority housing, which in real terms is 86 per cent. more per dwelling than 16 years ago.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Parole

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of prisoners is currently notified of their parole decision after their parole eligibility date in respect of each prison; [7007]

(2) what plans he has to increase resources to (a) eliminate delays and (b) reduce the backlog of parole eligibility cases; [7009]

(3) what assessment he has made of (a) the cost and (b) the impact on prisoner morale of notifying prisoners of parole eligibility after their parole eligibility date. [7008]

Miss Widdecombe: Although parole delays cause an increase in the total number of prisoners in custody at any one time, the marginal cost for each establishment is low.

I do not think parole delays are acceptable. They are unfair to prisoners and an inefficient use of resources. I have asked officials to take steps to reduce the delays. The measures taken include: issuing an instruction to governors stressing the importance of completing parole dossiers on time and of avoiding the transfer of prisoners just before parole board interviews; giving the parole board extra temporary staff, and securing the appointment of sufficient parole board members to undertake interviews and panelling works.

Provisional figures for 1995 show that, for those establishments holding the majority of prisoners eligible for parole, the percentages of prisoners who received their parole decisions after their parole eligibility date, or its anniversary, are given in the table.

Correspondence

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Sunderland, South will receive a reply to his letter of 24 November regarding Alan and Michael Guy, Ref. 2235/95. [9062]

Mr. Kirkhope: My private secretary replied to the hon. Member's letter on 8 January. The allegations that Alan and Michael Guy were wrongfully convicted are currently being reviewed and I hope to be able to send the hon. Member a substantive reply to his letters about this case very soon.

Miscarriages of Justice

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the time taken to investigate each alleged miscarriage of justice considered by his Department in the last three years; and which of these were referred to the Court of Appeal; [7783]

(2) how many cases were referred to the Court of Appeal following investigation by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [7782]

Mr. Kirkhope: The number of cases referred in recent years to the Court of Appeal is given in the table:

References to the Court of Appeal under section 17(1)(a) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 in respect of conviction 1988–94

1992	8	9
1993	8	9
1995	18	20

Detailed information about the time taken to consider individual cases is not available. During the past three years, it has taken, on average, about two months to consider a case, but the time taken varies considerably according to the extent and nature of inquiries which may need to be made. At the beginning of December 1995, there were 50 cases which had been under consideration for more than 12 months.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what considerations led to adjudication in respect of punishment of prisoners at Doncaster prison being carried out by Home Office controllers; and what assessment he has made of the effect on discipline at the prison. [8055]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the Office, to reply to your recent Question about adjudications at Doncaster prison being carried out by Controllers.

The Criminal Justice Act 1991 specifically prevents Directors of contracted-out prisons from carrying out adjudications. This function is instead carried out by Controllers, in accordance with section 85(3) of the Act. To change this provision would require legislation to amend the Act.

The power to adjudicate on prisoners is quasi-judicial and can, in some instances, mean detaining them in custody for longer as a consequence of a disciplinary award. In passing the 1991 Act Parliament has taken the view that only members of the judiciary and a limited number of state servants should have the power to take away a person's liberty.

The Chief Inspector of Prisons also considered this matter during his inspection of other contracted-out prisons, at Wolds and Blakenhurst. He felt that the current arrangements offered the best safeguards for prisoners at present.

There is no indication that discipline within the prison has been affected in any way by adjudications being carried out by the Controller.

Temporary Director General of the Prison Service

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what directions have been issued to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service as to the title he should append to his signature; and if he will make a statement. [8050]

Miss Widdecombe: No such directions have been issued.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mobile telephones have been supplied to his Department for in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [8041]

Mr. Howard: The number of mobile telephones supplied to my Department in the last three years was 180 in 1993, 209 in 1994 and 483 in 1995, from four, four, and eight suppliers respectively. In the previous five years, 829 mobile telephones were procured using three suppliers. The figures are approximate because they may not include some mobile telephones supplied to areas of my Department with devolved responsibility for the provision of telecommunications. More precise details would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Director General of the Prison Service

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures of performance will be included in the job description of the Director General of the Prison Service; and what (a) salary and (b) other emoluments their achievement will bring. [8128]

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 5 December, Official Report, column 204.

Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the powers in section 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 have been used since they became available; and if he will publish information in respect of each of the police forces in England and Wales. [8219]

Mr. Maclean: Figures are not yet available. Statistics on the use of these powers will be published later this year and thereafter on an annual basis.

Immigration Service (Pay)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) for how long performance-related pay has been available to (a) executive officers, (b) higher executive officers and (c) other officials within the immigration service; and if he will make a statement; [8162]

(2) what criteria are used to judge the eligibility for performance-related pay of (a) executive officers, (b) higher executive officers and (c) other officials within the immigration service, in terms of (i) cash and (ii) proportion of overall salary; and if he will make a statement; [8163]

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what mechanisms exist to provide performance-related pay to (a) executive officers, (b) higher executive officers and (c) other officials within the immigration service; [8164]

(2) what is the upper limit of performance-related pay available to (a) executive officers, (b) higher executive officers and (c) other officials within the immigration service, in terms of (i) cash, and (ii) proportion of overall salary; [8165]

(3) when changes were last introduced to the system of provision of performance-related pay to (a) executive officers, (b) higher executive officers and (c) other officials within the immigration services; and what those changes were. [8166]

Mr. Howard: Arrangements for performance-related pay for executive grades, including immigration service staff, have been in place since April 1989 following negotiations between HM Treasury and the national unions. It is awarded for different levels of performance, assessed on the basis of markings in annual individual appraisal reports. There are currently three levels of reward for individuals, depending on whether their performance is judged to be fully satisfactory, significantly above requirements, or outstanding. The amount varies according to the overall performance marking attained and the point reached on the pay band. Lump sum non-consolidated payments are made to those on the maximum of their pay band.

Structural changes to the performance pay system were last made, across the whole of the civil service, in 1992. The previous mixed incremental/performance pay system was replaced by one in which pay is much more clearly performance related.

The arrangements in the Home Office are currently undergoing a major review, in the light of the impending delegation of pay responsibility from the Treasury.

Deportations (Algeria)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what decision he has made in respect of the deportation of Hocine Dib to Algeria; and if he will make a statement. [8244]

Mr. Kirkhope: Mr. Dib is an illegal entrant, rather than a person who is being dealt with under deportation powers. His case is being reviewed in the light of the recent decision of the Court of Appeal to grant him leave to move for a judicial review.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Algerians were deported from the United Kingdom in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [8243]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is given in the table:

Algerian nationals removed from the United Kingdom under the deportation process[1]

Year	Number of persons
1993	65
1995[2]	[3]13

[1] Including "voluntary" departures after deportation action had been initiated but excluding illegal entrants removed.

British Citizenship

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each year since 1982 the number of children or minors born abroad and having as a parent a British citizen whom he or his predecessors have (a) registered or (b) refused to register as British citizens under section 3(1) of the British Nationality Act 1981. [8245]

Mr. Kirkhope: Records of the nationality of the parents of minors who apply for British citizenship or the number of applications under section 3(1) which are refused are not kept. The number of applications granted where the applicant was born abroad is as follows:

1984: 8,462
1985: 10,145
1986: 8,527
1987: 8,533
1988: 6,060
1989: 10,797
1990: 8,588
1991: 9,471
1992: 7,800
1993: 7,737
1994: 7,232
1995: 6,610

Environmental Pollution Report

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what dates and on what matters in connection with the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Environment", he has made representations to the Secretary of State for Transport; and if he will give further details of the dates and subjects of those representations. [9166]

Mr. Howard: I have made no representations to the Secretary of State for Transport on the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the figures for the number of asylum applicants in 1995 residing in Wales at the time of application, the figures for the success and failure of these applications, the number still to be determined and the number of appeals. [9078]

Mr. Kirkhope: Information on the places of residence of people currently seeking asylum is not held centrally.

Airline Passengers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to amend the Data Protection Act 1984 in order to permit the staff of airlines operating in the United Kingdom to give out information concerning passengers flying into or out of the United Kingdom, to next of kin who require confirmation or otherwise that a person has travelled with that airline. [9387]

Mr. Sackville: No amendment to the Data Protection Act is necessary. The Act permits disclosure of data to any category of person described as a potential recipient in the relevant entry in the data protection register. Whether an airline may disclose data to next of kin therefore depends on the terms in which it was registered. Only the airline can decide, in cases where disclosure is permissible, whether it would be appropriate to disclose in any given situation.

European Police Office

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the text of the convention concerning the establishment of a European police office, signed in Brussels on 26 July 1995, Cm 3050, was presented to Parliament by Her Majesty's Government; what notification of the terms of the convention was given to Select Committees of either House; and when he expects to lay the convention before Parliament for ratification. [8255]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 11 January 1996]: The Europol convention was published, and laid before Parliament, on 8 December 1995.

An explanatory note on the then draft convention was submitted on 22 February 1994. Supplementary explanatory notes, with revised drafts of the convention, were provided on 17 November 1994 and 31 May 1995. The final text of the convention, together with an accompanying explanatory note, was forwarded on 28 July last year.

We expect to ratify the convention in the near future.

WALES

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in his Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by him before they are sent; and if he will identify any such letters to which amendments by him have been made in 1994–95. [7829]

Mr. Hague: For Cadw, Welsh Historic Monuments, parliamentary questions are passed to the chief executive for reply when the matter is one delegated to him under the agency's framework document. Ministers see a copy of the reply before it is sent, but would not normally intervene in operational matters. No letters were amended by Ministers in 1994–95.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received to date regarding the proposed nursery voucher scheme; how many of these representations voiced support for the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [8059]

Mr. Richards: Some 1,100 separate representations have been received to date, including some petitions and a large number of printed pro-forma letters organised by some primary schools. There has been general support for the Government's objective of making nursery education available for all four-year-olds, although no declared support amongst the representations for the proposed voucher scheme as the most appropriate means to achieve that objective. Many of the representations have clearly been generated by a misunderstanding of some basic elements of the scheme and the greater choice it will give parents in the type of provision they can have for their children, and by an unsubstantiated concern that it will inevitably reduce the current level of maintained sector provision. If local education authorities provide what parents want, there is nothing in the proposed voucher scheme to threaten their current levels of provision.

Urban Development Programme

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to clause 3.4 of the urban development guidelines of April 1992, if he will place in the Library a copy of the criteria for selection and forms of partnership for each of the Welsh Development Agency's joint ventures with local authorities as contained in the agency's urban development programme. [8221]

Mr. Hague: Paragraph 3.4 of the April 1992 guidelines required the WDA, in its programme submissions, to describe the criteria it used to select and prioritise the locations in which it would undertake urban development programme activities, and to describe the forms of partnership in terms of where, and with whom, the agency would work with other organisations to implement the programme.

Approved programmes covering 1992–93 and 1993–94, including broad criteria, details of locations and partnership arrangements, are summarised in publications by the agency, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Agricultural Support

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the estimated amount of financial support received by the agricultural industry from (a) the European Union, (b) the United Kingdom Government and (c) in total in each year since 1990 at constant prices indicating each figure as a percentage of the corresponding total. [8088]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Details of financial support for agriculture in Wales are published in figure 2.01 of the Welsh Office departmental report and are broken down between Common agricultural policy commodity and domestic agricultural support.

These figures, together with their respective shares of the total, are shown in the table in constant 1990 prices for the financial years 1990–91 to 1994–95.

Financial support received by the agricultural industry in Wales

Constant prices (1990–91=100) £ million (per cent. of total)

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
CAP expenditure	58 (52)	85 (57)	99 (64)	146 (77)	156 (73)
Domestic expenditure	54 (48)	63 (43)	55 (36)	44 (23)	57 (27)
Total	112 (100)	148 (100)	154 (100)	190 (100)	213 (100)

1. Expenditure on domestic schemes include an element which is subsequently refunded by the EU. However, as refunds do not necessarily take place in the year in which the expenditure is incurred the annual figures are shown gross of refunds.
2. Expenditure figures for Wales are only available in respect of direct support. The figures therefore exclude variable premium payments and intervention support for which separate Welsh figures are unavailable. The variable premium scheme ended in January 1992 and intervention support has been reduced as a result of the 1992 CAP reforms. Thus in the early years of the series, total expenditure is understated and the proportion represented by domestic support expenditure is overstated.

Mostyn Docks

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce the outcome of the public inquiry relating to the expansion of Mostyn docks, Mostyn, Clwyd. [8579]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The application is being dealt with jointly by the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Transport. The inquiry dealt with a number of complex issues which are still under consideration and a decision will be issued as soon as possible.

Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is for each police authority in Wales the proposed standard spending assessment for 1996–97 and the standard spending assessment set for 1995–96 and each of the previous five years. [8577]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend announced on 30 November provisional standard spending assessment for 1996–97 for police authorities in Wales as shown as follows. The figures reflect changes in police authority boundaries from 1 April 1996.

Provisional SSA 1996–97

	£ million
Dyfed-Powys	24.3
Gwent	31.4
North Wales	34.7
South Wales	75.8

The SSAs for police authorities for 1995–96 are as follows:

SSA 1995–96

	£ million
Dyfed-Powys	23.4
Gwent	25.3
North Wales	33.3
South Wales	77.7

Prior to 1995–96, there were no SSAs for police authorities in Wales. County council SSAs included provision for the police.

Child Abuse

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if Miss Nicola Davies QC, in her examination of papers relating to child abuse in north Wales, asked for sight of any papers held by (a) the North Wales police and (b) the Crown Prosecution Service. [9203]

Mr. Richards: All of the agencies that were asked by the examining team to provide access to their papers did so. These were the North Wales police, and the county councils of Gwynedd and Clwyd.

Schools (Selection)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the schools in Wales which select pupils, giving the percentage selected in each school, and the criteria and procedures under which selection by each school is made. [9479]

Mr. Richards: In the maintained sector, admission arrangements, including the criteria by which decisions are to be made if a school is oversubscribed, must be published annually in the school's prospectus. I am not aware of any grant-maintained school that selects pupils on the basis of ability or aptitude. Information about local education authority maintained schools is not held centrally.

Housing Associations

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the results of the Welsh consultation exercise undertaken on the Government's proposals for purchase grants for tenants of housing associations. [9720]

Mr. Hague: Following the publication of the housing White Paper "Our Future Homes", more than 160 copies of the consultation paper on purchase grants for housing association tenants were sent out to interested parties, and 28 responses were received.

I have also taken into consideration responses received to my consultation on the rural White Paper where these referred to the purchase grant.

I have carefully considered the views of many housing associations that future housing association grant-funded properties should not be subject to the new right to buy, but the Government continue to believe that tenants ought to have this new right, and provision for this will appear in the forthcoming Housing Bill.

I have, however, decided to make a number of changes to the scheme as originally proposed in the light of the responses received. These changes are: the exemption from the scheme of properties in certain rural areas, on which I propose to consult in due course; replacement properties need not be new build, but could be either rehabilitated or bought on the open market if this represents better value for money; in the statutory scheme, associations and other independent social landlords will not be required to sell properties where the outstanding private sector debt is greater than the market value; associations will be allowed to offer tenants other properties from their stock for which purchase grant will be available; housing association grant repayment may be waived on all receipts from sales to tenants on condition that they go into a ring-fenced fund to provide replacement properties; any future large scale voluntary transfer associations will be treated in the same way as other associations—they will not have to bear the burden of grant themselves, as originally proposed; in the voluntary scheme, participating associations will not be required to sell where the property was built entirely by private donation or funds, where properties are subject to restrictive legal covenants or agreements or where the costs of acquisition and improvement, but not repair, or the outstanding private loan debt on the property, are greater than the market value.

I have deposited a list of responses to the consultation paper in the Libraries of both Houses, and copies of individual responses are available through them.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to paragraph 3.8 of "Government Expenditure and Revenue—Wales 1993–94," published on 8 January 1995, if he will give the Welsh share of United Kingdom public expenditure on the basis of (a) the attribution of defence expenditure, (b) Wales's share of defence equipment expenditure and of United Kingdom based armed forces and (c) MOD civilian personnel; and if he will give the 1993–94 figure for MOD expenditure in Wales on the above basis corresponding to the £968 million used in table 6 of his publication. [9184]

Mr. Hague: Defence expenditure on behalf of Wales in 1993–94 has been estimated at £968 million by apportioning Wales's share of total UK defence expenditure on the basis of GDP. This is the basis used in the report "Government Expenditure and Revenue—Wales 1993–94". Apportioning defence expenditure on a population basis would place the figure at £1,143 million. Everyone in the UK benefits from total UK defence spending. The valuation of these benefits to people in Wales—as estimated—is a different question from the value of defence services purchased from within Wales. Only partial information on the latter is available. Figures published by the Ministry of Defence in the 1995 edition of "UK Defence Statistics" indicate that expenditure on equipment in Wales in 1993–94 was £50 million, or 1 per cent. of the UK total. At 1 July 1993 some 5,100 services personnel, or 2.5 per cent. of the UK total, and 5,000 civilian personnel, around 4 per cent. of the UK total, were deployed in Wales. An accurate allocation of costs to personnel on a regional basis could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on the same basis as was used in his publication "Government Expenditure and Revenue—Wales 1993–94", if he will give the Welsh share of United Kingdom public expenditure for each year since 1979 and the Welsh share of revenue arising. [8737]

Mr. Hague: The analysis carried out in relation to 1993–94 has not been done for earlier years and so directly comparable figures are not available. However, details of identifiable general Government expenditure in Wales are published each year by the Treasury in the statistical supplement to the Autumn Statement, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many civil service personnel hours were spent in preparing the document "Government Expenditure and Revenue—Wales 1993–94". [8739]

Mr. Hague: The total time taken to prepare the report is estimated at around 150 person-hours.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the total cost of preparing and publishing the document "Government Expenditure and Revenue—Wales 1993–94". [8738]

Mr. Hague: The total cost of preparing and publishing the report is estimated at around £5,000.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on the same basis as was used in his publication "Government Expenditure and Revenue—Wales 1993–94" what estimate he has made of the length of time required on current Government regional development policies to bring tax receipts in Wales up to the United Kingdom average. [8736]

Mr. Hague: None.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the mitigation measures on the Gwent levels corresponding to the loss of feeding grounds arising from the Cardiff bay barrage project. [8741]

Mr. Hague: I hope to make an announcement shortly.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent on official hospitality by agencies associated with his Department in 1993–94, 1994–95 and projected for 1995–96. [9083]

Mr. Hague: Hospitality expenditure for Cadw is as follows:

1995–96: £1,500 projected.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 14 December, Official Report, column 779, if the figures for hospitality spending 1994–95 and 1995–96 includes spending by his Department's agencies. [9084]

Mr. Hague: No.

Emergency Medical Admissions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the closure of all south Wales hospitals for emergency medical admissions on Monday 8 January. [8735]

Mr. Hague: While under heavy pressure following a period of severe weather and high levels of staff sickness, hospitals in south Wales coped with the demand for emergency treatment, and I understand that no patient requiring emergency care was refused admission on 8 January. I thank all the dedicated staff involved for their commitment and effort during a difficult period.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will carry out a review of the availability of emergency medical admission beds in Welsh hospitals; if he will arrange that such a review covers the impact of influenza, bronchitis and other conditions on staff and patients and the seasonal pattern thereof; and what allowance should be made for such peaks and troughs in calculating the overall supply of medical emergency beds. [8742]

Mr. Hague: My officials met leading NHS managers and clinicians on 7 December to assess the extent and possible causes of the increasing pressure on acute hospitals posed by the rise in emergency medical admissions. It was agreed that the NHS should develop as a matter of urgency an effective response to these pressures, both in the short and long term. An action plan was agreed before Christmas.

NHS representatives are meeting on 17 January to review the way in which the service responded to the unusual set of pressures faced over the Christmas and early new year period, and to consider in the light of this experience whether the existing action plan needs to be revised.

I will be receiving a copy of their report and will continue to monitor the position on emergency admissions very closely indeed.

Salford University Business Services Ltd.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the cost of the contract given to Salford University Business Services Ltd. to act as recruitment consultants to recruit innovation and technology counsellors to provide business contact services in Wales. [9179]

Mr. Hague: Salford University Business Services Ltd. has been awarded a contract worth £20,750 to manage the pan-Wales recruitment of innovation and technology counsellors to Business Connect, Wales.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) guidelines and (b) other advice has been issued by his Department to (i) NHS bodies and (ii) other organisations regarding the use of the private finance initiative. [9079]

Mr. Hague: Detailed guidance on the private finance initiative was issued to the NHS in Wales—under the cover of a letter numbered DGM (95)112, in July 1995. A copy of this guidance has been placed in the Library of the House. Guidance on information management and technology projects within the NHS is being prepared.

The Treasury handbook "Private Opportunity, Public Benefit" is being distributed widely in Wales and this will build on the general advice that has already been provided.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which capital projects are currently being considered under the private finance initiative; and what is the cost of each project. [9057]

Mr. Hague: The estimated capital value of each of the projects being looked at currently, which have been announced, are as follows: M4 relief road, £330 million; A465 Heads of the Valleys road, £175 million; eastern bay link of the Cardiff peripheral distributor road, £108 million; new general hospital at Baglan, £40 million; staff residential accommodation, district general hospital, Llantrisant, £3 million; day surgery unit and mental health development, Nevill Hall, Abergavenny, £7 million; cancer treatment centre, Glan Clwyd district general hospital, Rhyl, £15 million; community hospital, Chepstow, £6 million; replacement of radiotherapy equipment, Velindre, £4 million; OSIRIS, office automation system for Welsh Office, £13 million.

Information on schemes costing less than £1 million is not collected.

Pembrokeshire NHS Trust

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the auditor's report produced by Coopers and Lybrand, Cardiff into the circumstances leading up to, and the financial implications of, the departure of the chief executive of the Pembrokeshire NHS trust in 1994. [8586]

Mr. Richards: We have not received any such report. If one is received, we will place a copy in the Library of the House, provided that legal considerations do not prevent us from doing so.

Blood Shortage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many surgical patients, broken down as to in-patients and day cases, had their operations (a) cancelled or

(b) transferred to English hospitals as a result of the blood transfusion shortage since 8 December 1995; and if he will make a statement. [8734]

Mr. Hague: Information on patients being transferred to England is not held centrally. No emergency operations were cancelled in Welsh hospitals; only those patients requiring group O blood had operations deferred. This was for a limited period of 48 hours.

IMAX Theatre Project

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement in relation to the funding of the IMAX theatre project of the national museum of Wales. [8740]

Mr. Hague: The national museums and galleries of Wales's corporate plan 1995–96 to 1999–2000 discusses museum developments in Cardiff bay, including the possible development of an IMAX theatre. No specific proposals have been submitted to the Welsh Office. The Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, North-West, (Mr. Richards), has made it clear to the museum that any request by the museum for funding towards an IMAX project would not be agreed to.

Mortality Rates

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will establish an inquiry into the changes in (a) the perinatal, (b) the neonatal and (c) the infant mortality rates in Wales between 1993 and 1994. [9527]

Mr. Hague: No. Despite an increase of 14 deaths between 1993 and 1994 the trend is still clearly downward.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what information he has on perinatal, neonatal and infant mortality rates in other European countries in 1993 and 1994; [9524]

(2) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the use of perinatal, neonatal and infant mortality rates in other European countries as comparators for the Welsh statistics; and if he will make a statement. [9523]

Mr. Hague: The information is contained in the following tables, taken from "Demographic Statistics 1995" published by Eurostat. A copy of this document is available in the Library of the House. No figures are available for 1994.

I have not commissioned or evaluated research on the use of perinatal, neonatal and infant mortality rates in other European countries as comparators for the Welsh statistics. However, comparisons of infant mortality rates between the United Kingdom and other countries are compiled, evaluated and published by the appropriate international organisation, in particular the World Health Organisation and Eurostat.

The figures published for Wales in "Health Statistics Wales" show that despite a small increase in deaths between 1993 and 1994 the trend is still clearly downward. The increase last year may not in itself be significant, although we do keep the situation under review.

The figures from 1990–94 show an overall reduction in the rate of infant mortality—the number of deaths per 1,000 live births—from 6.9 to 6.1. The figures published by various international organisations indicate that this is one of the lowest rates in Europe, and a figure of which Wales should be proud.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the (a) perinatal, (b) neonatal and (c) infant mortality rates in Wales in (i) the first quarter and (ii) the first half of 1995; and if he will place that information in the Library. [9528]

Mr. Hague: The information, provided by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, is in the following table. All the data are provisional:

	First quarter of 1995	First half of 1995
Perinatal mortality rate (per 1,000 live and still births)	7.3	7.0
Neonatal mortality rate (per 1,000 live births)	3.9	3.6
Infant mortality rate (per 1,000 live births)	6.0	5.4

Hospital Out-patients (Travel Expenses)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospital out-patients received refunds of fares or other travel expenses to Welsh hospitals in 1994–95; how many were (a) paid directly by the hospital payments office and (b) reimbursed subsequently by (i) the family health services authority and (ii) the Benefits Agency; and what was the average wait for reimbursement. [9526]

Mr. Hague: This information is not held centrally.

Cervical Cytology

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the reason for the omission of statistics for women in Mid-Glamorgan in table 4.4 of "Health Statistics Wales 1995;" and if he will make a statement. [9525]

Mr. Hague: Mid-Glamorgan family health services authority was unable to supply the relevant information for 1994–95. This was due to computer problems.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give for 1994–95 for each family health services authority the numbers of cervical smears the results of which were (a) negative, (b) inadequate sample for proper reading, (c) borderline, (d) mild dyskariosis, (e) moderate dyskariosis, (f) severe dyskariosis, (g) possible invasive changes and (h) glandular neoplasia. [9531]

Mr. Hague: The requested information could not be produced within the time available. I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as the information is available.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of jobs that will be lost in the Arfan borough area as a direct benefit of the reorganisation of local government. [9388]

Mr. Hague: I have made no such estimate. Any reduction in staffing will depend on decisions taken by the new councils which replace those based on the Arfon area.

Head Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the highest salary paid to any local education authority head teacher of (i) an infants, (ii) a primary and (iii) a high school. [9067]

Mr. Robin Squire: I have been asked to reply.

The highest known salaries at 31 March 1994 of full-time head teachers in the local education authority maintained sector are:

Type of school	England £	Wales £
Nursery	36,900	25,400
Infant	39,900	29,400
Other primary	43,800	34,400
Secondary	60,500	50,700

Notes:
1. Including any allowances.
2. The salary details are derived from information provided by local authorities primarily for pensions purposes. Information may be incomplete in some cases.
3. Teachers in grant-maintained schools are not included.
4. Excludes head teachers in sixth form colleges.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average salary of a (i) nursery, (ii) infant, (iii) primary and (iv) high school head teacher. [9066]

Mr. Squire: I have been asked to reply.

The average salaries at 31 March 1994 of full-time head teachers in the maintained sector are shown.

Type of school	England £	Wales £	England and Wales £
Nursery	24,600	24,000	24,500
Infant	27,000	25,600	26,000
Other primary	27,200	25,600	27,000
Secondary	37,000	37,400	37,100

1. Including any allowances.
2. The average salary is derived from information provided by local authorities and grant-maintained schools primarily for pensions purposes. Information may be incomplete in some cases.
3. Excludes head teachers in sixth form colleges.

SCOTLAND

Ministerial Travel and Accommodation Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring expenses of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. [6414]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on expenditure in the format requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Private Training Companies

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the criteria under which private training companies in Scotland may participate in schemes financed by the European social fund. [8098]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A private sector company can participate only as a contractor to a public sector sponsor of a scheme financed by the European social fund.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the privately owned training firms in Scotland which have taken part in schemes financed by the European social fund in the last two years; and how much they were paid. [8099]

Mr. Forsyth: Public sector sponsors of schemes for which finance is sought from the European social fund are not required to state on their application whether any contractors which they use are privately owned.

Local Income Tax

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to introducing a local income tax in Scotland. [6765]

Mr. Kynoch: None.

Youth Training (Accidents)

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) fatal, (b) major and (c) minor accidents took place on youth training schemes in Scotland in (i) July to September 1993, (ii) October to December 1993, (iii) January to March 1994, (iv) April to June 1994, (v) July to September 1994, (vi) October to December 1994, (vii) January to March 1995, (viii) April to June 1995 and (ix) July to September 1995; and what were the numbers of accidents on training for work for the same periods. [6481]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The information requested is set out in the table:

	Fatal	Major	Minor

Abortion

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many abortions in total have now been performed in Scotland under the provisions of the Abortion Act 1967; how many and what percentage of that total were performed in an emergency to save the life of the mother; and if he will give a breakdown by region of that total and the relevant figures and percentages. [6795]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The total number of therapeutic abortions performed in Scotland from 1968–1994 was 222,651. During this period 17 abortions, 0.01 per cent., were performed in an emergency to save the life of the pregnant woman. A breakdown by health board of residence is shown in the table.

Health board of residence	Total number of abortions	Performed in emergency[1]	Percentage of total
Argyll and Clyde	14,948	1	0.01
Ayrshire and Arran	13,604	0	0.00

[1] Abortions performed under Statutory ground F—i.e., where in the case of emergency it was necessary to save the life of the pregnant woman.
1. 1994 data are provisional.

Nurses

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by what means he assesses the demand for conversion courses for second level registered nurses. [8343]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 January 1996]: It is for NHS trusts to determine the qualifications and number of staff they require and to arrange conversion courses for second level nurses to meet these needs.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried students places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study for each of the last five years; [8348]

(2) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, gave up their training in (i) the first year, (ii) the second year and (iii) the third year for each of the last five years; [8347]

(3) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, (i) qualified and (ii) registered with the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for each of the last five years; [8345]

(4) how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study, gave up their courses for each year of training for each of the last five years. [8346]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 10 January 1996]: This information is not held centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of nurses working in (a) private nursing homes, (b) private hospitals, (c) local authorities, (d) private residential homes, (e) the armed forces, (f) the prison service, (g) the occupational health service, (h) private industry, (i) self employment and (j) and other categories; and if he will express the figures in terms of (i) total numbers and (ii) whole time equivalents for each of the last five years. [8350]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 10 January 1996]: The information available is shown in the table:

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he intends to estimate demand for nurses from the non-NHS sector; and how this information will be used to regulate the supply of nursing students. [8340]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 10 January 1996]: As part of the new arrangements for contracting for pre-registration nursing and midwifery education, and annual exercise is being undertaken to determine an indication of future requirements for such qualified employees in Scotland. This includes assessment of the needs of the non-NHS sector by conducting research through NHS purchasers and other relevant organisations. The forecast of future demand for nursers and midwives emerging from this work will be used to inform decisions on the number of pre-registration places in diploma level nursing and midwifery education by means of a new work force planning model which is being developed.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of second level registered nurses; and how many are currently undertaking training to convert to first level registration. [8344]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 10 January 1996]: There were 8,832 second level registered nurses employed in the NHS in Scotland at 30 September 1994 and 325 undertaking training to convert to first level registration at 31 December 1995.

Health Service Planning

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what studies his Department has undertaken into work force planning in the last five years. [8342]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 January 1996]: For medical and dental NHS staff, the Scottish Office has each year asked employers how many new consultant posts they plan to set up in the next five years, and on this basis has calculated the number of senior posts in each specialty.

For nurses and midwives, an exercise was undertaken in 1994 to establish the required intakes for the five-year period commencing 1996 for the purposes of central purchasing of pre-registration education. the intake figures are subject to periodic review.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6413]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on expenditure in the format requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what statement he has made of the consequence for Scotland of the reduction in funding for the home energy efficiency scheme. [8070]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None. Within the new total it is expected that the current number of grants paid to householders receiving income-related benefit will be maintained.

Central European Time

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the consequences for Scotland of a move to central European time; and if he will make a statement. [8097]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Office statisticians have over the last 12 months undertaken substantial work to examine the likely effect of a move to CET on accident casualties. Preliminary results, which will be published shortly, will show that a change to CET would be broadly neutral in terms of the total number of road accident casualties in Scotland. The work is based on up-to-date analysis of Scottish accident data over a recent five-year period. It takes account of prevailing light conditions at over 20 locations in Scotland and the time of day when accidents took place.

TRANSPORT

British Rail Pension Schemes

11. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the Minister for Public Transport's statement to Standing Committee B on 22 April 1993, column 1289, about the British Railways additional superannuation schemes, if it is the Government's intention that private sector employers should continue to make matching contributions on behalf of former BR employees who were contributing to Brass and receiving matching contributions at the time of their transfer to the private sector. [7452]

Mr. John Watts: Yes. Existing Brass employer contributions must be matched by new employers.

Robin Hood Line

12. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Robin Hood line to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [7453]

Mr. Norris: The Robin Hood line was extended to Mansfield Woodhouse on 20 November 1995. We have made it clear that we are willing in principle to provide funds for stage 3, which would take train services through to Worksop. This would of course be subject to the normal criteria for funding of local transport schemes, including value for money.

Upgrade

14. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to upgrade the A303 between Sparkford and Podimore. [7455]

Mr. Watts: The A303 Sparkford-Ilchester improvement scheme is included in the next batch of design, build, finance and operate projects which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 28 November 1995.

West Coast Main Line

15. Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the condition of the west coast main line. [7456]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack has confirmed that the west coast main line is being maintained to meet the company's rigorous safety standards and contractual obligations to train operating companies.

Major Road Construction

17. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on motorway and major trunk road construction in each of the past four years, at constant prices. [7458]

Sir George Young: Expenditure on motorway and trunk road construction at constant 1995–96 prices in each of the past four complete years has been as follows:

1991–92: £1.44 billion

1994–95: £1.36 billion.

18. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress in the design, build, finance and operate programme for trunk road development. [7459]

Sir George Young: I am delighted to announce that we signed the first DBFO project for A69 Carlisle-Newcastle on Friday 12 January. We have received robust bids on time for the second tranche and we announced a third tranche as part of the public expenditure settlement in November, bringing the total value of DBFO projects to over £1 billion.

US-UK Air Services Agreement

20. Sir Alan Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to meet the US Secretary for Transportation to discuss the air services agreement between the United States and the United Kingdom. [7461]

Sir George Young: I have no current plans to do so.

Private Finance Initiative

21. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what projects are under consideration in East Anglia under the private finance initiative. [7462]

Mr. Watts: We have been negotiating a contract for the improvement of the A1 between Alconbury and Peterborough as part of a design build finance and operate road project.

London Underground

22. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what major works are programmed for 1996 for London Underground. [7463]

Mr. Norris: London Underground has recently announce a comprehensive programme of investment in a number of essential infrastructure projects over the next year or so. Construction of the Jubilee line extension will continue throughout 1996.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of London Underground operating costs are met by income from fares, income from commercial sources, and subsidy or grant; and what estimate he has made of the equivalent figures for public transport in (a) Amsterdam, (b) Paris, (c) Berlin and (d) Rome. [9158]

Mr. Norris: In 1994–95 London Underground's income from fares represented 115 per cent. of its operating costs, before provision for depreciation, renewals and reorganisation costs. Income from all other sources represented 5 per cent. of operating costs. No grant or subsidy was required to meet operating costs, though total grant of £776 million was paid to London Transport to fund capital investment. I have made no estimate of the equivalent figures for the four cities listed.

24. Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to improve the A4 access to London. [7465]

Mr. Watts: There are two schemes in the national roads programme which will improve traffic flow and access on the A4. The preferred route for the junction improvements at Henley's and Waggoners corners should be announced shortly and the M4–A4 link, near Boston Manor road is in preparation for the longer term.

Improvements are also proposed for Moor roundabout and adjacent junctions in association with the proposed Prospect park development.

More modest long-term proposals are being considered at Boston Manor road junction, and for a new junction near Harlington corner.

The A4 within London is part of the red route network. This is designed to improve the movement of traffic and implementation begins in February.

Rail Privatisation

25. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he has made to his timetable for rail privatisation. [7466]

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Member to the Government's response to the Transport Select Committee report on railway finances published on 14 December 1995 which was placed in the Library of the House. The response to recommendation (a) of the report dealt with changes to the timetable for privatisation. I recently announced that Railtrack will be sold by stock market flotation in May 1996.

26. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for transport what estimate he has made of the changes in the number of (a) jobs and (b) rail services as a result of rail privatisation; and if he will make a statement. [7467]

Mr. Watts: The Government believe that privatisation will lead to significant improvements to the railway network and services. These improvements will bring benefits not only to passengers but to the employment prospects of those who work in the railway and associated industries.

M4 Widening

27. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he now has to extend the widening of the M4 between Slough East and Reading West intersections. [7468]

Mr. Norris: Following the recent review of the programme, the proposals for the M4 and the M25 to Maidenhead are to be reviewed to establish the potential for smaller-scale improvements.

The schemes between Maidenhead and Reading are now in the longer term programme and will be taken forward only as the main programme is completed.

Road Accidents

28. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new proposals he has to reduce the number of road accidents. [7469]

Mr. Norris: New measures planned or underway to improve road safety include the introduction of the theory part of the driving test in July and the safe town initiative.

London Transport Fares

29. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the increase in London Transport fares over (a) the past five years and (b) the last decade; and what was the general inflation rise over the same period. [7470]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is shown in the table.

Percentage increase in	1989–90 to 1994–95	1984–85 to 1994–95
London Bus fares	49	120
London Underground fares	50	122
General prices as measured by the retail prices index	24	61

Transport Projects, Greater London

30. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in what order he expects to announce firm decisions on each of the main major transport projects planned for Greater London. [7471]

Mr. Norris: This will depend upon a number of factors including the availability of public and private finance.

Road Accidents (Bicycles)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to make it mandatory for bicycles to be fitted with a warning bell. [8567]

Mr. Norris: We have recently gone out to public consultation on proposals to update the Pedal Bicycles (Safety) Regulations with a view to incorporating into them the latest British Standard on the construction of pedal cycles. This consultation also asks for views on the compulsory fitting and use of bells on pedal cycles and we shall be considering the matter in the light of responses.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road accidents in each of the past 10 years have involved bicycles. [8564]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Number of accidents (GB)
1985	27,482
1986	26,641
1987	26,616
1988	26,161
1989	28,941
1990	26,724
1991	25,042
1992	24,962
1993	24,300
1994	25,065

Roads Programme

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which Minister in his Department was responsible for discussions over the roads programme budget with the Chief Secretary to the Treasury. [9518]

Sir George Young: I am responsible for my Department's public expenditure discussions with the Chief Secretary to the Treasury.

Environmental Pollution

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will (1) specifically address each of the recommendations listed in the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Environment", when he responds to that report; [9097]

(2) when he intends to respond to the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Environment". [9096]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to her on 6 December 1995, Official Report, columns 264–69.

Public Transport, Leeds

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with representatives of West Yorkshire passenger transport authority to discuss public transport in Leeds. [7464]

Mr. Norris: I met representatives from West Yorkshire passenger transport authority in Leeds on 25 September 1995 and I expect to meet them again soon.

Trunk Road Programme

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "Managing the Trunk Road Programme". [8661]

Mr. Watts: The environmental impacts of each scheme in the national roads programme are assessed carefully and considered before a decision is taken to proceed.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if "Managing the Trunk Road Programme" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by the Department of the Environment; and if he will publish the appraisal; [8658]

(2) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in "Managing the Trunk Road Programme" were considered in any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [8659]

(3) how "Managing the Trunk Road Programme" was modified by the results of any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [8660]

Mr. Watts: The 1995 review involved a re-assessment of priorities within the roads programme rather than the adoption of a new policy. Each scheme's likely effects on the environment were taken into account during the review. A number of schemes were withdrawn because they could not achieve an acceptable environmental balance.

Birmingham New Street Station (Safety)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the railway inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive is taking to ensure the safety of platform gaps at Birmingham New Street station. [8959]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack and train operators are responsible for safety at this station.

The Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate monitors the actions of Railtrack and the train operators to ensure that an acceptable level of safety is maintained.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recommendations he has received from the railway inspectorate in relation to platform safety at Birmingham New Street station. [8960]

Mr. Watts: None.

Heathrow to Paddington Rail Link

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of the Heathrow to Paddington express rail link. [9389]

Mr. Watts: The Heathrow express rail link, a joint venture between British Airports Authority and Railtrack, is under construction. The Heathrow express service, which will run between Heathrow and Paddington every 15 minutes, is expected to start in June 1998.

Bus and Rail Passengers

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the changes in distance travelled by passengers by bus and rail since 1979; and what assessment he has made of the figures for (a) the United States and (b) other countries in Western Europe. [9155]

Mr. Norris: Since 1979 travel in Great Britain by bus and coach has decreased by 12 per cent. while that by rail is virtually unchanged. Statistics for international companies are not available in the form requested because data are collected on a differing basis in each country.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on official hospitality by agencies associated with his Department in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what is projected for 1995–96. [9169]

Mr. Norris: The amount spend on official hospitality by Department of Transport agencies in 1993–94 and 1994–95 and projected spend for 1995–96 are as follows:

	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
Highways Agency[1]	—	6,125	4,524
The Coastguard Agency[1]	—	9,013	12,000
Marine Safety Agency[1]	—	16,825	16,020
Driving Standards Agency	1,737	281	2,000

	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
Transport Research Laboratory	4,255	4,026	1,850
Vehicle Certification Agency	1,443	674	1,200
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	9,067	11,247	14,693
Total	16,502	48,191	52,287

[1] Agencies not in existence in 1993–94.

London Transport

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the reorganisation of London Transport, announced by the chairman on 24 November 1994, was completed. [8943]

Mr. Norris: The timing of changes to LT's internal organisation is primarily a matter for its management, but I understand that the re-organisation was substantially completed by April 1995.

Fitness to Drive

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will name the members of the panel of optometrists who responded to an EU directive which has required a change in the legislation, with effect from 1 July 1996, covering medical aspects of fitness to drive. [8633]

Mr. Norris: The Department does not have information about which members of the Association of Optometrists contributed to the response.

Road Accidents (Red Routes)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the accident rate has been on red routes (a) for the last five years and (b) for the five years before the roads were designated as red routes. [9342]

Mr. Norris: The information is not available in the form requested. Implementation of the red route network began only in 1994–95. The Traffic Director for London will be monitoring its performance.

Railways Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the gross capital spending on track and property infrastructure in each of the last 10 years, including the projection up to the end of the current financial year by Railtrack and British Rail, by region and nationally; and if he will make a statement. [8463]

Mr. Watts: The table shows the capital spending on track and property infrastructure nationally for each of the last ten years.

1986–87	[1]460
1987–88	[1]539
1988–89	[1]521
1989–90	[1]661
1990–91	[1]695
1991–92	[1]862
1992–93	[1]938
1993–94	[1]825
1994–95	[2]695
1995–96	[3]780

[1] Spending on track renewals, signalling and track projects, electrification, telecoms, terminals (which includes some international spending), depots and other.
[2] Does not include any international spending.
[3] Estimated.

The information is not available on a regional basis.

National Road Programme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the parliamentary constituency or constituencies in which each scheme in the national road programme lies; and if he will indicate changes in the status of those schemes listed in his answer to the hon. Member for Newport, East (Mr. Hughes) of 1 December 1994, Official Report, column 802. [8220]

Mr. Watts: I have put in the Library the schemes included in the national road programme as set out in "Managing the Trunk Road Programme" November 1995. The table is sorted in constituency order showing the 1995 review status and the previous 1994 review status of the included schemes. We have included under the constituency heading, some schemes which, although outside the constituency boundary, are considered as having an impact upon the adjacent areas. The table does not include those national road schemes currently under construction. I shall also place copies of this information in the Library.

Heathrow Airport (Night Flights)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will (a) obtain from the British Airports Authority and (b) publish those flights which landed at Heathrow airport between midnight and 7 am on Christmas morning 1995; and if he will make a statement. [8218]

Mr. Norris: The information from BAA plc is as follows:

Airline aircraft	Origin	Due	Actual
Deutsche-Rettungsflugwacht Cessna 441	Berlin–Tempelhof	0010	0029

Of these landings, all of those between midnight and 06.00 counted against the movements limit and against the noise quota except for the Cessna flight from Berlin, that aircraft being exempt from the night restrictions.

Diesel Engine Pollution

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 59, how many telephone calls have been received by the Vehicle Inspectorate enforcement group offices reporting smoking diesels; and what estimate he has made of the cost of making this a freephone facility. [8211]

Mr. Norris: The number of phone calls made to the smoky diesel hotline since its launch in 1991 was detailed in my answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 882–83.

Based on the latest figures—11,861 calls between April and October 1995—we estimate that the direct cost of setting up the hotline as a freephone facility and running it for a year would be between £7,500 and £10,500. This excludes the cost of staff to answer and follow up calls.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has as to how many dwellings on the Trowbridge estate, Hackney will in the absence of a medical condition aggravated by physical effects qualify as seriously affected under the discretionary purchase scheme published by Union Rail in July 1995 in relation to the channel tunnel rail link. [9086]

Mr. Watts: No estimate has been made of the number of dwellings on the Trowbridge estate which might qualify under the scheme. It is for individual owner occupiers to apply if they consider they may be eligible.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what predicted levels of settlement will qualify as seriously affecting the enjoyment of a property for the purposes of the discretionary purpose scheme for the channel tunnel rail link published in July 1995. [9075]

Mr. Watts: Under the discretionary purchase guidelines it is for Union Railways Ltd. to decide whether predicted levels of settlement seriously affect the enjoyment of an individual property, taking account also of other relevant factors that would affect enjoyment.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek an amendment to paragraph 6 of the discretionary purchase scheme published in July 1995 by Union Rail to reassure property owners that predicted settlement of appropriate severity in combination with diminution of value will trigger an offer to buy from Union Rail. [9087]

Mr. Watts: Settlement and many other relevant factors can already be taken into account in considering applications for purchase under the discretionary purchase guidelines for the channel tunnel rail link.

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Materials (Exports)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 473, if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidelines of the nuclear suppliers group. [8282]

The Prime Minister: A copy will be placed in the Library shortly.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to support the application by Cyprus for membership of the European Union if there has not been a settlement on the division of Cyprus before the application is discussed. [8548]

The Prime Minister: We welcome the prospect of Cypriot membership of the EU. We want to see the whole island join, on the basis of a bizonal, bicommunal federation. The prospect of accession provides an opportunity which the United Kingdom and its EU partner's are determined to use to facilitate the search for a settlement.

Sport on Television

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Prime Minister whether the policy on sport on television contained in the letter from the Under-Secretary of State to the hon. Member for The Wrekin dated 19 December 1995 is now being reviewed by the Prime Minister. [8705]

The Prime Minister: As my hon. Friend made clear, the Government's position is that sporting bodies should in general be free to dispose of their broadcasting rights in the interests of their sport. I am aware of public debate on this issue; and we are keeping it under close review.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Prime Minister how many mobile telephones were supplied to the Department of the Lord Privy Seal and Leader of the House of Lords in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [9126]

The Prime Minister: A mobile telephone was purchased for the office of my right hon. and noble Friend in 1993, from one supplier, and two were purchased in 1994, from another.

Sport (National Body)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister what consultations he has had, or intends to have with (a) the Sports Council and (b) governing bodies of individual sports, concerning his proposal to establish a national academy or institute of sport; and if he intends promotion of wider participation in all sporting activity to be one of its principal objectives. [8481]

The Prime Minister: I made clear my policy on the British academy of sport in the policy statement "Sport: Raising the Game". The Sports Council is now consulting widely on what the structure and content of the academy might be. A copy of the council's consultation paper was placed in the Library of the House, and the closing date for responses is 31 January.

The British academy of sport will be the top of a sporting ladder involving schools, clubs and further and higher education institutions, and other sport's centres, and will enable all those who wish to participate in sport to do so at as high a level as their abilities allow.

Fisheries

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to raise fisheries at the intergovernmental conference; what factors led to him formulating these proposals; and if he will make a statement. [8382]

The Prime Minister: The common fisheries policy is not on the agenda of the intergovernmental conference. The IGC will be concerned with treaty change rather than the content of particular policies. We will continue to work for the improvement in the operation of the CFP in the appropriate fora.

Dr. al-Masari

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library all the written representations made by the Saudi authorities over the presence in the United Kingdom of Dr. al-Masari; and what was the response of the Government. [9174]

The Prime Minister: It is not my normal practice to do so.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions and on what dates he was asked directly or indirectly, formally or otherwise by the Saudi authorities about the presence in the United Kingdom of Dr. al-Masari; and what response he gave on each occasion. [9171]

The Prime Minister: The presence and activities of Dr. al-Masari in the United Kingdom have been raised by the Saudi authorities on a number of occasions. The Saudi's have been told that Her Majesty's Government disapprove of Dr. al-Masari's activities, and that he would be treated strictly in accordance with United Kingdom and international law.

Severe Weather (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Prime Minister if he will visit those areas of Glasgow his Department estimates to be worst affected by the recent severe weather conditions. [8957]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland, and his colleagues have already made a series of visits to water authority headquarters, including Glasgow, to meet the staff and hear at first hand about the handling of the problems created by record low temperatures and the thaw over the holiday period. Disruption was kept to a minimum and questions of hardship are being addressed as speedily as possible. My right hon. Friend has established a working party to report on general lessons.

Knighthoods

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what is his policy on the recommendation for knighthoods of lords mayor of the City of London. [9685]

The Prime Minister: Such recommendations are considered in the same way as other recommendations for honours.

10 Downing Street (Functions)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how many functions at 10 Downing street since November 1990 have been at the expense of the Conservative party; [9820]

(2) what guidelines are provided to the organisers of fund-raising events held at 10 Downing street in aid of political parties. [9821]

The Prime Minister: Ministers under this and previous Administrations have been allowed—at their own or party expense—to host non-official or party receptions or functions in Downing street. All catering, staff and other direct expenses must be met by the organisers of the event. Appropriate arrangements are required for security clearance.

Mr. John Spellar: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how many functions to raise money for political parties have been held in 10 Downing street since November 1990; [9824]

(2) how many functions to raise money for political parties were held in 10 Downing street between January 1980 and November 1990. [9819]

The Prime Minister: Under this and previous Administrations, a variety of functions have been held at No. 10 Downing street where the costs have been met by political parties. The purpose of such functions is not a matter for the Government, but I can confirm that since November 1990, there have been no functions at No. 10 Downing street at which funds have been raised for political parties, or for which tickets have been sold for the benefit of political parties.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Clergy Pensions

Mr. Cohen: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what arrangements are being made for the division of clergy pensions following divorce, and if he will make a statement. [9480]

Mr. Alison: The Pensions Act 1995 makes provision for accrued rights to prospective benefits under an occupational pension scheme to be taken into account by the court in determining a financial settlement on divorce. The settlement may include an order allocating to a former spouse part of a benefit when it becomes payable under the scheme. These arrangements will apply to the scheme for those in the Church's ministry in the same way as to any other occupational pension scheme.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Turkish Government on a framework for discussions to lead to a settlement of the division of Cyprus. [8549]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister discussed Cyprus with the Turkish Prime Minister, Mrs. Ciller, when she was in London on 22 November.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Greek Government on a framework for discussions to lead to a settlement of the division of Cyprus. [8550]

Mr. Davis: We discuss the Cyprus dispute regularly with the Greek Government.

Departmental Officials

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what rules of procedure relate to the declaration of private business interests in respect of officials of his Department posted overseas. [8632]

Mr. Hanley: All Foreign and Commonwealth office officials, overseas or not, who come into contact in an official capacity with a matter concerning a company, partnership or other business concern which they have an interest, must disclose that interest fully in writing.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what occasions members of his Department (a) addressed a meeting, (b) attended a meeting and (c) met officials from the Gulf Centre for Strategic Studies; and if he will list the Ministers and officials involved. [8647]

Mr. Hanley: This Department has had occasional contact with the Gulf Centre for Strategic Studies to discuss matters of mutual concern.

Hong Kong

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future situation including rights to citizenship of the citizens who belong to non-Chinese ethnic groups of Hong Kong after 30 June 1997. [8556]

Mr. Hanley: Hong Kong ethnic minority British dependent territories citizens can become British nationals (overseas) before 1 July 1997. Any who do not apply to become British nationals (overseas) will automatically become British Overseas citizens. Hong Kong ethnic minority British dependent territories citizens have guaranteed right of abode in Hong Kong both before and after 1 July 1997.

International Agreements

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's publication "International Agreements: Practice and Procedures—Guidance Notes". [9037]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Yes.

Dr. al-Masari

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultation he or other Ministers of his Department have had with the Secretary of State for the Home Department and the President of the Board of Trade concerning the case of the Saudi Arabian Citizen, Mohammed al-Masari. [8699]

Mr. Hanley: Ministers have consulted on the case of Dr. al-Masari, as is normal for issues of mutual concern.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions and on what dates he was asked directly or indirectly, formally or otherwise, by the Saudi authorities about the presence in the United Kingdom of Dr. al-Masari; and what response he gave on each occasion. [9172]

Mr. Hanley: The presence and activities of Dr. al-Masari in the UK have been raised by the Saudi authorities on a number of occasions. The Saudis have been told that Her Majesty's Government disapprove of Dr. al-Masari's activities, but that he would be treated strictly in accordance with UK and international law.

Saudi Arabia (Ambassador Designate)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) salary, (b) fees, (c) emoluments and (d) benefits in kind the ambassador designate to Saudi Arabia received as a non-executive director of Vickers while on secondment from the Foreign Office. [8546]

Mr. Hanley: The ambassador-designate to Saudi Arabia is an established member of Her Majesty's diplomatic service. He has therefore received no salary, fees, emoluments or benefits in kind as a non-executive director. Vickers has, however, met the travelling expenses to enable him to attend board meetings in the UK.

Human Rights

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries to which his Department has made representations concerning human rights abuses during the past five years. [8568]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: During the period in question, we have regularly made representations—either bilaterally or with our European partners—to a large number of other Governments concerning human rights abuses. Details of such representations over the past five years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Hong Kong and Beijing. [8570]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary visited Hong Kong and China from 6 to 11 January. In Hong Kong, he met the governor, members of the Legislative and Executive Councils, senior Hong Kong Government and British officials and business and community figures. This gave him an invaluable opportunity to hear at first hand the views and concerns of the people of Hong Kong about their future.

My right hon. and learned Friend was warmly received in Peking and held frank and constructive discussions with President Jiang Zemin, Premier Li Peng, Vice Premier Qian Qichen, and the director of the State Council of Hong Kong and Macau Affairs.

Bosnia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the EU administrator in Mostar in respect of relations between the Croat and Moslim population in that city and a possible EU withdrawal from the Croat-Muslim federation. [8573]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The EU administrator's diplomatic adviser briefed officials on the situation in Mostar at a meeting of the EU ad hoc working group on the former Yugoslavia on 10 January.

The EU's mandate to administer Mostar expires on 23 July 1996.

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications, on what subjects, he has recently received from the British ambassador to Saudi Arabia. [8574]

Mr. Hanley: The British ambassador to Saudi Arabia reports regularly on a wide range of issues.

Environmental Pollution Report

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates and on what matters in connection with the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Environment", he has made representations to the Secretary of State for Tranport. [9099]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: None.

British Troops (Torture)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which procedures are in place for acting on claims that British troops may have been subjected to psychological torture while hostages or prisoners. [9011]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: It is standard operational procedure for British troops to be debriefed after an operation. This was the case following the release of the British hostages by the Bosnian Serb army in June. The British Government will pass on any evidence of war crimes to the international criminal tribunal for the former Yugoslavia.

United Nations War Crimes Tribunal

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, giving their countries of origin and legal background, the names of the judges appointed to serve on the United Nations war crimes tribunal investigating war crimes in the former Yugoslavia. [8651]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: There are 11 judges in total. Five sit in the appeals chamber. The other six are split into two three-person teams, which preside over the two trial chambers.

Trial chamber 1 consists of:—Judge Elisabeth Odio Benito, Costa Rica, former Minister of Justice in Costa Rica from May 1990;—Judge Claude Jorda, France, former public prosecutor of the Appeals Court in Paris from 1992;—Judge Fouad Riad, Egypt, former vice-president of the Institut de Droit International from 1993.

Trial chamber 2 consists of:—Judge Gabrielle McDonald, USA, former visiting professor of law, St Mary's school of law, San Antonio, Texas from August 1991;—Judge Lal Chand Vohrah, Malaysia, former High court judge;—Judge Rustam S. Sidhwa, Pakistan, former judge of the Supreme Court from 1989 to 1992.

The appeals chamber consists of:—Judge Antonio Cassese, Italy, former president of the Council of Europe Committee for the Prevention of Torture from 1989;—judge Jules Deschenes, Canada, former chairman of the Commission of Inquiry on War Criminals in Canada from 1985–87;—Judge Adolphus G. Karibi-Whyte, Nigeria, former justice to the Supreme Court from 1984;—Judge Haopei Li, China, former arbitrator of the Permanent Court of Arbitration from 1993;—Judge Sir Ninian Stephen, Australia, Governor-General of Australia from 1982–89.

United Nations Compensation Fund

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, columns 54–55, if he will list the number of paid claims for each country and international organisation. [9532]

Mr. Hanley: The previous answer of 9 January included six countries which had submitted claims which were either transferred to another category or rejected. Paid claims by country or organisation are as follows:

Algeria: 1
Australia: 7
Bangladesh: 79
Belgium: 4
Bulgaria: 3
Canada: 11
China: 2
Egypt: 337
Ethiopia: 1
France: 47

NORTHERN IRELAND

Business in the Community

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when Business in the Community was formed; how many businesses are members; what assessment he has made of its ability to represent businesses in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement about the selection of this organisation in connection with the partnerships associated with the EU peace and reconciliation funds. [7385]

Mr. Moss: Business in the Community Northern Ireland was established in 1989 and currently has 175 business members. BIC (NI) seeks to develop the involvement of businesses in the economic and social regeneration of disadvantaged urban and rural areas.

Given the emphasis on community participation under sub-programme 6—district partnerships of the EU special support programme for peace and reconciliation—it is envisaged that BIC (NI) will facilitate the nominations of business representatives to the Northern Ireland Partnership Board in consultation with the three primary organisations representative of business, namely the Northern Ireland Chamber of Commerce and the Institute of Directors (NI).

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many mobile telephones have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [8032]

Sir John Wheeler: The information relating to the Departments of Finance and Personnel, Economic Development, Agriculture and Education, and partial information relating to the Northern Ireland Office is as follows:

	Mobile phones supplied	Number of suppliers
1988–89	21	2
1989–90	5	1
1990–91	10	3
1991–92	8	2
1992—93[1]	58	5
1993–94[1]	48	3
1994–95[1]	61	4
1995–96[1]	73	4

[1] Information from Northern Ireland Office available from 1992–93 to 1995–96 only.

Annual information relating to the Departments of the Environment and Health and Social Services could be provided only at disproportionate cost; however, they have purchased a total of 259 mobile phones from three suppliers over the last eight years.

Emergency Legislation

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Mr. John Rowe QC will be making further reports on the working of (a) the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) act 1978 and (b) the prevention of terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act. [8524]

Sir John Wheeler: It is not my intention to ask John Rowe QC to carry out a report on the operation in 1995 of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991, given that the successor legislation is undergoing its parliamentary stages. The question of a report on the operation of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 falls to my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary. As my right hon. and learned Friend stated in the House on 9 January 1996, Official Report column 33, we understand that Mr Rowe has been asked to report on the operation of that Act in 1995.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who the Government have commissioned to conduct their review of emergency legislation; what assistance that person will receive from others; what are the terms of reference; and when the reviewing body is expected to report. [8482]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the speech of my right hon. and learned Friend on Second Reading of Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Bill on 9 January 1996, Official Report, columns 31–39.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which amendments accepted by the Government in respect of the workings of the emergency provisions legislation were suggested by (a) Lord

Gardiner, (b) Sir George Baker, (c) Lord Colville and (d) Mr. John Rowe QC. [8523]

Sir John Wheeler: The following proposed amendments to the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Bill were recommended by (a) Lord Gardiner; (b) Sir George Baker; (c) Lord Colville and (d) John Rowe QC in their respective command papers:

Changes to schedule 1 by making offences under sections 8 and 10 of the Theft Act (Northern Ireland) 1969—robbery and aggravated burglary—capable of being certified out: Baker and Rowe.

Take provision of more flexible scheme for time limits on remand under clause 8: Rowe.

The creation of an offence of failing to stop for a search under clause 20: Rowe.

Changing the authority for searches from Chief Inspector to Inspector in clauses 20 and 23: Rowe.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) guidelines and (b) other advice has been issued by his Department regarding the extension of the private finance initiative to the operation of health services. [9080]

Sir John Wheeler: The Department of Health and Social Services has issued a capital investment manual incorporating guidelines and advice on the private finance initiative in line with the national health service.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which capital projects are currently being considered under the private finance initiative; and what is the cost of each project. [9056]

Sir John Wheeler: Projects are being considered in the areas of water and sewage, transport, roads, health education and information technology. With the exception of the initial water and sewerage projects, which have an estimated value of £20–25 million, it is too early to provide an estimate of costs for other projects.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the system for cold weather payments. [8079]

Mr. Roger Evans: There are no plans for major changes to the scheme. However, after the end of March each year, we review the operation of the scheme over the previous winter with the Meteorological Office. In particular, we look at the links between weather stations and postcode areas and, as a result, minor adjustments are made.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many times each of the weather monitoring stations across the United Kingdom have triggered the system of cold weather payments since the last time that the map was revised. [8649]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

For information about Northern Ireland, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

1. The network of 55 weather stations was updated for the start of the 1995–96 scheme, effective from 1 November 1995.
2. The information relates to Great Britain only.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received respecting the system for cold weather payments during the most recent period of inclement weather; and if he will make a statement. [9269]

Mr. Evans: Since 21 December, my right hon. Friend has been asked nine parliamentary questions and received 22 pieces of correspondence about this matter.

Setting-up Home Grant

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to include a setting-up home grant financed through the social fund for the benefit of homeless people. [8261]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Government have no plans to change the broad principles of the discretionary social fund, which we believe uses available resources effectively to help large numbers of people who are most in need. Community care grants and interest-free loans from the social fund are made to many people establishing themselves in a permanent home in the community. In April 1995, we introduced additional guidance advising social fund officers to give particular consideration to helping vulnerable or recently homeless people moving to permanent accommodation to remain in the community if there was a danger that they might otherwise go into care.

We believe it would be a backward step to reintroduce a system of mandatory grants akin to the previous single payment scheme, which was open to abuse and spiralling expenditure.

Institutional Discrimination

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to be able to reply to the question from the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow of 22 November relating to institutional discrimination listed by his Department between men and women for social security benefit purposes. [9178]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 January, Official Report, column 326.

Funeral Payments

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to increase the limit which currently applies to the funeral payment from the social fund towards funeral director's fees. [8584]

Mr. Roger Evans: Like other social fund payments, funeral payments are not subject to the annual uprating of income-related benefits. However, we keep the level of all social fund payments, including the ceiling placed on the amount allowable for funeral directors' fees, under review.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what assessment he has made of the average cost for the services of funeral directors when calculating the limit which applies to funeral payments from the social fund; [8588]

(2) what criteria underlay the calculation of the £500 limit on the funeral payment from the social fund payable towards funeral directors' fees. [8582]

Mr. Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) on 9 January 1995, Official Report, columns 160–61.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes have been made to the limit on the amount payable from the social fund for funeral payments toward funeral directors' fees in the last 10 years. [8583]

Mr. Evans: From 1980 to 1987, supplementary benefit single payments regulations provided for payment of an unlimited amount sufficient to meet the reasonable cost of any specified essential expenses for the funeral director's fees which fell to be met by the responsible person. This provision was carried forward to the social fund in 1987 and remained unchanged until 5 June 1995, when a ceiling of £500 on the amount allowable for specified funeral directors' fees for a dignified social fund funeral was introduced.

Divorce

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the net cost to the public purse of (a) earmarking and (b) pension-splitting, in the event of divorce; and what are the main component parts of the costs. [9481]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is in the table.

There would also be extra administration costs for public service schemes. If the state earnings-related pension scheme was spilt, this would result in additional costs.

My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, will reply in writing in respect of the legal aid and court costs of both earmarking and pension splitting in the year 2020 as the information is not immediately available.

£ million

	Earmarking		Pension-splitting
	1997	2020	1997	2020
Costs to unfunded public service schemes	0	0	500	less than 50
Loss in tax revenue and increased tax relief	0	0	negligible	80
Income related benefits	negligible	–50	negligible	–70
Legal Aid and court costs	up to 130	n/a	up to 120	n/a

1. Costs to unfunded public service schemes are rounded to the nearest £100 million in 1997.
2. All other costs are rounded to ther nearest £10 million.
3. A minus sign denotes a saving to the Exchequer.
4. Estimates are for full year costs, at constant prices.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9227]

Mr. Burt: A brief guide to the Disability Discrimination Act was issued in November 1995 and further information material on the provisions of the Act will follow. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment is currently consulting on a draft code of practice relating to the employment provisions in the Act and statutory guidance related to the definition of disability. Consultation on proposals for regulations under the education, employment and definition provisions of the Act is also currently under way. I will be asking the National Disability Council, when it first meets, to produce and consult on a code of practice relating to the rights of access to goods and services. At the same time, we shall consult on associated regulations. All these items will be published in plenty of time to allow employers and service providers to prepare themselves for the introduction of the new rights and duties. We will ensure that this Department and any bodies for which it is responsible will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

DEFENCE

Former Yugoslavia (Vessels)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names and tonnage of all British-registered ships hired for NATO/UN operations in the former Yugoslavia and the names and tonnage of all non-British vessels with their country of registration; and if he will make a statement. [7767]

Mr. Soames: The names, tonnages and country of registration of (dry cargo) vessels chartered, are as follows. Details are given by financial year.

Non-British vessels chartered for NATO/UN operations in former Yugoslavia

None of these vessels is British registered. We charter on the international market through the Baltic exchange and all ship owners have equal opportunity to compete in open competition for MOD business.

In addition to these vessels chartered, the United States Military Sealift Command loaned two vessels free of charge and a further two vessels on repayment, during the current financial year. We were also able to use a UN chartered and funded vessel at no cost to the MOD.

Overseas Training Assistance

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those countries in which British military personnel have provided training assistance during the past five years. [8571]

Mr. Soames: Available records show that UK military personnel provided training assistance in the following countries between 1 January 1991 and 31 December 1995:

Albania
Angola
Antigua and Barbuda[1]
Australia
Bahrain
Bangladesh
Barbados[1]

[1] Trained by a team based in Barbados.
[2] Collective training in Latvia.

This list covers those countries to which short-term training teams have been sent, as well as those countries in which we have resident loan service personnel or longer term British military advisory and training teams. A short-term training team also deployed to Puerto Rico to assist US forces in training the combined Caribbean community and common market contingent—comprising detachments from Jamaica, Antigua, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Guyana and Trinidad and Tobago—and also contingents from Bangladesh and Guatemala to prepare them for operations with the multinational force in Haiti. In addition, forces on exercise overseas often provide limited training to, or train alongside, the armed forces of the host nation. A central record of such training is not, however, maintained.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those countries whose military forces have been provided with training facilities in the United Kingdom during the past five years. [8572]

Mr. Soames: Available records show that military personnel from the following countries were given training in the UK between 1 January 1991 and 31 December 1995:

Meat Purchases

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much meat was purchased by his Department in each of the last five years; how much of this was British meat in 1995; and if he will list the other countries from which he purchases meat, together with the quantity of meat. [8987]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Since 1 October 1994, when the Ministry of Defence food supply contract commenced, NAAFI has purchased meat for my Department. Before that date the Ministry purchased meat direct. The value of meat purchased for the last five financial years is as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Purchased by MOD	Purchased by NAAFI
1990–91	34.290	—
1991–92	30.122	—
1992–93	30.581	—
1993–94	30.376	—
1994–95	[1]15.664	[2]13.877

[1] April to September 1994.
[2] October to March 1995.

During calendar year 1995 my Department bought £8.6 million British meat from NAAFI and £19.861 million overseas meat from NAAFI. NAAFI procures meat from wholesalers and importers on the open market to obtain the best possible price. The source of each cut of meat therefore varies from month to month, however, all pork, boned and rolled sirloin, beef diced, beef mince and ox liver have always been United Kingdom sourced. NAAFI does not have detailed records of how much meat has been procured from each overseas source, but the countries most commonly used are: Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Denmark, Holland, Australia, New Zealand, Eire, France and Chile.

This information applies to beef, pork, lamb, poultry, gammon, offal, veal, rabbit, goat, and bacon but not to manufactured products such as sausages, pasties or burgers.

Gulf War (Low Flying)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the use of low-level attacks by British aircraft during the Gulf war; what changes to low-level flying operations were made during the war; and if he will state the reasons for these changes. [8991]

Mr. Soames: In the initial stages of the air campaign Tornado GR1s carried out low-level attacks against Iraqi airfields. These were established RAF tactics designed to allow attacking aircraft to delay detection by hostile radars and to minimise the effectiveness of air and ground defences, particularly when on missions against heavily defended targets. Moreover, the JP233 airfield denial weapon, an important element of plans to disrupt Iraqi air operations, was designed to be delivered at low level. It was always the intention that attacks would in due course be switched to medium level and this decision was taken by the operational commanders on day four of the campaign once it became clear that the task of grounding the Iraqi air force had been achieved and that, with the substantial degradation of the Iraqi air defence system, the threat to operations at medium level was much reduced.

The lessons of the Gulf war have been extensively evaluated. The principal lessons were set out in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1992" and further evidence was provided to the Defence Select Committee in connection with its report on the implementation of the lessons learned from Operation Granby. In respect of low flying, the conflict demonstrated the need to provide a more flexible capability for the full spectrum of operational environments. The need for low-level flying nevertheless remains. In many scenarios it is critical to the success of operations and the special skills required cannot be acquired at short notice.

Army Ambulances

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure that new ambulances for the Army are locally sourced. [9455]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for South-West Cambridgeshire (Sir A. Grant) on 9 January, Official Report, column 3.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how frequently Army ambulances are replaced. [9457]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The last major procurement of Army ambulances was made between 1980 and 1983.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ambulances are currently operated by the Army; and when the ambulance fleet is due for replacement. [9458]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Army currently operates 858 ambulances which are due for replacement over the next four years.

Chemical and Biological Warfare

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what collaboration has occurred in the field of chemical and biological warfare as a result of the mutual defence assistance programme between Britain and the United States of America. [7306]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No reference has been found in the records available to such a programme.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider instructing the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency to hold records centrally on the annual amount it spends on overseas travel; and if he will make a statement. [8433]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No. The delegation of authority for expenditure on overseas travel to managers within the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's business sectors conforms fully with my Department's financial management procedures and I see no reason to interfere with the chief executive's arrangements for managing the agency.

RAF Training Group Defence Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider instructing the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency to hold records centrally on the annual amount it spends on overseas travel; and if he will make a statement. [8432]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No. The delegation of authority for expenditure on overseas travel to managers within the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency conforms fully with my Department's financial management procedures and I see no reason to interfere with the chief executive's arrangements for managing the agency.

Dr. al-Masari

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions and on what dates he was asked directly or indirectly, formally or otherwise, by the Saudi authorities about the presence in the United Kingdom of Dr. al-Masari; and what response he gave on each occasion. [9173]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The presence and activities of Dr. al-Masari in the UK have been raised by the Saudi authorities on a number of occasions. The Saudis have been told that Her Majesty's Government disapprove of Dr. al-Masari's activities, and that he would be treated strictly in accordance with UK and international law.

Torture

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice and training is provided to British troops to withstand the effects of psychological torture. [9010]

Mr. Soames: Conduct after capture training is made available to those personnel most vulnerable to capture in time of war or other crisis.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on allegations of torture made by British service personnel while hostages of Serbian forces. [8650]

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received of the allegations of psychological torture of British troops taken hostage in Bosnia; and what assessment he has made of their accuracy. [9009]

Mr. Soames: There is no evidence that the British service personnel who were taken hostage by the Bosnian Serbs in May 1995 were physically tortured or subjected to a campaign of psychological abuse. While the conditions in which they were held were far from ideal, they were generally treated satisfactorily. However, in an isolated incident, one British soldier had a threat made against his life by his captors. This was totally unacceptable conduct by the Bosnian Serbs and we strongly condemn it. All UK hostages were debriefed on their release and reports have been forwarded to the UN war crimes tribunal which is investigating the detention of UN personnel.

Land Mines, Bosnia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many service personnel are involved in the implementation force de-mining effort in Bosnia; and what form of training they have received; [9003]

(2) if he will make a statement about the progress of the IFOR de-mining effort in Bosnia; and if it is running to schedule; [8986]

(3) what assessment he has made of the problems posed by land mines placed in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement. [9001]

Mr. Soames: The UK's contribution to IFOR includes 42 service personnel who are specially trained in explosive ordnance disposal. Their role is, however, limited to monitoring and co-ordinating the programme for the clearance of mines and related deices, except where there is a serious threat to life or where clearance is necessary to allow IFOR to complete assigned tasks. Otherwise, under the terms of the peace agreement, clearance is the responsibility of the consenting parties themselves. They are required to complete clearance within the zones of separation by 19 January. The work is in progress, although efforts are being hampered by poor weather and incomplete minefield records.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many service personnel have been injured as (a) a direct and (b) an indirect consequence of land mines placed in Bosnian territory; [8984]

(2) how many service personnel have been injured as part of the IFOR de-mining effort in Bosnia. [9005]

Mr. Soames: Information is not available in the format requested. However, since operations began in the former Yugoslavia, three British service personnel have been killed and eight seriously injured in mine explosions, none of these during IFOR's operations.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the cost of the IFOR de-mining effort in Bosnia. [9004]

Mr. Soames: It is not possible to identify separately the estimated cost of IFOR's monitoring and co-ordinating of the mine clearance programme which is itself the responsibility of the parties to the peace agreement.

Ministerial Visit (Philippines)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names and designations of the civilian and military officials he met during his recent visit to the Philippines; and if he will make a statement on the defence agreement made with that country. [8569]

Mr. Portillo: During my visit to the Philippines which was hosted by the Secretary for National Defence, Mr. de Villa, I had a meeting with President Ramos and met, during official calls at the Department for National Defence and military establishments, the Under Secretary, General Gacis, the Chief of Staff, General Enrile, the commanding generals of the army and air force, Lieutenant General Soriano and Lieutenant General Acedera, and acting Flag Officer in Command of the Philippine navy, Commodore Santos, together with members of their staffs and other senior officers. I also met Mr. Gordon, the chairman and administrator of the Subic Bay metropolitan authority and members of his staff.

I was pleased to sign a defence co-operation memorandum of understanding with Secretary de Villa which will strengthen our defence relations through, for example, exchange visits and joint military exercises.

De-mining Equipment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the de-mining equipment possessed by his Department. [8988]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The primary requirement of the armed forces is to clear a path through minefield obstacles rather than to clear whole minefields. The following types of equipment are held by the United Kingdom armed forces to meet this requirement:

- Mineploughs
- Scatterable Mine Clearance Device
- Giant Viper (explosive hose)
- MIMIC (countermeasure for magnetic influence mines)
- Hand held mine detectors
- Prodders and hand held tools
- Mine and route markers
- Wheelbarrow (remote control vehicle).

Where mines have been located and marked for subsequent clearance, disposal is usually carried out using a standard demolition charge. In certain circumstances, small arms fire is used.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which de-mining projects his Department funds world wide. [9006]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Government support for de-mining programmes throughout the world is provided through the Overseas Development Administration. In this context, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) to the hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) on 29 November 1995, Official Report, column 742.

Turnstile House

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement about his Department's plans to demolish Turnstile house, London; and when this proposal was agreed; [9007]

(2) how much was spent by his Department on the refurbishment of Turnstile house, London; and when this refurbishment was conducted. [9008]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department has no plans to demolish Turnstile house. The building was vacated in September 1994 and shortly afterwards it was returned to the commercial landlord.

No money was spent by my Department on Turnstile house beyond that for routine maintenance and decoration. In the more recent years before the building was vacated, my Department paid the following amounts under the terms of its occupancy agreement.

	£ thousand 1992–93	£ thousand 1993–94	£ thousand 1994–95
Annual maintenance contribution	390	403	224
Minor works repairs and decorations	150	133	35

Nuclear Deterrent

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy in respect of the targeting of the United Kingdom's nuclear deterrent at any particular country; and when this policy was first published. [9161]

Mr. Soames: In line with the joint announcement made at the Prime Minister's meeting with President Yeltsin on 15 February 1994, all United Kingdom nuclear missiles are detargeted.

Trident Submarines (Refitting)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his Department's estimate of the cost of refitting Trident submarines at Devonport under (a) a privatised company and (b) the current management team; [8982]

(2) when he will sign the contract with Devonport Management Ltd for the refitting of Trident submarines. [8983]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Negotiations for the design and build of the facilities for refitting Vanguard class and ultimately all nuclear powered submarines at Devonport are proceeding. A decision on contract award is expected in the first part of this year. Parallel negotiations on the sale of both royal dockyards continue. The objective is to put in place the most financially beneficial long term arrangements for all Royal Navy ship refitting work. It would not be appropriate to speculate about details while negotiations are under way.

Type 23 Frigates

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cracks have been discovered in the hulls of his Department's type 23 frigates; when these cracks were discovered; on what ships they have been discovered; when his Department was warned that cracks could appear; what actions were taken by his Department following this advice; how much it will cost to repair the damage; and if he will make a statement. [8990]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Cracking in an intricate steel structure such as a warship, subjected to randomly varying sealoads, is not unusual. The cracking itself is not usually a matter for immediate concern, but any occurrence is assessed and kept under review until the next convenient opportunity for repairs.

During the construction of HMS Norfolk, the first type 23 frigate, the need for stiffening in part of the deck structure was identified using previously untried techniques. The construction of Norfolk was too far advanced for the full design change to be incorporated at that time but it was done during her first programmed docking period in 1993. All subsequent ships of the class were built with this modification included. The total estimated cost of incorporating this modification into the whole class is about £1 million.

Minor steelwork cracking has occurred in some subsequent type 23 frigates, but this has not been assessed as requiring special action. Repairs have been carried out as part of the normal ship upkeep measures and the costs have not been separately identified.

At no time has the safety of any of the type 23 frigates or their crews been at risk.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what legal costs arising from the Scott inquiry have been incurred by his Department on behalf of Ministers and ex-Ministers; and if he will name the individuals concerned; [8755]

(2) what legal costs arising from the Scott inquiry have been incurred by the Department on behalf of current and past (a) civil servants and (b) advisers and secondees. [8746]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The value of legal services charged by the Treasury Solicitor's Department together with accounts settled to date from public funds for the provision of external legal services, incurred on behalf of Ministers, ex-Ministers, civil servants and former civil servants of my Department in connection with the Scott inquiry is £215,862. No legal costs have been incurred on behalf of other advisors or secondees. The cost of any advice in connection with the Scott inquiry given by Government lawyers as part of their normal duties cannot be quantified. It is not the Government's policy to identify the individuals who have received legal advice, either directly or indirectly.

Japanese Forces (Training)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment of British interests underlay his invitation to members of the Japanese armed forces to train in the United Kingdom; how many personnel will be involved; at what cost to British public funds; what representations he has received in respect of this matter; what have been the nature of such representations; and if he will make a statement. [8575]

Mr. Portillo: I issued no such invitation. However, I expect that small numbers of Japanese officers will continue to receive training in Britain as they have since 1977. My Department has received a small number of representations from members of the public, expressing general concern about defence relations with Japan.

F16 Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the proposal to lease American F16 aircraft; and when he expects to announce his decision to the House. [8989]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department is currently evaluating a proposal to upgrade the Tornado F3's weapons systems. As a routine part of our evaluation process, we are examining the comparative costs of alternative options, including acquiring F16 aircraft from the United States. We expect to take a decision on whether or not to proceed with the Tornado F3 upgrade by the end of the current financial year. Any procurement decisions will be announced to the House in the usual way.

Export Licence Applications

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what matters are routinely addressed in the course of considering applications for defence export licences. [9272]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In assessing export licence applications, consideration is given to our national security, our policy towards the recipient country and our international obligations including the established criteria and guidelines agreed by the permanent five members of the UN Security Council; with the European Union member states and in the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe.

Supplies (Local Sourcing)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure that supplies for the British armed forces are, so far as is possible under EU regulations, locally sourced and create local employment. [9482]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We aim wherever possible and in accordance with our obligations under EU regulations to purchase all major equipment and services for the British armed forces by competitive tender to secure best value for money for the taxpayer. As a result, over 90 per cent. of our business is awarded to United Kingdom industry. In addition, low-value purchases by MOD units and establishments of minor equipment and services, which are not generally subject to the EU regulations, also make an important contribution to local employment and economies. In 1994–95, expenditure on such local purchases totalled approximately £200 million.

Gulf War

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions during the Gulf war there was an assessed threat of possible chemical agent attack which necessitated orders being given to service personnel to take nerve agent pre-treatment set tablets. [9604]

Mr. Soames: During the conduct of Operation Granby, which ran from 9 August 1990 to 11 April 1991, the assessed threat of chemical weapon attack in the theatre of operations was regarded as sufficiently high to necessitate the issuing of orders for nerve agent pre-treatment—NAPS—tablets to be taken during the period from 18 January 1991, following the start of the air war, to 1 March 1991, when hostilities ceased. The orders applied to all units and personnel in, or deploying into, theatre.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies; and if he will make a statement. [9146]

Mr. Arbuthnot: These matters are the responsibility of the chief executives of the Defence Agencies. I have asked the chief executives of the agencies to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from G. H. Wilson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the safeguarding of the provision of pre-retirement courses as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of this Agency.

We are not seeking to make economies in this area and I am taking positive action to safeguard any entitlement to pre-retirement courses which Service personnel of this Agency have.

Letter from P. Niedzwiedzki to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

REFERENCE:

A. PQ REFERENCE: 9883G

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the provision of pre-retirement courses as this area falls within the area of responsibility of the Chief Executive of Service Children's Schools (North West Europe) Agency.

SCS(NWE) staff are eligible to apply for places on MOD pre-retirement courses. Course places are arranged and approved by CM(Welfare) and the courses themselves are usually held in the UK. Participant's travel and subsistence expenses are met by the Agency. There is a regular uptake of such courses by SCS(NWE) staff.

The Agency's Framework Document confirms that welfare services are one of a range of central services provided by the MOD to the Agency. SCS(NWE) expects the current level of welfare support, including pre-retirement sources, to be continued without diminution.

Letter from Colonel A. H. Roach to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Animal Centre (DAC).

The DAC has no intention, either now or in the future, of seeking to economise on the provision of pre-retirement courses to eligible military or civilian personnel.

Letter from Paul Altobell to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

PARLIAMENTARY ENQUIRY NUMBER 9883G

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about pre-retirement courses as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA).

DASA has no plans to take special action in respect of pre-retirement courses. It is our custom to follow the lead of our parent department, the Ministry of Defence, in these matters.

Letter from Brigadier A. W. Pollard to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

PARLIAMENTARY QUESTION (PQ9883G—THE PROVISION OF PRE-RETIREMENT COURSES TO AGENCY PERSONNEL

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about what action I am taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Logistic Information Systems Agency (LISA).

All of my military staff who reach the end of their careers while serving at LISA are entitled to the normal resettlement facilities offered by the Services. My civilian staff have the same access as that enjoyed by other Civil Servants to a comprehensive programme of pre-retirement courses.

I am keen to preserve the entitlement in both cases and, in my Agency, they would be unlikely targets for saving measures.

Letter from J. R. Prince to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

PARLIAMENTARY QUESTION—ARMY TECHNICAL SUPPORT AGENCY

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about safeguarding the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of Agencies seeking to make economies as this matter falls in my area of responsibility.

The number of staff reaching retirement age in the Army Technical Support Agency in any one year is small, as are the costs associated with pre-retirement training courses. I regard pre-retirement training as an important part of preparing loyal Agency staff for retirement and, as such, would not expect to include such training in any economy exercise.

Letter from R. H. Embleton to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

In the absence on duty of the Chief Executive, I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about safeguarding the provision of pre-retirement courses.

I regard the provision of pre-retirement courses as important. All military and civilian staff of the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency are encouraged to attend such courses as they may be eligible, and entitled to under MOD regulations. I have no plans to change this situation.

Letter from Rear Admiral J. H. S. McAnally to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question, about safeguarding the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of agency economies, in my capacity as Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA).

All but the most senior (CDS) Naval personnel leave the Royal Navy before the national retirement age. In order to assist them in preparing for, and identifying a suitable second career in civilian life, they are eligible to undertake a variety of pre-release resettlement (pre-retirement) training.

The provision of resettlement training is the responsibility of the tri-Service Resettlement Organisation (TSRO) which does not form part of the NRTA. However, as Chief Executive of the NRTA, I am publicly committed in the Agency Corporate Plan "to meet the Personnel Functional Standards in respect of Service Personnel and, where appropriate, adopt similar principles for civilian employees." Personnel Functional Standards are a set of mandatory and common standards that are applied to all RN personnel wherever they are serving. The Standards may not be amended without the approval of the Navy Board. An appropriate Personnel Functional standard exists for the provision of resettlement training.

In view of the foregoing, if it should be necessary to seek economies from within the agency, the provision of resettlement courses should not be affected.

Letter from Air Vice-Marshal R. H. Kyle to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about safeguarding the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of Defence Agencies seeking to make economies because this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Maintenance Group Defence Agency (RAF MGDA).

All retiring MOD Civil Servants employed within the RAF MGDA have the opportunity to attend a pre-retirement course; this would normally take place within their last 12 months of service. I recognise this as a most valuable contribution to preparing staff for retirement and it is not a provision which would suffer as a result of any economy measure within the RAF MGDA. To reinforce this I shall be including an appropriate commitment in the RAF MGDA Civilian Training Plan.

Letter from Keith Ellender to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the provision of pre-retirement courses as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Disposal Sales Agency.

The provision of pre-retirement courses for staff in my Agency comes from central Ministry of Defence funds, in the same way that it used to before agency status was achieved.

Letter from Brian Raine to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about safeguarding the provision of pre-retirement courses as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Queen Victoria School.

I attach considerable importance to pre-retirement courses and staff are invited to apply for such courses conducted by either the Civil Service Council for Further Education or Local Education Authorities. This Agency has not sought, and currently has no plans to seek, economies in this area.

If you have any further questions about this do not hesitate to contact me.

Letter from D. A. Thomas to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about pre-retirement courses on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Defence Accounts Agency as this matters falls within his area of responsibility.

The Defence Accounts Agency will continue to ensure that all eligible staff have the opportunity to attend pre-retirement courses. Currently, provision within the Agency is normally by the MOD Welfare Service, but, if necessary, courses are also arranged locally on site or externally. Irrespective of any future proposed economy measures, it is not intended that these arrangements should be altered.

Letter from Captain W. S. Graham to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

1. I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence on what action is taken within the 'Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation (NARO)' to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses as the matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the NARO.

2. Personnel have the opportunity to attend pre-retirement courses in Portsmouth Naval Base. There are 4 per year.

3. In the event that they were stopped, we would organise our own, either by using in-house training facilities or contractors.

Letter from P. A. James to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying, on behalf of the Chief Executive of Military Survey Defence Agency (who is on duty in Germany) to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the provision of pre-retirement courses in Executive Agencies, as this matter falls within the Chief Executive's area of responsibility and I am his deputy.

Military Survey supports the continued use of pre-retirement courses run by the Ministry of Defence.

Military Survey has always encouraged personnel to attend pre-retirement courses. We have no plans to change this policy.

Letter from Brigadier M. G. R. Hodson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question (PQ9883G) to the Secretary of State for Defence, about safeguarding the provision of pre-retirement courses, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive Agency (DTMX).

For civil servants, pre-retirement courses are carried out centrally and continue to be available to Agency staff. Courses are normally offered 6 months before retirement and there are no plans to restrict their availability.

For Service personnel, resettlement courses, which are comprehensive and available to all military in their last two years of service, and are designed to provide training for a second career, continue to be provided. There are no plans to limit eligibility.

I trust that this answers your concerns. Please be assured that I will always act in the best interests of my staff, both civilian and military.

Letter from Brigadier M. J. Roycroft to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the provision of pre-retirement courses.

As the Chief Executive of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency (DCTA), I can confirm that my Agency will continue to offer all eligible staff the opportunity of attending pre-retirement courses. I do not foresee a situation arising which would cause me to change this policy.

If I can be of further help to you, please let me know.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about pre-retirement courses as, for the staff of the Meterological Office, this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive.

The Meterological Office offers a pre-retirement course to all staff. I have no intention of changing this practice.

Letter from Air Commodore P. C. Ayee to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about what actions heads of executive agencies were taking to safeguard pre-retirement courses, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment Defence Agency.

The cost of pre-retirement courses do not fall to the Agency. Pre-retirement courses for civil servants are funded directly from MOD central funds, and resettlement courses for service personnel are funded by the RAF Personnel and Training Command. Thus, any Agency economies would not affect the provision of such courses.

Letter from M. R. Pack to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

Your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about pre-retirement courses for staff in his agencies has been referred to the Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Office. Unfortunately Admiral Essenhigh is at present absent from the Office on official duty so I am replying to you on his behalf.

It is the policy of the Hydrographic Office Defence Agency to offer pre-retirement courses to all employees who are approaching retirement. These pre-retirement courses are conducted by the Somerset College of Arts and Technology which is based in Taunton. There is no intention that this policy should be changed in any way.

It is recognised by the senior management of the Hydrographic Office that these courses provide a very valuable service in assisting staff to cope better with the transition to the different lifestyle which retirement brings.

I hope this information has been of assistance.

Letter from Air Commodore A. A. Nicholson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about safeguarding the provision of pre-retirement courses in executive agencies, insofar as this bears on my own responsibilities for the Training Group Defence Agency.

I can confirm that this Agency is not seeking to make economies by reducing the provision of pre-retirement courses; and that I maintain a close interest in any proposed changes beyond the Agency's boundaries, which might affect my personnel in this respect.

I am sending a copy of this letter to the Agency's owner, the Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief Personnel & Training Command.

Letter from Brigadier K. J. W. Goad to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Army Base Storage and Distribution Agency (ABSDA), I reply to your question, to the Secretary of State for Defence, about pre-retirement courses within Defence Agencies.

Pre-retirement courses for both military and civilian ABSDA staff are funded centrally by the MoD. Within the Agency, staff are actively encouraged to make full use of redundancy counselling, outplacement services and pre-retirement courses. I can state, categorically, that ABSDA is not seeking to make economies in this area.

I trust that I have fully answered your enquiry; if not, please come back to me.

Letter from Brigadier J. R. Drew to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about pre-retirement courses, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO).

There have been no changes in the policy on pre-retirement courses since ABRO was established as a Defence Agency in April 1993. In accordance with central Ministry of Defence (MOD) policy, all staff have the opportunity to attend one pre-retirement course, which should take place during the last 12 months of service, to ensure that the information given, particularly on pensions and financial matters, is current. Where possible the arrangements are tailored to suit the individual. MOD pre-retirement courses are available either locally or in London, but in some cases individuals opt for courses at nearby colleges.

Staff leaving ABRO on early retirement or redundancy may take advantage of the MOD Outplacement Scheme (MODOPS), which provides a more extensive range of training and guidance than the standard pre-retirement courses. In the last 6 months some 53 ABRO employees have retired or been made redundant. Not all choose to attend a pre-retirement course, and in cases of medical retirement this often proves impractical. During that 6-month period, however, 21 have attended courses at their local college, 6 have attended local MOD pre-retirement courses and 7 have benefitted from the MOD Outplacement arrangements.

There are no plans to change existing arrangements.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 16 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

In DERA, despite a significant cost reduction programme, our policy on retirement is unchanged and pre-retirement courses continue to be provided for employees. The provision of such courses has been delegated to business sectors, but if the numbers of retirees does not merit a sector specific event, then individuals may be nominated to a central scheme.

Clearly DERA is always striving to improve it's efficiency and the cost effectiveness of all services, including the provision of pre-retirement courses is subject to regular review. However, it is our intention to continue to provide these courses since they are undoubtedly helpful to individuals approaching retirement since they provide guidance and help in making the transition.

I hope this information is helpful.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Attorney-General (1) what legal costs arising from the Scott inquiry have been incurred by his Department on behalf of Ministers and ex-Ministers; and if he will name the individuals concerned; [8753]

(2) what legal costs arising from the Scott inquiry have been incurred by the Department on behalf of current and past (a) civil servants and (b) advisers and secondees. [8748]

The Attorney-General: The legal costs paid to date for the legal secretariat to the Law Officers and Treasury Solicitor's Department in respect of issues arising from the Scott inquiry amount to £71,541. This sum covers advice obtained on behalf of Ministers and civil servants, both current and past. The costs of staff in the Treasury Solicitor's department providing legal services to client Departments in connection with the inquiry, are included in charges invoiced to Departments. Some legal advice has also been provided by departmental lawyers as part of their normal duties. The total cost of this advice is not quantifiable. It is not the Government's policy to identify the individuals who have received legal advice, either directly or indirectly.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Departmental Advertising Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department (b) agencies (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6559]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: MAFF advertisements have appeared in the following national and regional newspapers, periodicals and magazines during the period 1990 to 1995. The lists by title represent a wide range of promotional activities designed to communicate essential or useful information to the trade—farmers and growers concerning a variety of EU or other schemes and codes of good agricultural practice—and to the general public, particularly consumers regarding food safety and nutrition. The costs shown are media costs only and do not include VAT or other production costs. Press advertising by MAFF agencies is the responsibility of their chief executives. I have asked them to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 15 January 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on expenditure by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (known as the Central Veterinary Laboratory until 30 September 1995) on newspaper advertising.

Figures for expenditure on newspaper advertising by the Central Veterinary Laboratory can be found in a reply to a question (No. 17610) from Mrs. Ann Taylor by Mr. Jack on 18 April 1995. Expenditure consists essentially of recruitment advertising in relevant trade journals and local papers.

Letter from J. M. Rutter to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 15 January 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about expenditure on newspaper advertising by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, listed by title for each year since 1990/91, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

The VMD does not normally advertise directly in newspapers. The grant and expiry of Marketing Authorisations are announced in the official gazettes and the expenditure for 1994/95 was as follows:

Belfast Gazette	2,683
London Gazette	4,377
Edinburgh Gazette	3,823
	10,833

It is anticipated that a similar amount will be spent in 1995/96. Figures for previous years are not available without incurring disproportional expense.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 15 January 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD) to your question about expenditure on newspaper advertising since 1990–91. The Directorate was established as an executive agency on 1 April 1993. Figures prior to this date are not available. In 1993/4, PSD spent £481 on newspaper advertising and £4,440 in 1994/5. All expenditure is directly attributable to recruitment advertising.

The 1993/4, 1994/5 and estimated 1995/6 figures can be broken down as follows:

1993–94
The Times and The Observer	391
The Review (free newspaper)	100
1994–95
Yorkshire Press (Post/Evening Post)	2,719
New Scientist Magazine	1,721
1995–96
New Scientist Magazine	2,000 (estimate)

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 15 January 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS), your question regarding expenditure on newspaper advertising for this agency has been passed to me for reply.

As you know, the MHS was established on 1 April 1995 and the expenditure for the period 1 April to 30 November was £25,095.66. The estimated figure for 1995/96 is £27,331.90.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 15 January 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to you concerning your question (PQ number 236) in which you asked details of the expenditure relating to newspaper advertising for each year since 1990/91.

ADAS was formed as an Executive Agency of MAFF in 1992. Any detail relating to expenditure prior to that date would be available from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

ADAS does not keep records of expenditure by title and we can only provide details of the total amount spent. The majority of advertising in both newspapers and journals relates to recruitment of staff and a relatively small amount is spent on advertising our commercial services. As you will know, ADAS operates as a commercial consultancy organisation providing a range of services to all the land-based industries.

Expenditure has been as follows:

1993/94: £49,000

1994/95: £102,000.

No estimates are available for 1995/96.

Letter from George Trevelyan to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 15 January 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about newspaper advertising by title for this Agency a) for each year since 1990–91 and b) the estimate made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans.

The information in the form requested, by title, could not be provided without disproportionate cost

The advertising costs were for recruitment purposes and the totals were as follows:

Year	£
1990–91	19,409
1991–92	14,210
1992–93	1,640
1993–94	2,108
1994–95	10,164

The estimated advertising costs for 1995–96 for recruitment purposes in the Agency is £16,000 of which £8,145 has been spent to date

Letter from Professor P. I. Stanley to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 15 January 1996:

You asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to provide information for each of his executive agencies relating to expenditure on newspaper advertising by title in each financial year since 1990/91. The Minister has asked me to reply to you in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. Our records show that you asked a similar question in February of this year relating to expenditure on all forms of advertising but I am now aware that incorrect data was given to you. I apologies for that error but can now provide the correct information.

CSL was first launched as a MAFF Executive Agency in April 1992. Thus my reply covers the years from 1992/93 to date. Further, the Agency was significantly enlarged in April 1994 following the merger with the MAFF Food Science Laboratories and this is reflected in increased expenditure from 1994/95.

You requested only newspaper expenditure and by title for each year. I regret that the information is not readily available in this form and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However below are details of advertising expenditure, which includes advertising in specialist scientific journals as well as newspapers and is mainly for staff recruitment, as CSL is not involved in promotional advertising via this medium.

1992/93: £29.6K

1993/94: £50.0K

1995/96: £89.8K (estimated).

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 14 December to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice), how many of the bovines in which BSE was confirmed were from (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland; and of the carcases, how many from each country were (i) cows, (ii) maiden heifers, (iii) steers and (iv) bulls. [7138]

Mrs. Browning: In his reply of 14 December to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) Official Report, column 1094, my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food gave the number of cases of BSE confirmed in the United Kingdom up to 8 December 1995 as 155,832. This was incorrect as the information given was for Great Britain and not the United Kingdom. The number of cases which has been confirmed in the United Kingdom at that date was 157,480.

Up to 15 December 1995, 157,767 cases of BSE had been confirmed in the United Kingdom, and of these 133,849 were confirmed in England, 7,508 in Scotland, 14,757 in Wales, and 1,653 in Northern Ireland.

Details of confirmed BSE cases are not recorded in a manner which permits retrieval in the format requested with respect to sex of the affected animal. For Great Britain and Northern Ireland, up to 15 December 1995, the available data can be broken down as follows:

Number of BSE cases

	Great Britain	Northern Ireland
Cows	155,656	1,651
Steers	23	0
Bulls	435	2

Support Payments

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total estimated amount of financial support received by the agricultural industry (a) from the European Union, (b) from the United Kingdom Government and (c) in total in each standard region and in the United Kingdom as a whole in each year since 1990 at constant prices indicating each figure as a percentage of the corresponding total. [8089]

Mr. Boswell: Expenditure on agriculture, fisheries and food on a financial year basis for the United Kingdom as a whole is set out in the table. Because of the nature of expenditure on certain programmes, it is not possible to identify support for the agricultural industry separately. A breakdown by standard region is not available.

Fish Management Regimes

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies his Department is carrying out into fish management regimes in (a) New Zealand, (b) Canada, (c) Norway and (d) other countries; and if he will make a statement. [8393]

Mr. Baldry: I am aware of the fish management regimes adopted in other countries such as New Zealand, Canada and Norway. These are of course geared to the specific circumstances of those countries and would not be directly applicable elsewhere. The Ministry's fisheries department liaises closely with other countries in matters of mutual interest. For example, it plays a full part in the work of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea, ICES, and will be participating in EU working groups with Norway to discuss a range of conservation issues.

Fishing Treaties

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each treaty currently in force between the European Economic Community and any (a) third nation, and (b) group of nations that provides opportunities for its member states to fish in waters not regarded as a Community resource; and if he will indicate for each treaty the member states taking up such schemes together with the approximate quantity or value of their annual catches. [8299]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 9 January 1996]: Fishing opportunities in third country waters and in the regulatory area of the North-West Atlantic Fisheries Organisation are set out in the table.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the articles of treaties signed by the United Kingdom which are the principal regulation of the European Economic Community, as published in its official journal that relate to and comprise the common fisheries policy; and what method of voting was used in the Council of Ministers to reach its decision in respect of each advance of that policy since 1966. [8298]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 9 January 1996]: The foundations of the common fisheries policy are to be found in articles 38 to 46 of the treaty of Rome 1956 to which the United Kingdom acceded by virtue of the treaty of accession of Denmark, Ireland and the United Kingdom. Articles 98 to 103 of the 1972 treaty relate specifically to fisheries. The treaty on European union of 1993 amended the treaty of Rome. Article 3 of the 1993 treaty specifically refers to fisheries. All three treaties were adopted by unanimity.

Bilateral Fisheries Arrangements (Norway)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on bilateral fisheries arrangements between the United Kingdom and Norway; and if he will make a statement. [8384]

Mr. Baldry: My aim is always to achieve the best possible deal for UK fishermen through the European Community's bilateral fisheries arrangements with Norway.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of removing more fishing vessels from the British fleet; what proposals he has to do this in accordance with the payment of adequate compensation to (a) vessel owners, (b) boat crews, (c) shore engineers and (d) merchants; and if he will make a statement. [8398]

Mr. Baldry: Under the terms of the EU's multi-annual guidance programme, the United Kingdom has to meet targets for the reduction of fishing effort in the period 1993–96, of which at least 55 per cent. must be achieved by the removal of capacity. Three rounds of decommissioning have already taken place and a further £24 million remains available.

Compensation to vessel owners takes the form of decommissioning grant, the amount of which is determined by competitive tender within the rules of the relevant statutory schemes. I have no plans to extend compensation to any other groups. The treatment of crews is already covered by employment law and social security schemes.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on how decommissioning of boats is taken into account when he is determining annual quota allocations for each United Kingdom port. [8397]

Mr. Baldry: The UK's fish quotas are not allocated by port but between the under 10 m fleet, all vessels which are 10 m or under in overall length; the sector, producer organisations whose membership includes vessels over 10 m in overall length; and the non-sector vessels over 10 m in overall length not in membership of producer organisations. The allocations reflect the licensed and registered vessels in each of these groups on 1 January of the quota year. Any vessel which had been decommissioned—deregistered and its licence surrendered—before 1 January would not be included in the distribution of allocation for the following year.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money will have been paid (a) to Spanish fishermen and (b) to British boat-owners for decommissioning, in each of the past two years and in total by 1 April 1997; and if he will make a statement. [8401]

Mr. Baldry: In the United Kingdom, we spent £7.8 million in 1993 and £8.8 million in 1994 on decommissioning under the relevant UK statutory schemes. In the period 1993 to 1997, it is currently planned that a total of some £41 million will be paid, with a further £12 million available for 1997-98.

I have no information about expenditure in Spain.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishing vessels (a) registered in the United Kingdom and (b) registered by country in other countries, are fishing against United Kingdom total allowable catches for all species with effect from 1 January 1996; and if he will make a statement. [8391]

Mr. Baldry: Only fishing vessels registered in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man and holding fishing licences issued by the fisheries departments may fish for profit against UK quota. At 1 January 1996, some 8,500 vessels were licensed to fish for profit although not all vessels are entitled to fish for the full range of stocks subject to quota.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many British registered fishing vessels will have been decommissioned by 31 March 1996; and how many non-British registered fishing vessels, by country will be fishing in what were formerly British waters and fishing current British quotas by the same date. [8399]

Mr. Baldry: Under the United Kingdom's decommissioning schemes, for which only British registered vessels are eligible, a total of 297 vessels were decommissioned in 1993 and 1994. Applications in respect of a further 164 have been accepted under the 1995 scheme and owners have until 29 February 1996 to scrap their vessels.

No non-British registered fishing vessels are able to fish against British quotas in any waters.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has further to restrict fishing effort beyond the 1996 total allowable catch and further to reduce the fleet size; and if he will make a statement. [8365]

Mr. Baldry: Conservation policy requires a combination of measures to limit exploitation rates, including output limitation in the form of total allowable catches, TACs, and input limitations such as the reduction of fleet size through multi-annual guidance programmes, MAGPs. Decisions on TACs beyond 1996 will be taken by the Council of Ministers in the normal way. Decisions on the next series of MAGPs, covering the period 1997–99, are due to be taken this year. The UK will play a full and constructive role in all these discussions.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to change the decommissioning scheme to find alternative uses for boats besides scrapping them; and if he will make a statement. [8366]

Mr. Baldry: It is a requirement of Council regulation 3699/93 that decommissioned vessels are permanently excluded from fishing in Community waters and that vessels of less than 25 gross registered tonnes have to be scrapped to qualify for Community aid. In other cases, experience has shown that it is only by requiring vessels to be made permanently unseaworthy that we can guarantee meeting our obligations. Nevertheless, I am always willing to consider any suggestions an applicant may make for alternatives to scrapping which provide the same degree of certainty in protecting public expenditure.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what priority is accorded to advice from (a) scientists, (b) environmentalists and (c) industry representatives when their advice is conflicting when he is deciding what quota levels to accept in EU negotiations; how much weight is given to (i) economic consequences, (ii) social deprivation and (iii) fisheries dependence; and if he will make a statement. [8406]

Mr. Baldry: I am very concerned about the socio-economic consequences of changes to fisheries quotas. My priority is therefore to achieve the best possible deal for the fishing industry. To do this effectively, I take account of the scientific advice and the need to conserve the sea's resources.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what priority he attaches to the relative stability in setting quotas following the Factortame judgment of the European Court of Justice; and if he will make a statement. [8396]

Mr. Baldry: The UK has enjoyed considerable benefit from the application of relative stability as the basis for the apportionment of EU total allowable catches between members states. Although, following the Factortame judgment, we are unable to preclude vessels owned by interests from other member states from joining the UK register, the process of registration does not automatically confer access to UK fish quotas. A vessel must be licensed to fish and since new licences are no longer issued on demand, any vessel wishing to join the UK fishing fleet can do so only by acquiring a licence from a previously licensed vessel.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to amend the relative stability element of the common fisheries policy so that a quota in any species cannot be reduced in any year by more than a predetermined percentage figure from the previous year; and if he will make a statement. [8404]

Mr. Baldry: It is my policy to avoid unnecessarily sharp reductions in quotas. However, if a stock is declining rapidly, limiting the quota reduction to a predetermined percentage figure could have disastrous consequences with the fishery having to be completely closed in the following year. I believe that this is something that we should always seek to avoid.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the economic impact of quota reductions in the 1996 total allowable catches in respect of each United Kingdom port; and if he will make a statement; [8372]

(2) what assessment he has made of the information the EU Fisheries Commissioner holds on the diversity and impact of quota reductions on each part of the United Kingdom fishing industry with effect from 1 January 1996; and if he will make a statement. [8374]

Mr. Baldry: The reason for reducing certain fish quotas is to conserve stocks and thereby to ensure the future economic viability of the industry.

The European Commission takes account of the impact of quota reductions throughout the Community when it makes its proposals for total allowable catches. At the start of the negotiations on TACs for 1996, the level of UK quotas being considered for the stocks of most importance to our fishermen was some 88,000 tonnes lower than our 1995 quotas in cod equivalent terms. As a result of changes agreed at the Fisheries Council on 21–22 December 1995, the final level of quotas for the same stocks was some 34,000 lower than our 1995 quotas. This represents approximately £15 million in 1995 market prices.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to re-organise quota allocations and both sector and non-sector management on a purely regional basis; which regions he expects to recognise; and if he will make a statement. [8386]

Mr. Baldry: I have no plans to reorganise quota allocation and management on a regional basis. Fish producer organisations, which are responsible for the day-to-day management of the greater part of UK quotas, already operate on a regional basis. I have, however, made it clear to the fishing industry that I am prepared to look at proposals for changing the present management arrangements provided these are practicable and command wide support.

Common Fisheries Policy

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) when he expects his common fisheries policy review group to report to him; if he will publish their findings and submissions made to them in full; and if he will make a statement; [8402]

(2) when he expects to publish the findings of the common fisheries policy review group and his response to them; and if he will make a statement. [8388]

Mr. Baldry: I expect the common fisheries policy review group to report in the spring. I will make public both its report and the Government's response to it. The submissions received by the group will also be made available.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food with which part of the common fisheries policy relative stability and quota swaps conform; and what plans he has to balance them in the future negotiations with his EU counterparts; and if he will make a statement. [8405]

Mr. Baldry: The principle of relative stability is established under article 8(4) of the basic common fisheries policy regulation 3760/92. Quota swaps are permitted under article 9 of the same regulation. I have no plans to seek changes to either provision.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what advice his Department has given to other Government Departments on fish stocks and fish management to assist them in talks on EU enlargement with (a) the Baltic states, (b) former eastern bloc states and (c) other aspirant EU members; and if he will make a statement; [8395]

(2) what plans he has for the development of the United Kingdom fishing industry from 2002 onwards; and if he will make a statement; [8361]

(3) what assessment his Department has made as to how the common fisheries policy will have to be reformed to prepare for the accession of new member states to the EU; and if he will make a statement. [8379]

Mr. Baldry: The Ministry has advised on the importance of maintaining existing UK fishing opportunities in enlargement negotiations. Changes need to be made to the common fisheries policy whether or not the Community is enlarged. I shall continue to discuss with the industry what changes they would like to see in the period leading up to and at the review of the CFP in 2002.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the changes in the number of jobs in the fishing industry for each United Kingdom port for each year since the common fisheries policy began; and if he will make a statement. [8362]

Mr. Baldry: Such information as is available about the number of fishermen in UK ports over the period in question is published in tables 2.6 and 2.7 of "United Kingdom Sea Fisheries Statistics 1994" which is available in the Library. Information about jobs indirectly related to sea fishing is not available.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will commission a study into the benefits accruing to United Kingdom fishermen from Britain's participation in the common fisheries policy and what losses they have incurred by having United Kingdom fishing waters declared a common European resource; and if he will make a statement. [8364]

Mr. Baldry: The benefits to United Kingdom fishermen resulting from our participation in the common fisheries policy include: tighter restrictions than applied before we joined the Community in access by foreign vessels within our 12-mile fishery limits; a larger share of fish quotas in Community waters than was justified by our historic catch record in the 1973 to 1978 reference period used when quota shares were decided; fishing opportunities in the waters of non-member states secured through the Community's bilateral agreements with those countries; access to European Community grant schemes; a common policy on conservation rules enabling us to influence the rules applied in the waters of other member states to the benefit of our industry.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what interpretation his Department's officials make of open access by all member states to all waters when they are advising him and preparing for negotiations with the United Kingdom's partners on fisheries policy; and if he will make a statement; [8377]

(2) what estimate he has made of legal obstacles in the way of the Government beginning negotiations with the United Kingdom's EU partners to reform the common fisheries policy so that there is no common access to fish resources in all waters; what legal obstructions would prevent the United Kingdom leaving the common fisheries policy; and if he will make a statement. [8458]

Mr. Baldry: The Council of Ministers can decide by qualified majority on the basis of a proposal from the European Commission that there shall be no common access to fish resources in all waters. This, indeed, is the current arrangement.

I explained to the House on 22 November Official Report, column 591. The steps that would be necessary for the United Kingdom to leave the common fisheries policy.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the policy of his EU counterparts to reform the common fisheries policy; and if he will make a statement. [8389]

Mr. Baldry: I shall discuss improvements to the common fisheries policy with my counterparts in other member states once I have considered the conclusions of the CFP review group.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to reduce the bureaucratic requirements placed on the fishing industry in respect of the common fisheries policy; and if he will make a statement. [8369]

Mr. Baldry: It is the Ministry's policy to keep to the minimum the burdens which the common fisheries policy places on the industry. A close dialogue is maintained with the industry and we welcome constructive proposals for deregulation in the fisheries sector.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what talks he has had recently and expects to have in the next three months with the EU Fisheries Commissioner on the state of (a) the British fishing industry, (b) the future of the common fisheries policy and (c) relative stability in the fishing industry; and if he will make a statement. [8373]

Mr. Baldry: Both before and during the Fisheries Council on 21–22 December 1995 I spoke to Mrs. Bonino about the state of the British fishing industry and the future of the common fisheries policy. I plan to have further discussions with her in March.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to consult hon. Members representing fisheries and the fishing industry before proceeding further towards reform of the common fisheries policy; and if he will make a statement. [8376]

Mr. Baldry: I will welcome the views of any hon. Member on ways of improving the common fisheries policy.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on interpreting the "common resource open to all" basis of the common fisheries policy in respect of Spanish and Portuguese fishing vessels in former British waters (a) where there is historic evidence of their fleets fishing and (b) where there is no evidence of their fleets fishing; and if he will make a statement. [8378]

Mr. Baldry: Spanish and Portuguese fishing vessels have no access within the United Kingdom's 12-mile limits. Within our 200 mile limits, they are also excluded from the North sea, the Irish sea and the Bristol channel. These exclusions are based on historic fishing patterns.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what circumstances he will bring forward to his EU counterparts a scheme to abandon the common fisheries policy altogether and reinstate sovereign waters with bilateral arrangements for fish management; and if he will make a statement. [8993]

Mr. Baldry: Proposing to scrap the common fisheries policy altogether is not a realistic option.

Fisheries Conservation

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will undertake research into franchising areas of sea to fishermen as an alternative to licensing boats; and if he will make a statement. [8403]

Mr. Baldry: I have no plans to undertake such research. Under Council regulation (EC) No. 3690/93 of 20 December 1993 establishing a Community system laying down rules for the minimum information to be contained in fishing licences, member states are required to operate a licensing system for fishing vessels.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to replace decommissioning as a tool of effort reduction, with closure of specified areas of seas during relevant spawning seasons; if he will make it his policy to allocate money set aside for decommissioning of fishing vessels to compensate all sectors of the fishing industry during such close seasons; and if he will make a statement. [8407]

Mr. Baldry: I have no such plans.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will undertake feasibility studies on effective policing of fisheries regulations by a system of closed sea areas during spawning seasons to replace the present licensing system; and if he will make a statement. [8387]

Mr. Baldry: There are a number of areas where fishing is controlled to protect young fish and to allow them to grow to maturity. The merits of any particular closed area have to be carefully evaluated, bearing in mind the mixed nature of our fisheries and the fact that fish will move in and out of areas. Nevertheless, protected areas are generally regarded as making a useful contribution to conservation. They are not, however, an alternative to the present licensing and TAC system because uncontrolled fishing effort outside such areas could outweigh the benefits achieved from closed spawning grounds.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what methods of control, management and conservation of the fish stocks of the United Kingdom he proposes to assess (a) in addition to and (b) instead of the current regime of the common fisheries policy; and if he will make a statement. [8375]

Mr. Baldry: Key elements in the common fisheries policy are the structural regime and the fisheries management regime.

The structural measures under the multi-annual guidance programmes are directed towards reducing the fishing effort of the fleets of member states to bring it better into line with fishing opportunities. The UK is spending £53 million on decommissioning fishing vessels to this end. We will be consulting the fishing industry prior to discussions on the changes needed for the next round of programmes starting in 1997. The fisheries management regime under the CFP is, like the regimes applied by many countries around the world, based on establishing total allowable catches which are administered as fishing quotas.

The quota management system applied by the UK is discussed with our industry each autumn to see whether changes should be made. At the most recent discussions there were no suggestions that any substantial changes would be helpful. However, the industry has been invited to see whether there are any changes which could usefully be made which would be acceptable to the industry collectively. I am awaiting its response, which I shall consider carefully.

The management regime is also supported by technical conservation measures which deal with matters such as mesh sizes, minimum landing sizes and closed areas. The fisheries conservation group, which I have announced, will be examining ideas from fishermen to agree which are the most promising to seek to have introduced as improvements to the existing CFP conservation regime. Again, the fishing industry's constructive views will be vital.

Finally, the management regime includes the monitoring of fishing effort in western waters from January this year so that all member states comply with limits laid down last year. These will ensure that full Spanish integration into the CFP does not result in fishing effort rising above the specified levels. We shall be assessing the effectiveness and enforcement of these arrangements and, if necessary, seeking improvements to them. I shall welcome the views of the fishing industry.

Fisheries Policy

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes to his fisheries policy he expects to make arising from decisions taken by the House on fishing policy on 19 December 1995; and if he will make a statement. [8381]

Mr. Baldry: The votes taken in the House on 19 December confirmed my determination to continue to work for effective conservation of fish stocks, a fair allocation of fishing opportunities and rigorous enforcement of the controls that are in place.

Grant Schedules, Lowestoft

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on how new grant schemes for harbours, port facilities and fish marketing and processing will be available for projects at Lowestoft; how much money is potentially available for Lowestoft; and what advice his officials are giving to industry representatives at Lowestoft. [8383]

Mr. Baldry: Lowestoft has been designated as a fishery dependent area eligible for aid under the EU PESCA initiative, for which applications will shortly be invited. Appropriate projects in Lowestoft will also be eligible for grant aid for marketing and processing and port facilities under the EU's financial instrument for fisheries guidance, which will also be open to applications in the UK in the next few weeks. Aid under the existing national harbour grant scheme is already available.

All these schemes are competitive and each project will be considered on its merits before funds can be allocated. Officials are already in touch with industry representatives in Lowestoft and will be giving further advice when new schemes are launched.

Unemployment (Fishing Industry)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to compensate people employed in the fishing industry who become unemployed because of a reduction in fish quotas from 1995 to 1996. [8385]

Mr. Baldry: I have already announced that £24 million is available for decommissioning fishing vessels in 1996 and 1997.

In addition, under the PESCA initiative, which is designed to address the problems facing the fishing industry, up to £71 million of European and UK national or regional aid will be available until the end of 1999 for projects including the diversification and retraining in fishery dependent areas.

North Sea Pollution

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies his Department has undertaken in the last five years into the effects of pollution on fish stocks in the North sea; what steps he proposes to tackle pollution; and if he will make a statement. [8400]

Mr. Baldry: My Department annually monitors fish from all the waters around the English and Welsh coast. The results which are published show that where contamination can be detected the levels involved give no cause for concern. In addition, specific studies have been carried out and are continuing, to assess whether contaminants impair fish health. There is no convincing evidence to link fish mutation or disease with levels of contaminants found around the coast. Fish are safe to eat.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what priority is accorded to neighbourhood agreements with France and Ireland in his policy for fisheries management; what factors militate against their extension to other EU countries; and if he will list the differences between such neighbourhood agreements and bilateral agreements with other countries. [8408]

Mr. Baldry: The management of fisheries resources in Community waters is determined within the framework of the common fisheries policy. The UK maintains close contact with those member states whose waters adjoin British fishery limits on a wide range of issues including conservation and enforcement. Bilateral agreements with third countries are negotiated by the European Commission on behalf of the union.

Fishing Industry

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the size of the fishing industry on 1 January 1996 (a) by tonnage, (b) by number of registered vessels, (c) by number of people employed directly and (d) by number of people employed indirectly; what estimate he has made in respect of (a) to (d) for 1 January 2003; and if he will make a statement. [8367]

Mr. Baldry: The latest available information is published in table 2:1 and 2:6 of the "UK Sea Fisheries Statistics", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of people indirectly employed in the fishing industry is not available. We have not made any comparable estimates for the year 2003.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to protect the livelihoods of fishermen using small, open boats from beaches for less than a day at a time; and if he will make a statement. [8368]

Mr. Baldry: Quota allocations are set aside for the under 10m fleet and these have been underpinned since 1994.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to apply the same principle to fishing and the European Court of Justice as the German constitutional court; and if he will make a statement. [8390]

Mr. Baldry: I have no plans to do so. All member states are obliged to abide by the rulings of the European Court of Justice.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to have fishing policy placed on the agenda for the intergovernmental conference on the future of Europe; and if he will make a statement. [8380]

Mr. Baldry: The purpose of the intergovernmental conference is to discuss possible treaty amendments. Improvements are needed to the common fisheries policy but these can be achieved within the present treaty provisions.

Dolphins

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library a copy of the report commissioned by his Department into dolphin deaths in tuna fishing nets off the western coasts of Britain and Europe in summer 1995. [9386]

Mr. Baldry: On 20 December I placed a copy of the sea mammal research unit's report "Cetacean bycatch in the UK tuna driftnet fishery in 1995" in the Library.

Orange Juice

Mr. Biffen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken to ensure that the United Kingdom freshly squeezed orange juice industry has continued access to the raw materials that it needs. [9777]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The price of raw materials used by the freshly squeezed orange juice industry would have been significantly increased by Community legislation on import tariffs. This would have had severe economic consequences for an innovative and growing sector. I made clear to Commissioner Fischler that this would be completely unacceptable.

We have succeeded in persuading the Commission to take note of our very genuine concerns. A temporary measure has now been adopted that will ensure that our processors have access to the raw materials they need at realistic prices. This is good news for importers, processors and consumers. We will continue to work towards a permanent solution so that our industry can plan ahead for the years to come.

Sheep and Cow Premiums

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to re-assess producers' entitlement to developers' quota from the 1993 sheep annual premium and suckler cow premium quota national reserves following the judgment of Mr. Justice Macpherson in the English High Court on 22 June 1995; and what provision he is making to compensate producers adversely affected by his Department's actions. [9708]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have today laid before Parliament the Sheep Annual Premium and Suckler Cow Premium Quota (Re-assessment of Eligibility) Regulations 1996. These regulations put in place arrangements for the re-assessment, in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, of applications for "developers" quota from a special reserve using new guidelines governing eligibility. The farming and landowning organisations have been fully consulted on the purpose and content of the regulations.

Where these arrangements adversely affect producers they will be entitled to compensation. The general principles forming the basis of compensation as currently envisaged are as follows:

1. Producers whose applications for 'developers' quota are newly assessed as eligible will be entitled to:

either

if they acquired quota by transfer or lease for any or all of the scheme years 1993 to 1996 for SAPS and 1993 to 1995 for SCPS reimbursement of the cost of acquiring that quota up to a maximum of the amount of quota that they should have received under category 3c;

or

if they did not acquire quota by transfer or lease for all or any of the scheme years 1993 to 1995 and can demonstrate that the eligible animals that would have been covered by that quota were retained on the holding during the relevant retention periods, reimbursement of the value of the premium they would have received on the eligible animals during 1993 to 1995 up to a maximum of the amount of quota that they should have received under category 3c;

and

where appropriate, an award of quota in accordance with the Regulations.

2. Those individuals (or their personal representatives) who are unable to apply for quota from the special reserve but who would have been entitled to receive "developers" quota from the 1993 national reserve had the new eligibility guidelines been used originally:

will be entitled to compensation equivalent to that in paragraph 1.

3. Where producers who have quota withdrawn from them to meet the new demand for "developers" quota:

they will be entitled to a compensation payment with which they can, if they wish, purchase quota through the open market to replace that withdrawn, and their entitlement to 1996 SAPS payments in respect of any withdrawn quota will be honoured provided that the producers concerned meet the Scheme rules

4. Other producers

Where producers consider that compensation not provided for in paragraphs 1 to 3 above is due to them as a result of the re-assessment exercise, they will be able to submit details of their case for consideration by the appropriate Agriculture Department.

5 Practical arrangements

In most cases it will be possible only to determine those who may be eligible for compensation and the amounts due once all applications have been assessed, the final demand for quota has been established and quota has been allocated. This will not be before the summer of 1996.

The aim is to draw up standard terms for compensation—which will be agreed with farming and landowning organisations—which will simplify the process for claiming compensation for most farmers.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Nursery Staff

Mr. Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many qualified (a) nursery teachers and (b) nursery nurses of working age there are in the United Kingdom. [8279]

Mr. Robin Squire: The available information shows that there were 7,281 full-time equivalent, FTE, qualified teachers and 9,308 FTE qualified nursery assistants employed in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools in England in January 1995. At that time there were a further 8,103 FTE qualified nursery assistants employed in other classes in maintained primary schools in England.

Information about the number of staff employed in schools in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland respectively.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what capital funding allocations have been made for grant-maintained schools for 1996–97; and if she will list the allocations per school. [9061]

Mr. Robin Squire: Capital allocations to grant-maintained schools are a matter for the Funding Agency for Schools for England. I have asked the chairman of the funding agency to write to the hon. Member.

Pre-school Provision

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the number and percentage of children under the age of five years who have a place in (a) reception classes in schools, (b) nursery classes in schools and (c) nursery schools by each local education authority area and nationally. [9060]

Mr. Robin Squire: The available information on pupils aged under five in maintained nursery and primary schools in each local education authority in England is shown in the table:

Provision of education for under fives in maintained nursery and primary schools in each Local Education Authority area in England—January 1995

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 14 December to the hon. Member for Tatton (Mr. Hamilton), Official Report, column 738, if the new criteria to be applied to eligibility for the access to work scheme will exclude those disabled people who are seeking jobs through development of self-employment; and if she will make a statement. [9054]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Blunkett, dated January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the eligibility for Access to Work of self-employed disabled people.

The refocussing of Access to Work announced by the Secretary of State on 14 December applies to self-employed disabled people in exactly the same way as it does to disabled people who are employed. From 18 December applications will be considered only from people who, at the time of their application, have been unemployed for at least four weeks. This applies whether a person is entering self-employment or starting work as an employed person.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the changes in the criteria for eligibility introduced from 18 December 1995 will apply to those who have already made applications for assistance under access to work before that date; and if she will make a statement. [8954]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Blunkett, dated January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the eligibility for Access to Work of people who applied before 18 December.

Everyone who made an application for Access to Work before 18 December, even if their application had not been decided at that date, will be eligible to be considered for support.

The announcement refocussed the support available from the Access to Work programme towards those who need it most—unemployed disabled people; and those to whom we have already made commitments. Those disabled people who are still eligible to apply for Access to Work will continue to be considered for the full range support available.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applicants for access to work who had made formal applications had been waiting three months or more, by 18 December 1995, for their applications to be processed. [8953]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Blunkett, dated January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about waiting times for people who have made applications for Access to Work support.

Access to Work is delivered locally through Placing, Assessment and Counselling Teams (PACTS). Local managers are responsible for delivery and I have set them a target of completing action plans for 80% of Access to Work clients within 3 weeks of their applying. If the actual provision of the support is likely to take some time, PACTs seek alternative ways of helping the client.

Local managers are responsible for monitoring the operation of Access to Work and for achieving the set targets. This level of detail of monitoring information is not kept centrally, and I cannot therefore say how many people have to wait for three months or more for their applications to be processed.

However, we are undertaking a review of Access to Work and research to support the review has examined in detail the operation of the programme. This research will be published shortly.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what sum of money is available under access to work in 1995–96; and what is the amount proposed for 1996–97. [8955]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Blunkett, dated January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the money available for Access to Work in 1995/96 and 1996/97.

The amount of money allocated to the Access to Work programme for 1995/96 is £13.4m but, as the Secretary of State announced on 14 December, additional funds have been made available for this year. However, I cannot of course say what the total spend will be until the end of the year.

The amount of money allocated to the programme for 1996/97 has been maintained at the planned level of £12.9m.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received about the access to work scheme; what has been the nature of these representations; and what her response has been. [9182]

Mr. Paice: Since the announcement about access to work, made on 14 December by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, we have received requests for further clarification of the announcement; expressions of concern about the immediate measures taken; and requests for information about the review of the programme and its future operation. Replies have provided the clarification and information requested where appropriate.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to alter the access to work scheme; if extra funds will be made available; and if she will make a statement. [9181]

Mr. Paice: An announcement was made by the Secretary of State on 14 December 1995, Official Report column 738, about the access to work programme and its funding.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action heads of her Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if she will make a statement. [9150]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Employment Service offers, on a voluntary basis, pre-retirement courses to people approaching retirement. These courses will continue to be offered in future.

The staff in the Teachers Pensions Agency, being employees of the Department for Education and Employment, are invited to attend a pre-retirement course when approaching retirement. There are no plans to discontinue the practice of providing pre-retirement courses for these staff.

Provision of pre-retirement courses forms part of the recommended standards of principal civil service pension scheme service quality and delivery published by Cabinet Office (Office of Public Service).

Nursery Education

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has made to enable local education authorities to recoup the costs of providing nursery education for children who are resident in neighbouring local education authorities; and if she plans to put the recoupment on a statutory basis. [8718]

Mr. Robin Squire: Local education authorities can recoup the costs of providing nursery education for pupils who are resident in neighbouring areas under voluntary agreements. My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to remove such local discretion but will keep all the funding arrangements for nursery education under review.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she is taking to make sure that adequate resources are available for the provision of pre-school education for special needs children. [9052]

Mr. Squire: Vouchers will be available for all four year-olds. The responsibilities of local authorities to identify and make a statutory assessment of those children who may need a statement, to make a statement where appropriate and to satisfy themselves that provision is made available in accordance with the statement, remain unchanged.

We are also considering requiring all providers in the private and voluntary sectors to have regard to the special education needs code of practice. We will discuss the impact of such a requirement with interested parties during the first phase.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what financial arrangements she will make to assist local education authorities who wish to offer education for under-fives on a full-time basis. [8725]

Mr. Squire: Local education authority budgets will be reduced by the voucher value only in respect of each four-year-old in a maintained school, taking termly attendance into account. Where LEAs spend in excess of the voucher value, on full-time places or otherwise, they will retain the funding to do so.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates her Department has made of shortfalls in respect of places for four-year-olds in (a) Wandsworth, (b) Westminster, (c) Kensington and Chelsea and (d) Norfolk expressed as (i) the number and (ii) the percentage of all four-year-olds in each local education authority. [8934]

Mr. Squire: Estimates of participation become less reliable when broken down by both year group and local education authority area. However, the best estimates of the number and percentage of four-year-olds in January 1995 in the phase 1 LEAs without a place in the maintained sector are given in the table:

LEA	Estimated number of four year olds without a place in the maintained sector in January 1995	Estimated percentage of four year olds without a place in the maintained sector in January 1995
Wandsworth	700	20
Westminster	800	40

LEA	Estimated number of four year olds without a place in the maintained sector in January 1995	Estimated percentage of four year olds without a place in the maintained sector in January 1995
Kensington and Chelsea	850	50
Norfolk	3000	30

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what measures she will be taking to evaluate the impact of the nursery voucher scheme on provision for three-year-olds; [8930]

(2) what measures she will be taking to evaluate the impact of the nursery voucher scheme on participation and educational attainment of children with special educational needs; [8928]

(3) what measures she will be taking to evaluate the impact of the nursery voucher scheme on the educational attainment of the children involved; [8931]

(4) what measures she will be taking to evaluate the impact of the nursery voucher scheme on participation and educational attainment of children from ethnic minority groups. [8929]

Mr. Squire: The effectiveness of voucher issue and redemption will be assessed using information provided by the voucher contractor. The standards of provision will become known as the inspection regime yields inspection reports. The longer-term impact of the scheme cannot be assessed until data are available on children's later educational achievements.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has made of the number of Ofsted registered nursery education inspectors necessary to carry out inspections of voucher-redeeming institutions in (a) phase 1 and (b) phase 2 of the voucher scheme. [8936]

Mr. Squire: Initial planning estimates indicate that for the first and second phases of the scheme, some 200 and 4,000 registered nursery education inspectors respectively will be required. The precise number will depend mainly upon the number of providers who take part in the scheme.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what information she intends to request of (a) the pilot local authorities, (b) pre-school providers, (c) Capita Managed Services Ltd. and (d) parents of four-year-olds in order to evaluate the operation of the nursery voucher scheme in phase 1. [8932]

Mr. Squire: Capita Managed Services Ltd. will provide information for the phase 1 areas on the number of institutions which have joined the scheme, as well as the issue and redemption of vouchers. The local authorities and participating institutions will be able to comment on the administrative arrangements. Any views made known by parents will also be carefully considered.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has made of the number of inspections by Ofsted of voucher-redeeming institutions that will be required in (a) phase 1 and (b) phase 2 of the voucher scheme. [8937]

Mr. Squire: Setting aside maintained schools which are already subject to regular inspections by Ofsted, initial planning estimates indicate that for the first and second phases of the scheme some 600 and 12,000 inspections of voucher redeeming establishments will be required. The precise number will depend upon the number of providers who take part in the scheme.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if parents will be able to redeem their vouchers for nursery provision during school holidays. [8933]

Mr. Squire: The voucher will cover a minimum of 36 weeks spread over three terms. In maintained schools it will cover the full school term. In the private and voluntary sectors it will be open to providers to offer more provision.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many nursery providers in the nursery voucher pilot scheme areas have been sent application forms; and how many providers have applied to participate in the scheme. [8727]

Mr. Robin Squire: All local education authority-maintained schools in the phase 1 areas have been invited to apply either directly or through their LEA. All grant-maintained and independent schools, and institutions registered under the Children Act 1989 in these areas, have been sent application forms. The voucher contractor has so far received over 500 applications to join the scheme.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many nursery voucher application forms have been sent out to parents in the nursery voucher pilot scheme areas. [8726]

Mr. Squire: Some 11,800 application forms were sent out in the first mailing.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance she will give to nursery providers who wish to apply for loans for capital works on the strength of expected voucher income; and what expressions of interest have been made by financial institutions with regard to providing capital funding to nursery providers. [8730]

Mr. Squire: Providers in the private and voluntary sectors will be able to apply for commercial loans on the strength of voucher income. Subject to parliamentary approval, grant-maintained schools will be given the power to borrow. They and other maintained schools will be able to take advantage of the freedoms provided by the private finance initiative to enter into partnerships with the private sector. The Department does not retain information about financial institutions which wish to provide capital funding to nursery providers.

Unemployment, Walthamstow

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what information is available regarding the lengths of periods of unemployment benefit disqualification imposed by adjudication officers in the area which includes Walthamstow. [8976]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the lengths of periods of unemployment benefit disqualifications imposed by adjudication officers in the area which includes Walthamstow.

The Employment Service (ES) does not record statistics relating to periods of disqualifications. However we do publish, quarterly, reports on the volumes of adjudicated decisions both nationally and by ES region. We are unable to provide adjudicated decision based on Parliamentary constituencies.

The publication, entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions", details cases allowed and disqualified (or disallowed), by question type. The latest information can be obtained from the House of Commons library.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people in Walthamstow have experienced a period of unemployment since April 1992. [8974]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding unemployment in Walthamstow.

The Employment Service does not record statistics relating to the number of people who have experienced a period of unemployment.

I can, however, advise you that the number of new claims for unemployment-related benefit made in the constituency of Walthamstow between April 1992 and November 1995 was 22,433. (Data obtained from Central Statistical Office—NOMIS)

As this figure reflects the number of claims rather than the number of clients, people who have left and rejoined the register will have been recorded each time they made a new claim.

I hope this is helpful.

Nursery Education (Inspection)

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans she has made to provide additional training in early years education for Ofsted inspectors; [8729]

(2) how many registered Ofsted inspectors have (a) early years teaching qualifications and (b) early years teaching experience. [8728]

Mr. Robin Squire: These are matters for Her Majesty's chief inspectors of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Primary Literacy and Numeracy Centres

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in which areas the establishment of the primary literacy and numeracy centres link will relate to the activities of (a) universities and (b) colleges. [8878]

Mr. Robin Squire: In selecting local education authorities to take part in the initiative, one of the criteria against which applications will be assessed is the quality of proposals for involving other partners, including higher education and the private sector, in supporting and extending the work.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what existing resources will be drawn on in the establishment of the primary literacy and numeracy centres. [8927]

Mr. Squire: A new grant for educational support and training specific grant will provide for £5 million of expenditure in 1996–97. The Department wrote to all local education authorities on 5 January inviting them to participate. That letter gives further details of how the project will be expected to link into current work in LEAs and draw upon work being carried out by other partners in the project, including Ofsted, the Basic Skills Agency, the Teacher Training Agency and the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and I will arrange for a copy to be sent to the hon. Member.

Teacher Training

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) the number of places and (b) the total funding allocated by the Teacher Training Agency for (i) the primary and (ii) the secondary sector for 1996–97. [8879]

Mr. Robin Squire: The allocation of student places and funding for initial teacher training is the responsibility of the Teacher Training Agency. I have therefore asked the chairman of the Teacher Training Agency to write to the hon. Member with this information.

School Inspections

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was Ofsted's target number of inspections per year in (a) the primary and (b) the secondary sector in the current cycle; and what the actual number of inspections has been in both sectors for each year since the beginning of the cycle. [8956]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Environmental Pollution Report

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what dates and on what matters, in connection with the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Enviornment", she has made representations to the Secretary of State for Transport. [9098]

Mr. Forth: The Department has no major direct interest in the royal commission's report, but we have been kept in touch with colleagues' consideration of the issues. No such representations have been made by the Department, by the former Department for Education or by the former Employment Department.

School Maintenance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has of the backlog of maintenance repairs in schools at the latest date for which figures are available. [8935]

Mrs. Gillan: Estimates based on a 1991 National Audit Office report suggest that the cost of maintenance repairs to local authority school buildings may be around £1.4 billion at current prices. However, since 1990–91, some £3.5 billion has been made available from all sources for capital work at all schools in England.

Reading Tests

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list those education authorities which carry out average reading score tests in (a) all or (b) some of their primary schools. [9051]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Work Funding

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total cost of the evaluation of training for work funding pilots carried out by Coopers and Lybrand. [9520]

Mr. Forth: The evaluation cost £123,024.

Training Programmes

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the outcome figures for employment training in 1994 and for community action between April 1994 and March 1994; and if he will make a statement. [9694]

Mr. Paice: The information available is given in the table:

Training

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she plans to publish the plan compiled by the efficiency unit, designed to reduce administrative burdens and changes on training and enterprise councils and providers of training. [9702]

Mr. Paice: The Department published a report on 14 December following an efficiency scrutiny into the TEC contract and management fee. A copy is in the House of Commons Library.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will set out in domestic currency statutory national minimum wage, or the minimum wage established on the basis of collective bargaining, in key industries in each European Union state and in the United State of America, Sweden and Japan; if she will indicate the equivalent of each of these amounts in pounds sterling at purchasing power parity exchange rates; and what percentage of average earnings in each of these countries the current national minimum wage represents. [8341]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 9 January 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

The following table gives the current statutory national minimum wage for each European Union state, the United States of America and Japan in the domestic currency and each of these amounts at purchasing power parity exchange rates. The other information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for her Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which her Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and the timescale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5975]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Department undertakes a broad programme of research and evaluation including studies to assess the attitudes of parents, clients, employers and others to the Department's policies and programmes. The details requested are given in the table. Information on the Department's expenditure on projects is not listed as this is, in a number of cases, commercially confidential.

The Department supports the "British Social Attitudes Survey" as part of a consortium of funders. The research is undertaken by Social Community Planning Research, SCPR. The survey covers a sample of 3,600 adults throughout Great Britain and surveys were conducted in 1993, 1994 and 1995. The findings are published by SCPR in November each year. The survey data are also deposited in the Economic and Social Research Council's data archive.

The Employment Service has commissioned a national customer satisfaction survey each year since 1989. The seventh survey was commissioned in May 1995 with a small qualitative study. The main survey was commissioned in July 1995 and fieldwork commenced in November. Since 1993, the survey has been undertaken by Public Attitude Surveys Ltd. The most recent survey included 3,000 claimants and 1,500 non-claimants and covers Great Britain. Reports on all the surveys have been placed in the House of Commons Library and are available to members of the public on request.

Quantitative and qualitative research into individuals' attitudes towards lifetime learning was commissioned in May 1993. The studies were undertaken by Social and Community Planning Research. A total of 71 people took part in the qualitative phase in nine locations: Newcastle, Liverpool, London, Chester, Bedford, Diss (Norfolk), Pegswood (Northumberland), Butley (Suffolk) and Lamport (Northamptonshire). The quantitative survey involved 1,403 people throughout England. The qualitative study was completed in July 1993 and the main survey fieldwork was undertaken in September and October 1993. The results of both studies have been published in the Department's research series and are available to members of the public. Copies have also been placed in the House of Commons Library and with the Employment Select Committee.

A project was commissioned in January 1995 to assess parent's level of knowledge about and attitudes towards education in schools. The project was undertaken by Counterpoint Research. Approximately 120 parents were involved in the survey in eight locations throughout England and Wales: Newcastle, Leeds/Bradford, Bristol, Birmingham, inner London, suburban London, Cardiff and Oakham. The Department has produced a short summary of the main findings and copies have been lodged with the citizens charter unit.

In addition, the Department has commissioned a number of projects to develop and evaluate its publicity campaigns. Since April 1994 a summary of findings from these projects has been made available to interested parties on request. Details of these projects are as listed.

Written Answers to Questions

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Police Cells)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the daily cost charged by each police authority for the use of police cells to house overspill prisoners; and if he will make a statement. [8758]

Mr. Maclean: No Prison Service prisoners have been held in police cells since June 1995. At that time, the national average cost per prisoner was £300 per night.

Police authorities do not have a standard cost for holding prisoners. Each authority submits an invoice to the Prison Service based on the actual cost of the service provided. There are many variables which may affect that cost.

Home Office circular 36/1993 gives guidance to police authorities on calculating their costs. The Home Office also monitors the charges made by police forces.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted criminals were being held in police station cells at the latest available date; and if he will make a statement. [8759]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 16 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of convicted criminals being held in police station cells at the latest available date.

There have been no Prison Service prisoners held in police cells since 15 June 1995.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of port applicants for asylum arriving in the United Kingdom having travelling through one or more other countries in each of the last three years; and what proportion of all port applicants they were. [9621]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers reside in the parliamentary constituency of Tottenham; and how many of them have been granted (a) refugee status and (b) exceptional leave to remain in the last five years. [9811]

Mr. Kirkhope: Information on the places of residence of people currently seeking asylum is not held centrally.

Terrorism Legislation (Inquiry)

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the methods by which the right hon. Lord Lloyd of Berwick will gather evidence for his inquiry into the future requirement for legislation against terrorism. [10179]

Mr. Howard: Advertisements are being placed in the press inviting people to submit views to Lord Lloyd by 15 March. Lord Lloyd is writing, with the same invitation, to a wide range of interested parties throughout the United Kingdom. He will, in the course of his review, seek to elicit the widest possible range of fact and opinion.

Any person wishing to offer his views on the law against terrorism should write to Lord Lloyd at the following address:

PO Box 9998

London SW1H 9ZB.

Police (Complaints)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many public complaints against each police force in England and Wales were made in 1994; and what percentage change this represents over the figure for 1993. [9204]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 15 January 1995]: The information requested is given in the table.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the level of recorded crime in the Merseyside police force area (a) in June 1994 and (b) in June 1995; and what are the figures for England and Wales over the same period. [7925]

Mr. Maclean: There were 11,122 offences recorded by the Merseyside police in June 1994 and 12,207 in June 1995. The corresponding figures for England and Wales were 440,245 and 405,035 respectively.

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the change in figures for reported robbery in London in the 12 months to June 1995. [8100]

Mr. Maclean: The available information relates to offences of robbery recorded in the Metropolitan police district. There were 27,712 offences recorded in the 12 months to June 1995, an increase of 10 per cent. over the previous 12 months.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the change in the level of recorded crime in the Humberside police force region since 1987. [8156]

Mr. Maclean: Between 1987 and 1994, recorded crime in Humberside rose by 53 per cent. from 88,570 offences to 135,826 offences.

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in his Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by him before they are sent; and if he will identify such letters to which amendments by him have been made in 1994–95. [7830]

Mr. Howard: Parliamentary questions are passed to the head of an executive agency when the matter is one delegated to him or her under the agency framework document. It is the usual practice in the Home Office for Ministers to see the proposed replies to such parliamentary questions before they appear in the Official Report, but they would not normally intervene in operational matters. No central record is kept of replies amended at the request of Ministers and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Private Security Firms

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to ensure adequate legal control over private security forces operating in local communities; and if he will make a statement. [9134]

Mr. Maclean: We are currently reviewing the case for statutory regulation of the private security industry.

Immigration Applications

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases in each of the last five years an application for renewal of exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom has been refused; and how many of these refusals were after (a) one year's exceptional leave and (b) four years' exceptional leave. [8977]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not held centrally.

Prisoners (Police Interviews)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the guidelines for the conduct of police interviews with convicted prisoners in the furtherance of their investigations into other crimes; what is the legal status of such guidelines; how long they have been in force; and what changes have occurred to previous practices since 1966. [8720]

Mr. Maclean: Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary issued guidance to the police in January 1987 on the interviewing of convicted prisoners about outstanding crime. The guidance, copies of which are available in the Library, is non-statutory but Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary monitors forces' compliance as part of its inspection procedure.

Child Sexual Abuse

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders convicted of child sexual abuse in each of the last five years had previous convictions for the same offence. [8717]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available.

Police (Driver Training)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total amount spent on driver training in each police force area in England and Wales for each year since 1990. [7541]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 15 January 1996]: Information collected centrally relates to all aspects of driver and traffic training. Details of the number of days spent on such training are set out in the table, together with information about training costs, which is not complete.

Nigeria

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those members of the Nigerian Government who are prohibited from entry to the United Kingdom. [8537]

Mr. Hanley: I have been asked to reply.

In accordance with the common position adopted by the European Union on 4 December, all members of the Federal Executive Council, the provisional Ruling Council, serving members of the military and security forces, and their families shall be refused entry to the United Kingdom.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Lord Chancellor under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9587]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Law of Domicile (Reform)

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether the Government intend to bring forward legislation to give effect to the reforms of the law of domicile recommended by the Law Commission in its recent report on this subject (Law Com. No. 168, Scot Law Com. No. 107). [10169]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Government have decided not to take forward these reforms on the basis that, although they are desirable in themselves, they do not contain sufficient practical benefits to outweigh the risks of proceeding with them and to justify disturbing the present long-established body of case law on this subject.

Mental Incapacity (Law Commission Report)

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what response the Government intend to make to the Law Commission report on mental incapacity (Law Com. No. 231). [10170]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Government have considered the Law Commission report on mental incapacity very carefully and are grateful to the many individuals and organisations that have sent in their views on this subject. The Government appreciate that this is an important and sensitive subject raising moral and ethical issues on which many people will have strong personal views.

The Government have decided not to legislate on the basis of the Law Commission's proposals in their current form and have also concluded that it would be inappropriate to make any proposals to Parliament in the absence of full public consultation. The Government propose to issue a consultation paper on mental incapacity in due course.

The Government wish to emphasise that they fully support the views of the House of Lords Select Committee on Medical Ethics that euthanasia is unacceptable and have no plans to change this policy. The Government's consultation will thus not include any proposals on this subject.

ENVIRONMENT

Ruddy Duck

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current situation in respect of the ruddy duck; and if he will make a statement. [8457]

Mr. Clappison: We are currently considering the views of the United Kingdom ruddy duck working group and our statutory scientific advisers, English Nature, in developing an appropriate strategy for controlling population levels of this introduced species.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each of his executive agencies for each financial year for the last four years (a) their budget for overseas travel and (b) the actual amount spent. [8710]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State has responsibility for four executive agencies—Building Research Establishment, Ordnance Survey, Planning Inspectorate and the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre.

The information requested for OS, PINS and QEII is set out in the table.

	1992–93		1993–94		1994–95		1995–96
Agency	Budget	Actual	Budget	Actual	Budget	Actual	Budget	Actual
OS	64.0	63.0	72.0	99.0	75.0	68.0	60.0	64.0
QEII	61.2	45.7	59.0	81.8	50.0	45.1	33.7	32.7

1. PINS does not have a specific budget for overseas travel.
2. 1995–96 figures are up to December 1995.

BRE does not set a budget for overseas travel. The agency is funded through commissions undertaken for its various customers. When these include overseas travel, the cost is recharged directly to customers. The agency does not distinguish in its financial systems between travel within the UK and overseas travel; to provide the information requested could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement. [9147]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State has responsibility for four executive agencies—Building Research Establishment, Ordnance Survey, Planning Inspectorate and the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre. The agencies, which have delegated responsibility for these matters, arrange pre-retirement courses as required. No special action has been taken, or is needed, to safeguard their provision; there is no intention to cease providing such courses.

Fifth Terminal, Heathrow Airport

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive the report of the inquiry into the possible fifth air terminal at Heathrow airport; and if he will make a statement. [8552]

Sir Paul Beresford: The public inquiry into the proposed fifth terminal at Heathrow airport is currently scheduled to finish in spring 1997, after which the inspector will prepare his report on the applications before the inquiry. It is too early to say when the report will be received.

Homelessness and Rough Sleeping, (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been commissioned by his Department on the number of (a) men and (b) women, over the age of 60 years, who are homeless and sleeping rough within the Greater London area; and if he will make a statement. [8553]

Mr. Clappison: Information about the extent of rough sleeping is mostly anecdotal or estimated, except for central London, where voluntary sector agencies carry out a twice-yearly count of rough sleepers. The methodology for this arose from an independent evaluation of the rough sleepers initiative, commissioned by my Department. The most recent count, in November 1995, found 272 people sleeping rough in central London, of whom 25 men and seven women were aged 60 years or more.

The Government are considering assisting the development of the successful rough sleepers initiative model in areas outside central London where rough sleeping can be demonstrated to be a major problem. A Government consultation paper about the future of the initiative, issued on 3 October, invited local authorities to quantify the extent of rough sleeping in their areas. The responses are now being analysed.

Water Metering

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct all water companies to stop further implementation of metering water supplies to individual residences, unless specifically asked to by the occupier; and if he will make a statement. [9116]

Mr. Clappison: Neither the Director General of Water Services, Mr. Ian Byatt, nor Ministers have powers to prescribe charging methods or types of tariff. Within the terms of the legislation, it is up to each company to decide which method of charging is most appropriate and cost-effective in its area, subject to the Director General of Water Services being satisfied that the chosen method and the associated tariffs do not give undue preference to, or unduly discriminate against, any group or class of customers.

Pollution Information (Internet)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to publish pollution information on the Internet. [8635]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department has pages on the CCTA's world wide web site known as hhtp://www.open.go.uk. Currently, the DOE pages include information on the Department's responsibilities for air quality and drinking water, plus the departmental press notices. The Department's air quality information and press notices are updated on a daily basis.

The Department will also be putting a selection of information from its digest of environmental statistics publication on the CCTA's world wide web site later this year.

Planning Applications

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the average time taken by his Department to decide planning applications which it has called in; [9507]

(2) what targets he has set on the length of time taken to determine planning applications which have been called in by his Department; [9508]

(3) how many planning applications have been called in by his Department in each of the last five years. [9506]

Sir Paul Beresford: The number of planning applications which have been called in from English local planning authorities over the past five years have been:

1990–91: 132

1992–93: 101

These called-in cases should be seen in the context of nearly half a million planning applications made each year.

The Secretary of State does not set overall targets for the determination of called-in applications. These cases are normally discussed at a public inquiry, whose length will depend upon the complexity of the issues and the amount of public interest generated; but the Department does aim to determine 80 per cent. of called-in planning applications within 13 weeks of receipt of the inspector's report and to have determined all cases within 20 weeks of receipt of the report.

There is no centrally available information on the average length of time taken to determine all called-in planning applications.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9223]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People on Monday 15 January 1996 Official Report, column 417. I will ensure that my Department and any bodies for which it is responsible will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Building Regulations

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when his Department will complete its analysis of the responses to consultations over the extension of part M of the Building Regulations to residential dwellings; [9261]

(2) if he will be seeking advice from the Building Regulations Advisory Committee regarding the extension of part M of the Building Regulations to residential dwellings; and when he intends to do so; [9262]

(3) when he intends to make a statement regarding the extension of part M of the Building Regulations to residential dwellings. [9263]

Mr. Clappison: The analysis of the responses to the Government's consultation on extending part M of the Building Regulations to cover new dwellings is expected to be completed this spring. This will then be considered by the Building Regulations Advisory Committee with the aim of advising me of the best way forward. After considering that advice, I shall make a statement.

Rural Challenge (Easington Colliery)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Easington dated 28 November 1995 concerning the failed bid for rural challenge for Easington colliery. [9671]

Mr. Clappison: I replied to the hon. Member's letter yesterday—Monday 15 January 1996.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the debt level of each local authority in England indicating in each case the debt per head of population. [9807]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have today placed the information requested in the Library of the House.

Standard Spending Assessment (Gosport)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take any necessary steps to ensure that the payments made to the borough of Gosport are correctly calculated on the basis of the appropriate standard spending assessment with particular reference to taking account of an accurate assessment of the number of armed forces residents. [9806]

Sir Paul Beresford: We are currently considering all the representations made by authorities on our proposals for the 1996–97 settlement, including those made by the borough council of Gosport on the resident population figures which it is proposed to use to calculate standard spending assessments. We are proposing to use figures of resident population at 30 June 1994, as estimated by the Registrar General. They will take account of representations made to us during the consultation period.

Special Areas of Conservation

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the areas in the United Kingdom which he has designated special areas of conservation; and if he will place maps of these areas in the Library. [9616]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 20 June 1995, Official Report, columns 140–43, and my hon. Friend the Member for Hexham (Mr. Atkinson) on 9 January 1996, Official Report, columns 6–8, for lists of the 211 sites in the United Kingdom which have been forwarded to the European Commission as candidate special areas of conservation. Maps of these areas were placed on deposit in the Library last March at the commencement of the public consultation on these areas.

Radon

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further action he proposes to take on radon in homes; and if he will make a statement. [10247]

Mr. Clappison: Radon is a naturally occurring radioactive gas that can accumulate in homes and increase the risk of lung cancer.

My Department has had a long-established programme to identify those most at risk, and to advise them on what action to take in order to protect their health. In England, 250,000 homes have had their radon levels measured under the Government-funded measurement scheme; cost-effective methods of preventing radon from entering new and existing homes have been developed by the Building Research Establishment; changes have been made to the building regulations to prevent radon becoming a problem in new homes; and financial assistance is available to enable the most needy householders to take remedial action.

The next phase of the radon programme will take place in early February, when 200,000 invitations to have a free radon measurement will be sent to those householders in Devon, Cornwall, Somerset, Northamptonshire and Derbyshire most likely to have high radon levels in their homes. All householders in these counties have, over the past eight years, been offered free measurements. The results obtained so far have enabled the National Radiological Protection Board to identify with far greater precision the areas within those counties where homes are most likely to have high radon levels. This allows measurement invitations to be targeted more accurately and efficiently. The offer of free measurements will therefore now be based on invitations to individual householders, and the current arrangements for free measurement will be discontinued from 29 February.

The NRPB is currently completing a mapping exercise of the whole of England. This will be published later in the year and will indicate more precisely than before those areas with high radon levels.

Radon is a serious problem, but one that is amenable to simple, relatively inexpensive solutions, developed primarily by the Department's Building Research Establishment. We shall continue to advise householders in high radon areas what action they should take. Local authorities have discretion to give grants to low-income private owners for radon remedial works.

Fire Protection

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effectiveness of sprinklers and other fire protection measures in (i) hospitals and (ii) homes for the elderly. [9478]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 15 January 1996]: My Department has commissioned a number of studies from the Building Research Establishment on sprinklers and other fire protection measures in connection with hospitals and residential care establishments, including old people's homes. Reports are evaluated by my officials, who make recommendations to Ministers on the work's significance and any practical implications, for example for building regulations, flowing from it.

I am sending the hon. Gentleman a list of these studies, some of which have been published.

PRIME MINISTER

Honours List

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister how many Conservative hon. Members have received knighthoods since 1979; and if he will list them by name. [9666]

The Prime Minister: A total of 127 Conservative Members have received knighthoods since 1979. The names of the recipients have been published in the London Gazette.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister if he will define "political services" and "public and political services" in the context of the honours list. [9607]

The Prime Minister: Political services relate to those who give service to a political party. Political and public service is an appropriate description for those who have some other form of public service to their credit in addition to their political work.

Government Economic Policy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the goal of the Government's economic policy. [9794]

The Prime Minister: The Government's overall economic objective is to promote sustained economic growth and rising prosperity. We will continue with the policies which have given this country the lowest mortgage rates for 30 years, the lowest basic rate of tax for over 50 years and the longest period of low inflation for 50 years.

Refugees

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister if he will initiate joint action by the relevant Departments of Her Majesty's Government to determine the domicile of those persons, and their dependants, who (a) have refugee status, (b) have been given exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom or (c) have outstanding applications for refugee status; and if he will (i) publish and (ii) place in the Library the numbers of (1) such persons and (2) their dependants (x) by local authority area and (y) by parliamentary constituency. [8251]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister what legal costs arising from the Scott inquiry have been incurred by the Government in relation to (a) himself, (b) his predecessor and (c) his or her officials and advisers. [8743]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The Treasury Solicitor provides legal advice to the Prime Minister and his officials on a range of issues as part of his normal duties. The cost of his advice in relation to the Scott inquiry is not quantifiable. No other legal costs have been incurred in connection with the Scott inquiry on behalf of myself, my predecessor or my officials or advisers.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Science Budget

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the allocation of the science budget. [10078]

Mr. Lang: I have discussed the allocations with the Director General of Research Councils and have decided that, subject to parliamentary approval of the Supply estimates in due course, the science budget of £1,312.390 million should be allocated as follows:

Science Budget Allocations and Planning Assumptions

£ million

	Allocation	Planning figures
	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
BBSRC	176.31	176.89	179.98
ESRC	63.08	63.62	65.64
EPSRC	375.95	373.46	376.78
MRC	281.89	282.96	286.86
NERC	164.65	162.32	167.90
PPARC	191.68	191.73	194.90
International subscriptions reserve	15.04	18.00	18.00
CCLRC	1.45	1.45	1.45
Research Council Pensions Supplement	9.87	11.53	12.97
Royal Society	21.82	22.27	22.62
Royal Academy of Engineering	3.12	3.37	3.44
OST Initiatives	2.53	2.78	2.85
Foresight Challenge	5.00	10.00	13.00
High-performance computing	—	10.00	—
Total	1,312.39	1,330.39	1,346.39

These allocations will enable the research councils and other funded bodies to consolidate and develop the new initiatives announced in February 1994 to take forward the policies set out in the 1993 White Paper "Realising Our Potential: A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology". Further details are set out in the paper "Allocation of the Science Budget 1996–97", which I have placed in the Library of the House.

National Weights and Measures Laboratory

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the forthcoming prior options study of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory. [10079]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government announced on 29 September 1995 that all public sector research establishments would be subject to prior options reviews.

A review of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory has begun. Bearing in mind the extensive studies carried out leading to the decision in 1994 that NWML should remain an executive agency of the DTI, and my right hon. Friend's recently announced decision that it should move to a net expenditure control basis from 1 April 1996, the forthcoming review is likely to draw extensively on this material; the review will also consider NWML's relationship with public sector research establishments.

I should welcome comments from interested parties. Comments should be sent by 16 February 1996 to Charles Cruickshank, Department of Trade and Industry, 151 Buckingham Palace road, London SW1W 9SS.

Trade Unions

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much the Government have paid to trade unions towards the costs of conducting postal ballots under legislation in each year since their introduction. [9812]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The costs of the trade union ballot refunds for the scheme, by calendar year since its inception, are as follows:

1980: No applications
1981: £12,935
1982: £26,149
1983: £85,072
1984: £72,498
1985: £1,392,982
1986: £738,301
1987: £1,158,801
1988: £869,448
1989: £1,339,582
1990: £2,636,766
1991: £4,082,383
1992: £4,259,860
1993: £3,382,803
1994: £1,899,955
1995: £1,095,236.

Carbon Monoxide Detectors

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had, and when, with the Building Standards Institute on immediately establishing a British standard for carbon monoxide detectors. [9617]

Mr. John M. Taylor: An official from my Department sits in the relevant British Standards Institution group which has been writing a new standard for carbon monoxide detectors and has been actively involved in this work. I am pleased to say the standard has now been completed and is expected to be published in the spring.

Non-fossil Fuel Renewable Order 4

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how NFFO 4—fourth non-fossil fuel renewable order—was modified by the results of any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [8664]

(2) if NFFO 4 has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; and if he will publish the appraisal; [8662]

(3) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of NFFO 4; [8665]

(4) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in NFFO 4 were considered in any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [8663]

Mr. Page [holding answers 15 January 1996]: One of the objectives underlying the Government's renewables policy, including the non-fossil fuel obligation in respect of renewables, is a reduction in the emission of pollutants. The environmental aspects of the policy were fully discussed in the White Paper "This Common Inheritance" (Cm 1200, 1990), and in DTI energy papers such as "New and Renewable Energy: Future Prospects in the UK" (DTI: Energy Paper Number 62, 1994). The environmental aspects of particular proposed power stations are handled through the planning process.

TRANSPORT

Marine Safety Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to delegate further work from the Marine Safety Agency to the private sector; and if he will make a statement. [8229]

Mr. Norris: The only delegation to the private sector of the work of the Marine Safety Agency currently planned, and which is in addition to the delegation package announced in August 1993, is the eyesight testing of seafarers.

Motorway Service Areas

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons leaseholding operators of motorway service areas are not required to pay annual rent to his Department. [9397]

Mr. Watts: Originally, operators of motorway service areas paid an annual rent based on turnover. In 1978 the Prior committee report on MSAs concluded that this arrangement was discouraging new investment and the improvement of standards. A new policy was announced in October 1979 under which operators would pay a lump sum at the beginning of their lease term and a peppercorn annual rent thereafter. That arrangement had been adopted for all MSAs, new and existing, by 1982. It continues to apply to the 19 existing MSAs for which the Department currently owns the freehold, pending their sale to the private sector. The provision of MSAs was deregulated in 1992 and the issue of payment of rent to my Department no longer arises with new MSAs.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the costs to his Department of acting as a freeholder for motorway service areas in England. [9398]

Mr. Watts: The costs are minimal and will reduce to nothing as the Department's remaining freehold interests in motorway service areas in England are sold to the private sector.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9226]

Mr. Norris: We will shortly be publishing the first in a series of information bulletins which will report the progress we are making in implementing part V of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. These bulletins will be widely circulated. As the bulletins are published, I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library.

When regulations are made under part V of the Act, we will issue separate detailed guidance to all those affected.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent reports he has received in respect of safety failings on the west coast main line; and if he will make a statement. [9291]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend has received no general reports indicating safety failings on the west coast main line. The Health and Safety Executive has received specific reports on derailments at Camden on 14 December and Euston station on 20 December 1995. These incidents are being investigated by the Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate. The inspectorate is also following up a number of claims about the condition of the west coast main line made by individuals.

HM railway inspectorate will continue its independent monitoring and investigation of railway safety to ensure that safety standards are maintained on the west coast main line.

Franchising Director

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to revise the objectives, instructions and guidance issued to the franchising director under section 5 of the Railways Act 1993. [10257]

Sir George Young: I have now written to the franchising director clarifying and amplifying the sections of his objectives, instructions and guidance which relate to the setting of passenger service requirements and the evaluation of bids. I have placed a copy of my letter in the Library.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment has been made of the impact of the Newbury bypass on habitats of protected species; [8410]

(2) what are the comparative costs of construction in respect of (a) the Newbury bypass and (b) upgrading the existing route of the A34 in accordance with route option CA4; and what assessment has been made of the relative environmental impact of each option. [8409]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Andrew Smith, dated 16 January 1996:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about the A34 Newbury Bypass.

We have surveyed carefully the route of the Bypass and we have relocated (in close liaison with English Nature) protected species where necessary. For example, all major trees were surveyed for the presence of bats; those found were caught, their roots removed and the bats then released into woodland away from the route, where bat boxes had been erected. Badgers have been relocated to new artificial setts and dormice have been moved to new sites. Our ecological consultants will keep watch during the works to ensure the safety of protected species in liaison, as necessary, with English Nature.

Route option CA4 was an objectors alternative route put forward at the 1988 Public Inquiry; the comparative costs of the two schemes are those given to that Inquiry. These are £38.8M for route option CA4 and £46.6M for the western bypass. I should add that the Inspector at that Inquiry concluded that route CA4 would be ineffective in traffic terms and that the proposed western route would be very much better value for money that any of the alternatives put forward to the Inquiry.

The comparative environmental impacts of the proposed route and alternative CA4 were discussed at the Public Inquiry in 1988. The Inspector concluded that central route options would not relieve Newbury of significant amounts of through traffic; there would be upheaval and disruption during construction and serious problems would remain at junctions. He found that CA4 in particular would have severe and insurmountable operational difficulties. And, at the end, central routes would leave Newbury with structures out of keeping with a country market town and there would be higher levels of pollution. The Inspector found all central routes unacceptable and the Secretaries of State accepted that.

Our Study Report last year looked again among other issues at central route options, but concluded that nothing had changed since 1988 which had made the Inspector's criticism less valid or which had altered the balance he had found in favour of the western bypass.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the compulsory purchase order was made to acquire land on which the Newbury bypass is to be built; and when compensation will start being paid to those affected by the order. [9522]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 16 January 1996:

As you know, John Watts has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Newbury Bypass.

The Compulsory Purchase Order for the scheme was made on 4 October 1993. Some compensation has already been paid, further payments will follow when negotiations with landowners are finalised.

Channel Tunnel Security Seal

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the safety of the security bolt seal chosen by Railfreight for channel tunnel operations relative to that of its competitors. [8486]

Mr. Watts: The bolt seal meets the requirement laid down by the Department that any seal used must be on the Custom and Excise group 1 or 2 list. Railfreight Distribution has asked the Loss Prevention Council to undertake independent tests on the seal in the light of allegations made about it.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if Railfreight is required to operate in an open-market, competitive manner in its allocation of contracts. [8487]

Mr. Watts: As with other public bodies, Railfreight Distribution must operate openly in a competitive market. EC rules require large contracts to be advertised in the Official Journal of the EU and to be available to bidders throughout the EC. I am advised that Railfreight Distribution selected the bolt seal in 1994 following the evaluation of a number of seals. In EC and Railfreight Distribution procurement terms this was a small contract. However, Railfreight Distribution has agreed that the next contract will be put out for full competitive tender.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations led Railfreight to require all users of the channel tunnel to use the same security bolt seal; and what are his powers in this respect. [8488]

Mr. Watts: This is entirely a management matter for the British Railways Board and Railfreight Distribution. I understand from the BR Board that for managerial and control purposes Railfreight Distribution needed a single, easily recognisable set of seals to permit rapid verification of the integrity of cargoes at depots in all weathers. It concluded that acceptance of more than one manufacturer's product could result in a multiplicity of seals which in Railfreight Distribution's view would have impeded the safe and efficient discharge of its responsibilities. The BR Board has reviewed this decision and agreed that this was correct in the circumstances.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration his safety inspectorate has given to the security seal policy of Railfreight; and what is its judgment thereon. [8489]

Mr. Watts: Security matters are the responsibility of my Department's transport security division. Its inspectors routinely consider all aspects of channel tunnel security. They do not consider that there are any security problems with the seal system in use by Railfreight Distribution.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has met representatives of the British security seal industry about Railfreight's policy on security seals for the channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement. [8490]

Mr. Watts: I have had one meeting with Mr. Bill Tait, the former chairman of the Security Seal Industry Association, and I have been in correspondence with the current chairman, Mr. Ken Lloyd. The policy on the use and control of seals is for Railfreight Distribution to determine. The Department's role is to lay down the standard of seal required.

London Airports (Access)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to allow formal local government membership of his London airports surface access study steering group. [8532]

Mr. Norris: To keep it at a manageable size, the membership of the steering group for the London airports surface access study is restricted to representatives from several Government Departments and from transport and airport operators.

During the study, advice and information is being sought from other interested parties, including local authorities and local authority groups, such as the South and West London Transport Conference— Sweltrac—of which Spelthorne borough council is a member.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what development opportunities and possible new routes have been discussed by his London airports surface access study steering group. [8533]

Mr. Norris: The London airports surface access study is examining the opportunities for improving surface access to and between London's main airports—Heathrow, Gatwick, Stansted, Luton and London City airports. As well as considering new links and development opportunities, the study will assess the extent to which such improvements would relieve future congestion on road links to the airports. The LASAS consultants are reviewing a wide range of proposals and schemes and are due to report by the end of June.

Cars (Environmental Pollution)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he proposes to introduce to (a) discourage the use of the car and (b) encourage the use of alternative forms of transport. [8600]

Mr. Norris: Measures to discourage the use of the car and encourage alternatives are being promoted by local authorities within the context of the package approach. The need for further measures has been discussed widely as part of the national debate on transport policy, on which the Government intend to produce a further report.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department is currently taking to increase the amount of public information available in respect of the environmental effects of car pollution. [8603]

Mr. Norris: My Department regularly issues advice in official publications to motorists and operators on environmentally conscious driving and, in conjunction with the Department of Environment, is undertaking a number of initiatives to increase the amount of public information available.

One recent initiative, under the aegis of the Greener Motoring Forum, was the launch of a pilot information campaign, with garages and dealerships in five cities. This offered motorists a free exhaust emissions test and a booklet, "Running a greener car," explaining what they can do to improve their car's environmental performance.

More generally, the first national air quality strategy, which the Government intend to publish for consultation within the next few months, will include a detailed breakdown of the source of many common air pollutants, including road transport where appropriate, and the steps which we will take or expect others to take to reach air quality standards and objectives. The Government also publish the "Digest of Environmental Statistics" and sponsor publications such as the independent reports of the expert panel on air quality standards, which spell out clearly the environmental effects of different sources of pollution, including cars.

Rural Transport Services

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many rural bus routes have been (a) withdrawn and (b) curtailed since 1979. [8602]

Mr. Norris: The Traffic Commissioners' records of bus service registrations, variations and withdrawals do not differentiate between rural and urban routes, and so the information requested cannot be provided. The annual report of the Traffic Commissioners shows the total numbers of services withdrawn or varied for each traffic area.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many rural train stations have closed since 1979. [8601]

Mr. Watts: Twenty stations in rural locations have been closed since 1979.

Research Costs

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of his Department's transport research budget is devoted to investigating transport by (a) rail and (b) road; and what sums his Department has spent on these areas in the last year for which figures are available. [8604]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 49. It is primarily for the rail industry to commission research particular to its needs. In 1994–95 my Department spent £69,000 on research devoted to investigating transport by rail and £33,800,000 on research devoted to investigating transport by road.

National Integrated Transport Strategy

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to advance a national integrated transport strategy. [8605]

Mr. Norris: Decisions on the future direction of transport policy will be taken in the light of the national transport debate.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9589]

Mr. Norris: Records of the powers and the parliamentary procedures specified in relation to them are not kept and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in the past five years the holder of his office has travelled overseas at public expense without being accompanied by civil servants. [9813]

Sir George Young: None.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the environmental organisations he has met over the past year to discuss transport issues. [8599]

Sir George Young: Since taking up my position in July, I have had meetings with a number of environmental organisations, including:

The Cyclists Public Affairs Group

English Heritage

English Nature

The Environmental Transport Association

The National Trust

The Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution

The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds

Transport 2000.

Newarthill

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list existing contracts between the Highways Agency and the United Kingdom company Newarthill and its subsidiaries. [9722]

Mr. Watts: Newarthill is the ultimate parent company of a number of subsidiary firms making up the Sir Robert McAlpine group. The Highways Agency's business contracts are confined to Sir Robert McAlpine Ltd., which is presently undertaking one contract in joint venture with Fitzpatrick Contractors Ltd. The contract is the A406 Silver street to Hall lane, Fore street underpass, which commenced on 24 April 1995.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what levels of noise and settlement in combination with each other will qualify as a serious effect under the Union Railways discretionary purchase scheme published in July 1995 in relation to the channel tunnel rail link. [9088]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The discretionary purchase guidelines placed in the Library on 19 July 1995 outline the type of factors that Union Railways Ltd. takes into account when deciding whether the enjoyment of a property is likely to be seriously affected. The factors listed are not exhaustive and other factors and combination of factors will be taken into account when considering individual applications.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

North Korea

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response Her Majesty's Government have made to appeals for food aid in response to the famine in North Korea; and if he will make a statement. [9068]

Mr. Hanley: The ODA contributed £150,000 through UN agencies and the International Red Cross to give food and other relief supplies last autumn. We have recently agreed to fund two Save the Children Fund nutritionalists to work with the World Food Programme in North Korea on famine assessment.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Sri Lankan Government on providing financial and material help to rebuild Jaffna; and if he will make a statement. [8559]

Mr. Hanley: We have made clear to the Sri Lankan Government on a number of occasions that we are ready to help in assessing the rehabilitation of power supplies in Jaffna as soon as peace has been restored and the relevant Sri Lankan officials are in place.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial assistance he plans to make available to Cyprus when a settlement is agreed; and if he will make a statement. [8551]

Mr. Hanley: The question of any financial assistance to Cyprus in the context of a settlement will be considered at the appropriate time.

Public Opinion Surveys

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what public opinion surveys his Department has undertaken on attitudes to aid and development issues. [8875]

Mr. Hanley: As part of a survey on the effectiveness of its external communications, the ODA commissioned National Opinion Poll to conduct a public opinion survey in November 1995 which looked generally at the way the public viewed the aid programme.

Bilateral Aid

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which five recipient countries have received the largest (a) increase and (b) decrease in United Kingdom bilateral aid since 1992. [8871]

Mr. Hanley: Statistics on aid expenditure usually relate to financial years, and in this case cover the changes between 1992–93 and 1994–95, the latest year for which information is available. The table gives the requested information for expenditure on the ODA aid programme, excluding the Commonwealth Development Corporation and expenditure from other Government Departments.

The countries receiving the largest increases and decreases in bilateral ODA aid programme expenditure from 1992–93 to 1994–95

Recipient country	Change (£ million) 1994–95 cf 1992–93
Increases
Rwanda	+45.0
Russia	+20.8
Malawi	+20.3
Pakistan	+8.9
States of ex-Yugoslavia	+8.5
Decreases
Malaysia[1]	−16.7
Ghana	−15.2
Somalia	−13.7
India	−12.1
Zimbabwe	−11.8

[1] Expenditure on Pergau is included for 1992–93 but not for 1994–95. If expenditure on Pergau were excluded from the 1992–93 figures, Malaysia would no longer appear in the table. Bangladesh would then feature with a decrease of −£10.6 million.

Aid Expenditure (Effects)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to measure the impact of aid expenditure on the poorest people. [9119]

Mr. Hanley: The ODA's policy information marker system identifies aid used for direct assistance to poor people. More broadly, the ODA assesses the impact of its programmes on poverty reduction through close project monitoring, assessment made at project completion and subsequent project evaluations. The evidence gathered in recent years is summarised in the "Progress Report on ODA's Policy Objectives", dated May 1995, a copy of which is available in the Libraries of the House.

Aid Allocations (Priorities)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the priority sectors in aid allocations to recipient countries following the Overseas Development Administration's fundamental review of expenditure. [8869]

Mr. Hanley: The ODA will continue to allocate the majority of bilateral aid on a country-by-country basis.

Country strategies and priority sectors will be developed according to the specific needs of individual countries, and in full consultation with them. These programmes will contribute to the wider aims set out in the ODA's revised mission statement.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on current and future regional priorities for the aid programme following the Overseas Development Administration's fundamental expenditure review. [8873]

Mr. Hanley: The fundamental expenditure review confirmed the need for continued substantial levels of concessional aid. The ODA's intention will remain to focus this aid on where it is most needed and where it can do most good. This means that aid will continue to be concentrated on the poorest countries, although there remains a continuing need for help to be given to countries in transition. The FER concluded that the effectiveness of the aid programme will be increased if substantial aid programmes are confined to a smaller number of recipients. The ODA will continue to move in this direction.

Dominica

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid has been provided to Dominica for each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for the changes in the aid provision. [8697]

Mr. Hanley: UK bilateral aid disbursements to Dominica over the past five financial years were as follows:

1990–91: £1.565 million.

1991–92: £1.986 million.

1992–93: £2.907 million.

1993–94: £2.173 million.

1994–95: £0.287 million.

The lower disbursement figure in 1994–95 relates to the UK's decision to tie the release of funds from our 1993 aid grant to the clearance of arrears on repayments of past UK aid loans to Dominica.

Developing Countries (Private Expenditure)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the latest figures on private flows from the United Kingdom to developing countries in (a) pound sterling and (b) as a percentage of GNP. [8949]

Mr. Hanley: The latest estimate of UK private flows to developing countries in 1994 is as follows:

	£ million
Direct investment	3,100
Guaranteed export credits (net)	27
Other bilateral securities and claims	1,241
Total	£4,368
Total as a percentage of GNP	0.64 per cent.

Development Assistance

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the aims and objectives of United Kingdom development assistance following the Overseas Development Administration's fundamental expenditure review. [8874]

Mr. Hanley: The ODA fundamental expenditure review reviewed the ODA's mission statement set out in its 1995 departmental report. It concluded that there was scope for greater clarity and focus about what the ODA should be seeking to achieve. As a consequence, the ODA has adopted the following revised mission statement:

"ODA's purpose is to improve the quality of life of people in poorer countries by contributing to sustainable development and reducing poverty and suffering.

To this end ODA will aim:

- to encourage sound development policies, efficient markets and good government;
- to help people achieve better education and health and to widen opportunities—particularly for women;
- to enhance productive capacity and to conserve the environment; and
- to promote international policies for sustainable development and enhance the effectiveness of multilateral development institutions."

This revised mission statement will appear in ODA's 1996 departmental report.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service Pension Scheme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement in respect of the future principal civil service pension scheme. [9110]

Mr. Willetts: Occupational pensions for civil servants will continue to be provided through the principal civil service pension scheme.

Public Service Pensioners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the pensions payable to public service pensioners in each of the years from 1979 covering grades from CA to assistant secretary, assuming the top of grade retiring salary, the award of pensionable performance pay and 30 years' service. [9111]

Mr. Willetts: This information is available only at disproportionate cost.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement. [9142]

Mr. Willetts: My agency chief executives have no plans to change their arrangements for the provision of pre-retirement courses.

Open Government Code

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the total cost to date of publicising (a) the citizens charters and (b) the open government code. [8557]

Mr. Willetts: To date, 40 main charters have been produced covering a wide range of public services. In addition, there are 8,000 local charters setting out the standards of service that users can expect. The cost of publicising charters is the responsibility of individual Departments and services. This information is not held centrally by my Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The total cost to date of specifically publicising the open government code is approximately £183,000.

I gave additional details of the way in which the code has been publicised in my answer to the hon. Member on 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 121.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9228]

Mr. Willetts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 15 January by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People, Official Report, column 417. I will ensure that the Cabinet Office and those bodies for which it is responsible are made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Engagements

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list his engagements for Monday 18 December and for Tuesday 19 December 1995. [8609]

The Deputy Prime Minister: On each day, I had a number of meetings with ministerial colleagues and others.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in her Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by her before they are sent; and if she will identify such letters to which amendments by her have been made in 1994–95. [7837]

Mr. Sproat: Parliamentary questions are passed on to the head of an executive agency for reply when the matter is one delegated to him or her under the agency framework document. The relevant Minister may see a copy of the reply before it is sent, but would not normally intervene in operational matters. In 1994–95 no such replies were amended by Ministers.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action heads of all her Department's executive agencies are taking to protect pre-retirement courses in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies; and if she will make a statement. [9135]

Mr. Sproat: Neither the Historic Royal Palaces agency nor the Royal Parks agency has any plans to make economies by cutting the provision of pre-retirement training, which we consider to be an important step in preparing our staff for leaving full-time employment.

Television Licences (Visually Impaired Persons)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the visually impaired persons rebate on television licence costs was last reviewed; and what the rebate would now be if it had been increased in line with inflation since then. [8554]

Mr. Sproat: The reduction in the television licence fee for registered blind people used to be equivalent to the radio licence fee. The last increase was in 1965 and, since radio licences were abolished in 1971, the reduction in the television licence fee issued to blind people has remained at £1.25. If the reduction had increased with inflation from 1965 it would have risen to £12.65 by November 1995, based on latest available retail prices index figures. A specially adapted monitor which receives broadcast television signals in sound only is available from the Royal National Institute for the Blind. No licence is required to use such a monitor.

BBC World Arabic Service

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will require the British Broadcasting Corporation to explain the circumstances in which the news broadcasters of the BBC World Arabic Service were interrupted during coverage of Her Majesty's Government's decision to deport Professor Mohammed al-Masari; and if she will make a statement. [8723]

Mr. Sproat: I understand that the BBC is investigating as a matter of urgency the circumstances surrounding the reported interruptions to BBC Worldwide's Arabic news service. This television service is a commercial venture and it is for the BBC to decide what action to take in the light of its findings.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidance she intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which she has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if she will make a statement. [9233]

Mr. Sproat: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People gave on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 417. I will ensure that my Department and any bodies for which it is responsible will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Works of Art

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the allocations made to public institutions in the United Kingdom during the half-year ended 31 December 1995 of individual works of art and museum objects pre-eminent for national, scientific, historic or artistic interest which have been accepted in satisfaction of inheritance tax, together with information, where applicable, as to conditions or wishes expressed by testators or executors in the matter of allocation; and if she will list the works of art and museum objects which are still awaiting allocation, with the respective dates of their acceptance in satisfaction of inheritance tax. [9015]

Mr. Sproat: The information is as follows:

Item	To whom allocated	Condition/wishes
Paintings by Joshua Reynolds	National Trust	Condition
Pair of George I Pier Glasses	National Trust	Condition
Chattels from Killerton	National Trust	Condition
Four works of Ben Nicholson and two works by Barbara Hepworth	Tate Gallery	Condition

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the items for which the issuing of export licences was withheld on the recommendation of the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art during the half-year ended 31 December 1995, specifying in each case the valuation and whether an item was exported or retained, with particulars in the latter event of the acquiring institutions; and if she will list any items for which the licences have been withheld but the final disposal of which is not yet decided, specifying in each case (a) the valuation and (b) the relevant time limit. [9014]

Mr. Sproat: The information is as follows:

Description of item	Valuation £	Outcome
A painting "The Holy Family", by Giulio Romano, (c.1490–1546)	1,720,320	Export licence granted.
A George II open armchair, c.1727	325,000	Export licence granted.
A pair of George II walnut side chairs, c.1731	446,363	Export licence granted.
A pair of George II open armchairs, 1740	202,912.50	Export licence granted.
A painting "Judith with the Head of Holofernes" by Lucas Cranach the Elder, 1530	314,662.50	Acquired by the Burrell Collection, Glasgow.
A court dress or mantua of ivory silk damask, c.1755	78,826	Acquired by the Royal Ceremonial Dress Collection of the Historic Royal Palaces, Hampton Court.
The Coronation Bible of George III, c.1761	350,000	Export licence granted.
The frame of the Coronation Crown of George IV, 1821	376,000	Export licence application withdrawn.
The frame of the Coronation Crown of Queen Adelaide, 1831	425,000	Export licence application withdrawn.
The frame of the Imperial State Crown of George I, 1715	576,000	Export licence application withdrawn.
A painting "La Lecture de Moliere" by Jean Francois de Troy	4,497,672	Purchased by a UK buyer.
A Celtic buckle from a chariot horse harness, c.1st century A.D.	2,940.63	Acquired by the Kings Lynn Museum.
Three letter-books and a diary of Sir William Boothby (1639–1706)	32,500	Acquired by the British Library.
A drawing "Landscape with Boats on a River and Merchandise on the Shore" by Giovanni Francesco Barbieri, called Il Guercino (1591–1666)	70,000	Export licence granted.
An Anglo-Indian lacquer commode, c.1770—1780	49,000	Export licence application withdrawn.
A painting "The Holy Family with the Infant St. John" by Fra Bartolommeo (1472–1517)	14,000,000	Decision deferred until after 8 May 1996.
A painting "Lord Willoughby de Broke and his family at Breakfast" by Johan Zoffany, c.1766	3,500,000	Decision deferred until after 5 February 1996.
A lady's secretary by Thomas Chippendale (1718–1779)	570,000	Decision deferred until after 5 February 1996.
An archive of manuscripts relating to the editing of "Principia Mathematica" by Sir Isaac Newton c.1726	400,000	Decision deferred until after 5 February 1996.
A collection of architectural drawings for Trentham Hall signed or annotated by Sir Charles Barry and others, 1834–1914	75,820	Decision deferred until after 5 February 1996.

BBC Transmitters

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make it a condition of the acquisition of the BBC transmitters that the company awarded the licence shall have an obligation to (a) acquire the ownership, (b) maintain and (c) fully finance the running of community-owned booster masts throughout Britain. [7733]

Mr. Sproat: The BBC is handling the arrangements for the sale of its transmission services. At present, the responsibility for the ownership, maintenance and funding of community-owned booster masts in Britain lies with the communities themselves. We have no plans to impose on the purchaser of BBC transmission services new obligations in respect of community-owned booster masts.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9592]

Mr. Sproat: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Televised Sport

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) which television organisations are giving evidence to the Government in connection with the possible protection for the terrestrial television channels of the major sporting events; [8708]

(2) on what date the Government begin their consideration of the coverage of major sporting events on terrestrial television; [8709]

(3) when she expects the Government's consideration of protection of major sporting events for the terrestrial television channels to be completed; [8707]

(4) if she will list the people who are currently considering the issue of how to protect the major sporting events for the terrestrial television channels. [8706]

Mr. Sproat: The Government's position is that sporting bodies should in general be free to sell their broadcasting rights in the interests of their sport. We have received a number of representations, and are aware of public debate on this issue; and we are keeping our policy undercloserevieW.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Numeracy and Literacy Centres

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultations she has had with local education authorities concerning her proposal to establish numeracy and literacy centres; what will be the basis of selection for those attending; and if attendence will be voluntary or optional or obligatory additional to existing teaching duties or on secondment for an existing appointment. [8459]

Mr. Robin Squire: Departmental officials consulted the local authority associations on the nature of the scheme and have offered all local education authorities the opportunity to attend a discussion on 16 January to inform the production of their bids.

Details of the operation of the scheme and the criteria for selection of LEAs are included in the letter which was sent to all chief education officers on 5 January. I will write to the hon. Member enclosing a copy of this letter, and will place copies of the letter in the Libraries of both Houses.

Barnsley and Doncaster Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the impact of the Budget on Barnsley and Doncaster TEC; and if she will make a statement. [8456]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment wrote to all training and enterprise council chairmen in England on 28 November regarding the effects of the budget announcement on TECs. Officials from the Government office for Yorkshire and Humberside have had preliminary meetings with all TECs in the region. Detailed discussions with Barnsley and Doncaster TEC will begin later this month.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the accuracy of the published information on the value of Barnsley and Doncaster TEC's contract with the Employment Department in the financial year 1994–95; and if she will make a statement. [8430]

Mr. Paice: Information on the Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council's budget for 1994–95 was published on 22 November 1994, Official Report, column 102, in a written answer to the hon. Member for Rother Valley (Mr. Barron) and the TEC's annual report for 1994–95 indicates income and expenditure relating to a range of activities, including those for which the Department contracts with the TEC. The accuracy of the written answer was checked by my officials, and the financial information in the TEC's annual report is extracted from the annual statutory report and accounts which are subject to external audit.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what negotiations have taken place between her Department and Barnsley and Doncaster TEC to make provision for employment for the over-45 year age group; and if she will make a statement. [8431]

Mr. Paice: Negotiations between the Department and Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council cover a number of matters, including training for work which is open to eligible unemployed adults up to the age of 63. Clients in the over 45 age group also have access to a range of Employment Service programmes through the local jobcentres.

Youth Training Scheme (Walthamstow)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many eligible young people in Walthamstow are currently unable to obtain a place on a youth training scheme. [8975]

Mr. Paice: There are no young people in Walthamstow for whom the youth training guarantee has not been met.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of new nursery places likely to be created in the nursery voucher pilot scheme areas as a result of the voucher scheme. [9058]

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of additional places created through the nursery voucher scheme will depend on the response of providers to parental demand. I am confident that providers of all types, either alone or in partnership with each other, will satisfy parental demand over time.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of Office for Standards in Education inspections of nursery providers that will be carried out in the nursery voucher pilot areas during phase 1; what these inspections will cost; and what extra resources will be made available to Ofsted to accommodate increased inspection. [8719]

Mr. Squire: Setting aside maintained schools which are already subject to regular inspection by Ofsted, initial planning estimates indicate that for the first phase of the scheme some 600 inspections of voucher redeeming establishments will be required. The precise number will depend upon the number of providers who take part in the scheme.

A total of £5 million has been set aside for the inspection and administration during the first phase, the greater proportion of which will be spent on the recruitment and training of inspectors in preparation for the second phase.

Post-GCSE Pupils

Dame Elaine Kellett-Bowman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what statistics are maintained (a) nationally and (b) regionally providing details of the movement of pupils in the two years following GCSE. [8540]

Mr. Paice: Statistics are collected by careers services on the first destinations of all 16-year-olds following the completion of their compulsory education. The local area statistics are aggregated to provide regional and national figures. The findings are normally published early the following year and the report on the destinations of the 1995 year group is expected shortly. In recent years the report has been published by the Association of County Councils with the support of the UK heads of careers services and the Department.

Additionally, since 1985 the Department has funded the youth cohort study. This is a postal questionnaire survey of approximately 20,000 young people in their first year after the end of compulsory schooling. The sample is representative of young people of the given age group in England and Wales.

Further questionnaires are sent to the same young people in each of the following two years, so providing information on their progress at 16–17, 17–18, 18–19 years of age.

The YCS provides detailed information on the school experience, current activity, education, qualifications, employment and training of young people, together with a small amount of contextual socio-demographic background data. The study was designed to provide a national picture and reports normally concentrate on national figures.

Dame Elaine Kellett-Bowman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will collect statistics on the movement of pupils in the two years following GCSE. [8541]

Mr. Paice: The Department plans to extend the requirement on careers services so that they also collect information on the first destinations of 17 and 18-year-old school leavers. In future years this requirement may be further extended to include the corresponding further education college leavers and provide a fuller picture.

Classroom Violence

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers have been subjected to violence in the classroom in each year since 1990. [9259]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not available centrally.

Office for Standards in Education

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will give a breakdown of the Ofsted budget for 1996–97; and if she will make a statement. [9556]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Training for Work

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what considerations led the Government office for the north-west and the Employment Service not to consult training providers for their views in compiling the north-west training for work study. [9703]

Mr. Paice: The study was designed to identify how training and enterprise councils and the Employment Service could work together more effectively to enhance the take-up of training for work opportunities. It is a highly focused study and there was insufficient time available for another study involving training providers or interviews of TFW participants.

The results were subsequently discussed at a workshop that involved a number of training providers and their views have been taken into account by TECs, the ES and the Government office in managing TFW.

Education Budget (Metropolitan Counties)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the percentage of each of the metropolitan counties' education budget which is spent on (a) schools and (b) on non-school expenditure together with the amount of money this represents per school pupil in each case. [8882]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows for each metropolitan county local education authority the percentage of net recurrent expenditure spent in 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available, on: (a) pre-primary, primary, secondary and special schools; and (b) other education services, including education other than at school, adult education, continuing education, discretionary awards, youth and other community services, service strategy and regulation and education support services. The table also shows the amount spent per pupil, although in the case of non-schools expenditure school pupils are not the principal clients and the figures are not therefore meaningful.

Teachers

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers are employed in each local education authority (a) currently (b) in 1979, (c) in 1985 and (d) in 1990; and if she will make a statement. [8676]

Mr. Robin Squire: The full-time equivalent numbers of teachers employed in each local authority area in the maintained—including grant-maintained—nursery, primary and secondary sector in January 1995 are shown in the following table. The table excludes staff in sixth form colleges which transferred to the further education sector on 1 April 1993.

Information for the years 1979, 1985 and 1990 include sixth form colleges and are contained in the Department of Education and Science "Pupil/Teacher Ratios in each Local Education Authority in England", statistical bulletins 17/79, 6/86 and 5/91, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9585]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information cannot be supplied other than at disproportionate cost, but the overwhelming majority of statutory instruments which are subject to parliamentary procedure are subject to the negative procedure.

Employment Advertisements (Age Limit)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what her Department's policy towards banning an upper age limit in employment advertisements. [9724]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department remains committed to the elimination of upper age limits in job advertisements. Age discrimination makes no business sense and that is why the Government's campaign for older workers continues to emphasise this to employers. Increasing numbers of employers are responding to the message and are recruiting people on the basis of ability and skill and not age. The Department has produced a series of publications aimed at employers and older workers as part of a co-ordinated campaign.

The campaign's latest publication, "Age Works", encourages recruitment agencies and employment businesses to oppose age discrimination in the selection and recruitment of older workers in their job vacancies. Another publication to be published later this year targets the recruitment advertising industry.

Social and Economic Deprivation

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment where the district which includes the Hastings travel-to-work area lies for levels of social and economic deprivation in relation to other London and south-east districts. [7796]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

The Department's index of local conditions shows that Hastings is the 23rd most deprived district out of a total of 103 districts in London and the south-east.

Strikes

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many working days have been lost through strike action in 1994; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the last 16 years. [9545]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

Data for working days lost through strike action in the United Kingdom are given in the following table:

1978	9,405
1979	29,474

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mobile phones have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [8038]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry and its associated executive agencies have been procuring mobile phones since 1990. Therefore, the information that follows covers the period from April 1990 to date.

We currently have approximately 1,469 mobile phones which were procured under centrally negotiated call-off arrangements. Two suppliers have been used, Racal Vodafone (Vodac Ltd.) from 1 April 1990 to 28 February 1993 and Mercury Communications Ltd. from 1 March 1993 to present.

The Ministry will shortly be tendering its requirements for mobile phones.

The number of mobile phones bought each year are as follows:

1990: 32
1991: 137
1992: 162
1993: 398
1994: 506
1995: 234.

Livestock Transport

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from (a) individual farmers and (b) farming organisations about the practical consequences of implementing EC directive 95/29 on livestock transport in sparsely populated areas. [8200]

Mrs. Browning: Out of a total of 127 responses to our recent consultation exercise on proposals for implementing Council directive 95/29/EC, (a) two individuals and (b) 13 farming organisations raised the issue of implementation in sparsely populated areas. Over 680 organisations and individuals were consulted in England and Wales.

Food Regulations

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the food regulations that ceased to be effective in the United Kingdom on 1 January; and if he will make a statement. [8451]

Mrs. Browning: The following regulations, and any amendments to them, were revoked on 1 January 1996:

Food Standards (General Provisions) Order 1994

Integrated Administration and Control System

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received following his decision to hold back payment of IACS cheques to farmers from December 1995 to January 1996; and if he will make a statement. [9336]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 January 1996]: Some 83 per cent. of claims under the arable area payments scheme were paid before 31 December 1995. We regret the delay to the remainder, which will be paid as soon as possible. Representations have been received from farming organisations and a number of individuals about the delay in making the remaining payments.

TREASURY

Monetary Union

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what considerations underlay his assessment of the prospects for the success of the Euro following the Madrid summit. [7725]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My assessment was based on my experience of frequent discussions of the subject at European Councils and ECOFIN meetings over the past two and a half years.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will ask his panel of independent experts to report on the likelihood of the achievement of monetary union and the implications of the single currency for Britain; [7430]

(2) if he will commission and publish a report on the benefits and problems of monetary union, assessing the case for and against and the benefits and disbenefits of the United Kingdom's remaining outside. [7434]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Panel of Independent Forecasters' May 1995 report examined economic and monetary union. A copy of this report is available from the House of Commons Library.

Protocol No. 11, annexed to the EC treaty, means that the United Kingdom shall not be obliged or committed to move to the third stage of economic and monetary union without a separate decision to do so by the Government and Parliament. We will agree to take part in a single currency only if it is in our national interest to do so, given the circumstances at the time.

Tax (Self-assessment)

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax inspectors will deal with self-assessment in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97 and 1997–98. [8313]

Mr. Jack: Self-assessment will start with the 1996–97 tax year, and the tax return issued in April 1997. Accordingly, no tax inspectors will be dealing with self-assessment returns in advance of that date, although many inspectors have spent time helping taxpayers to prepare for self-assessment, giving seminars to local accountants, and so on. The need for tax inspector involvement in the work will increase progressively throughout 1997–98 and into 1998–99, as returns are received from taxpayers.

The Inland Revenue currently employs approximately 6,000 tax inspectors in local offices. Many of these deal with the affairs of taxpayers who receive tax returns, and will continue to do so when they start to received self-assessment tax returns.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons who are not currently using accountants the Department estimates will use accountants when the programme of self-assessment is introduced. [8317]

Mr. Jack: Neither the extensive market research programme nor surveys of those who have helped test the new tax return has yielded evidence that significant numbers of people will start to engage accountants as a result of self-assessment. On the contrary, some taxpayers viewed self-assessment as an opportunity to dispense with the services upon which they had previously depended.

A full trial of the system is taking place in Leicester and may give a clearer indication of likely attitudes in the light of experience of the new system. No such data are yet available.

The Inland Revenue considers that it is not necessary for those people who do not currently use the services of an accountant to engage one as a result of self-assessment. Those taxpayers who do not wish to calculate their own tax bill can ask the Inland Revenue to do it for them free of charge.

Income Tax Thresholds

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the maximum by which income tax thresholds could be raised as a consequence of a revenue reduction of (a) £1 billion, (b) £2 billion, (c) £3 billion, (d) £4 billion, (e) £5 billion and (f) £6 billion. [8476]

Mr. Jack: Latest estimates are that the personal allowance, including the age-related personal allowances, could be raised by the following amounts for the corresponding full year costs at 1996–97 levels.

Increase in non aged and aged personal allowances £	Full year cost at 1996–97 levels £ billion

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement. [9151]

Mr. Jack: The Treasury has no executive agencies.

Incomes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average income of the highest paid 1 per cent. of the population in each year since 1966; what was the percentage increase in each year; and what was the value of each year's income at 1995 prices. [9271]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information which can be provided, using new earnings survey data, is given in the following table. It is not possible to provide this level of data before 1986.

Earnings for years before 1995 can be converted to 1995 levels using the retail prices index (all items). This information is published in the Central Statistical Office Business Monitor MM23, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are United Kingdom relative export unit values at current rates of exchange (a) at the latest available date and (b) at the time of United Kingdom entry into the exchange rate mechanism. [9784]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: United Kingdom relative export unit values are published in table 2.15 of "Economic Trends". These figures are also available on the CSO central database, under the identifier FLAA, which can be accessed through the Library of the House.

Money Supply

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each year since 1966 the percentage changes in the real money supply. [9783]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Data for the narrow and broad measures of the money stock are available in tables 3.1C and 3.1D of "Financial Statistics". Data for the GDP deflator (table 2) and other measures of prices including underlying retail prices (table 23) are available in "Economic Trends". Both these publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact of the United Kingdom's membership of the exchange rate mechanism on (a) manufacturing jobs and (b) manufacturing plants. [9785]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The United Kingdom's membership of the ERM will have been one of the many features of economic policy and conditions at the time that affected manufacturing jobs and manufacturing plants. It is not possible to quantify precisely with any confidence the effects of ERM membership or any other specific feature of economic policy in isolation from others. ERM membership played an important part in enabling the United Kingdom to begin to reduce inflation and so begin the economic recovery which we are still experiencing.

Personal Pensions (Tax Relief)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the cost to date of tax relief allowed in respect of appropriate personal pensions contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme of individuals with annual earnings of (a) £2,000 or below, (b) up to £3,000, (c) up to £4,000, (d) up to £5,000, (e) up to £6,000, (f) up to £7,000, (g) up to £8,000, (h) up to £9,000 and (i) up to £10,000. [8175]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 9 January 1996]: I regret that the distribution of tax relief by earnings of participants is not available, but the total cost of tax relief for personal pensions is published annually in table 1.6 of "Inland Revenue Statistics".

714I and SC60 Tax Certificates

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers used (a) 714I and (b) SC60 certificates in each of the last five years. [8321]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 9 January 1996]: I refer to the reply which the then Financial Secretary gave to the hon. Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 15 March 1995, Official Report, column 608. The number of 714I holders recorded in April 1995 was 412,913.

The latest figures available are for October 1995, when 403,502 714I holders were recorded.

Small Businesses

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of his Budget proposals on small businesses during the next five years. [8560]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The Budget will encourage growth in output and jobs in small firms.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what legal costs, arising from the Scott inquiry, have been incurred by the Department on behalf of current and past (a) civil servants and (b) advisers and secondees; [8745]

(2) what legal costs, arising from the Scott inquiry, have been incurred, on behalf of Ministers and ex-Ministers, by his Department; and if he will name the individuals concerned. [8756]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The value of accounts settled to date from public funds for the provision of external legal services, incurred by my Department on behalf of Ministers, ex-Ministers, civil servants, former civil servants, and other advisers and secondees in connection with the Scott inquiry is £60,440. The cost of any advice in connection with the Scott inquiry given by Government lawyers as part of their normal duties cannot be quantified. It is not the Government's policy to identify the individuals who have received legal advice, either directly or indirectly.

Environmental Pollution Report

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what dates and on what matters, in connection with the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, "Transport and the Environment", he has made representations to the Secretary of State for Transport. [9094]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 15 January 1996]: There have been many contacts between the Treasury and the Department of Transport concerning the royal commission report since its publication in October 1994, including several discussions at both official and ministerial level.

Long-term Care

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the assumptions used to calculate the cost of the increased lower and upper capital limits for long-term care announced in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report"; how many additional people he expects to qualify next year under the new capital limits; how many would have qualified next year under the existing capital limits; and how many qualified in the current financial year. [8653]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 15 January 1996]: A wide range of data and assumptions underpinned determination of the provision for long-term care capital limit increases set out in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report". Of the order of 50,000 people currently in residential or nursing home care can expect to benefit from the increases. At the end of the last financial year, around 370,000 people received public support for residential or nursing home care.

Student Loans Company

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he proposes to take over the consequences for the Department for Education budget of the revenue effects of the postponement of the policy of transferring Student Loans Company assets to the private sector. [9177]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The postponement of the introduction of private loans will mean that the resultant savings will not be made in 1996–97. The Government will be considering what, if any, steps need to be taken as a consequence.

Pension Funds

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list each of the public sector pension funds detailing (a) the size of each scheme and (b) if it is funded or unfunded. [8565]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 15 January 1996]: Full details are not held centrally. Information covering the main public service schemes is as follows:

Scheme	Size (number of active members)	Type
Local government	1,190,000	Funded
NHS	870,000	Unfunded
Teachers	610,000	Unfunded
Civil Service	520,000	Unfunded
Armed forces	230,000	Unfunded
Police	140,000	Unfunded
Fire	40,000	Unfunded

DEFENCE

Porton Down

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the extramural contractors to the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down, who have agreed to their contractual relationship to the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment being disclosed to the public, outlining the subject of the contract, its value and its duration; and how many extramural contractors refused to have their contractual relationship being disclosed to the public; [7298]

(2) how many contracts in universities are being funded by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down; how many universities have these contracts; what is the total value of these contracts; how many of these contracts are classified; how many of these contractors have agreed to allow their contractual relationship to the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment to be disclosed to the public; and how many have refused. [7299]

Mr. Arbuthnot: These matters are for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 16 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence asking for details relating to extramural contractors to the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down and also for details of contracts with universities has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes CBDE as one of its divisions. I am answering both questions in this letter.

In order to avoid any confusion I should explain that we do not make any distinction between extramural research contracts and research contracts specifically with universities. The information you have asked for refers, therefore, to one group of extramural contracts with universities, research institutes and industrial companies.

As at Tuesday 9 January 1996 CBDE Porton Down had 53 of these contracts. Nineteen of the contractors have confirmed that they are prepared to have their contractual relationship disclosed to the public and, in fact, they are all universities. Fourteen have declined to make all the details of their relationship known to the public of which nine are in universities. The remaining twenty contractors have not declared their position, six of these being in universities.

Of theses 53 contracts a total of 42 have been placed with 21 universities. They have a value of approximately £5 million and a duration varying from several months to a few years. None of them are classified.

The nineteen university contractors who are prepared to make details of their relationship known to the public are:

Birmingham

Three contracts with a total value of £450K concerned with aspects of detection and decontamination. Duration between 2 to 4 years.

Bristol

Two contracts with a total value of £226K concerned with aspects of the medical countermeasures programme. Duration 3 years.

Durham

One contract with a total value of £98K concerned with aspects of the protective equipment programme. Duration 3 years.

Hull

Two contracts with a total value of £105K concerned with chemical analysis. Duration 3 to 4 years.

Leeds

One contract with a total value of £84k concerned with aspects of the medical countermeasures programme. Duration 3 years.

Newcastle

One contract with a total value of £68K concerned with aspects of the medical countermeasures programme. Duration 3 years.

Southampton

Two contracts with a total value of £178K concerned with aspects of the medical countermeasures and protective equipment programmes. Duration 1 and 4 years.

Warwick

One contract with a total value of £156K concerned with the hazard assessment research programme. Duration 4 years.

UMIST

Five contracts with a total value of £780K concerned with aspects of the hazard assessment and protective equipment research programmes. Duration between 1 and 3 years.

I hope this information is helpful.

Chemical and Biological Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the purpose of tests and studies carried out by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment on service volunteers with the nerve agent Tabun; when these tests and studies were first carried out; in which scientific journals the results of these tests and studies have been published; and what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the health effects of long-term exposure to Tabun. [9041]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 16 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what was the purpose of tests and studies carried out by the Chemical Defence Establishment on service volunteers with the nerve agent Tabun; when these tests were first carried out; in which scientific journals the results have been published; and what research his department has a) commissioned and b) evaluated into the health effects of long term exposure to Tabun has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment as one of its divisions.

Studies to evaluate the nerve agent Tabun were conducted following the discovery of this agent in German shells found after the collapse of the Third Reich at the end of the Second World War. The purpose of the investigations was to determine the incapacitating effects on service personnel resulting from exposure to sub-lethal doses. Military interest has always been concerned with short term exposure and no studies to assess the effects of long term exposure to any nerve agents have been carried out. Work with Tabun involving the use of service volunteers ended over 40 years ago. We can find no record of any results of the studies undertaken appearing in the scientific literature. It is probable that security considerations precluded the open publication of this work at the time it was conducted in the late 1940s and early 1950s.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times the steering group of the 1980 memorandum of understanding on chemical and biological defence between the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States of America has met since November 1992; where these meetings were held; what was decided at each of these meetings; and if he will place copies of the minutes of these meetings in the Library. [9043]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The steering group of the 1980 memorandum of understanding on chemical and biological defence between the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States of America has met three times since November 1992: in Canada in November 1993; in the United States of America in November 1994; and in the United Kingdom in November 1995. These meetings addressed policy on tri-national collaboration. The proceedings of these meetings are security classified. It is not therefore appropriate to place copies of the minutes in the Library of the House.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what grounds members of the ethics committee overseeing the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment are chosen; if members are required to sign the Official Secrets Act; what access they are given to classified information; and what annual reports this committee produces on its work. [9044]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Individuals are invited to become members of the independent ethics committee on the grounds that their expertise and experience complements those of the existing members, taking into consideration the guidelines on the constitution of ethics committees published by the Royal College of Physicians. The members of the committee are required to sign the Official Secrets Act as they have unrestricted access to any classified information which may related to the decisions taken by the committee. The committee produces an annual report which is given a security classification appropriate to the work conducted in that year.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the ethics committee overseeing the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment since 1991 had previously (a) served on a committee related to the work of Porton Down, (b) worked at Porton Down and (c) been in receipt of an extramural contract from Porton Down. [9045]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Two members of the independent ethics committee were members of the medical committee of the Chemical and biological defence board of the Defence Scientific Advisory Council in the 1970s and 1980s. The chemical, biological and human technology board replaced the chemical and biological defence board in 1994. Three members of the committee are members of the successor board. None of the independent members of the ethics committee has been employed at CBDE Porton Down. The technical director and the senior military officer of CBDE, who are in attendance at the ethics committee meetings, are employees of the Ministry of Defence. None of the members of the ethics committee is currently in receipt of an extramural contract from Porton Down

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what volume of arms and of what type was sold from the United Kingdom to (a) Nigeria, (b) Indonesia and (c) Turkey in each of the past five years. [9565]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade on 19 December 1995, Official Report, columns 1081–82. Beyond this, it remains Government policy not to reveal details of exports of defence equipment to particular countries. However, some additional information can be found in the annual UK return to the "UN Register of Conventional Arms", and in table 1.11 of the "UK Defence Statistics". Both documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

Army Technical Support Agency

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the possible redundancies within the Army Technical Support Agency if printing and distribution of technical documents and publications are privatised; and if he will make a statement; [9611]

(2) what assessment he has made of the security implications of contracting out the non-core activities of the Army Technical Support Agency; and if he will make a statement; [9612]

(3) what further plans he has for privatising non-core activities of the Army Technical Support Agency; [9613]

(4) what assessment he has made of the number of redundancies that will occur in the Army Technical Support Agency directorate of technical services at Woolwich as a result of current privatisation plans; [9614]

(5) what assessment he has made of the benefits of market testing or contracting out the printing and distribution of Ministry of Defence technical documents and publications. [9610]

Mr. Soames: These are matters for the chief executive of the Army Technical Support Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. R. Prince to Mr. John Austin-Walker, dated 16 January 1996:

PARLIAMENTARY QUESTIONS—ARMY TECHNICAL SUPPORT AGENCY

I am replying to five questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about Army Technical Support Agency (ATSA) business as this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the ATSA.

Question: What assessment has been made of the possible redundancies within the ATSA if printing and distribution of technical documents and publications are privatised?

Answer: The next exact number of redundancies which will result from contractorisation of printing and distribution of technical documentation is the subject of an on-going internal study, the results of which are still awaited. The Trade Unions have been advised accordingly and I will ensure that they and yourself are informed of the outcome as soon as possible.

Question: What assessment has been made of the security implications of contracting out the non core activities of the ATSA?

Answer: At present the only ATSA activity with security implications subject to contractorisation considerations is that of printing and distribution. Approximately 1% of the work has security implications. Potential contractors will only be considered providing they meet the MODs security requirements.

Question: What further plans has CE ATSA for privatising non core activities of the ATSA?

Answer: The current ATSA Competing for Quality (CFQ) programme, which includes all aspects of Technical Documentation and Publications, and site management services, is ongoing and may lead to further contractorisation. Any additional proposals will be consulted in the normal manner.

Question: What assessment has been made of the number of redundancies that will occur in the ATSA Directorate of Technical Services (DTS) at Woolwich as a result of current privatisation plans?

Answer: The exact number of redundancies resulting from the contractorisation of printing and distribution of technical documentation is the subject of an on-going internal study, the results of which are still awaited. The Trade Unions have been advised accordingly and I will ensure that they and yourself are informed of the outcome as soon as possible.

Question: What assessment has been made of the benefits of market testing or contracting out the printing and distribution of MOD technical documents and publications?

Answer: The ATSA study into the future of printing and distribution of MOD technical publications concluded that no work should be undertaken on the market testing option as the value of the ATSA print and distribution package is well below the recommended market testing threshold of £5M. This, coupled with the cost of having to collocate the unit as part of the ATSA restructuring programme, if the in-house bid won, made the market testing option non-viable.

Serving Mothers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many serving mothers are currently in post with the Royal Irish Regiment in Northern Ireland. [8212]

Mr. Soames: There are five female officers and 208 service women currently in post with the Royal Irish Regiment in Northern Ireland who have dependent children.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discretion is afforded to commanding officers of armed forces regiments in assignment of duties for young mothers who wish to develop careers as serving soldiers while their children are of pre-school attendance age. [8213]

Mr. Soames: Commanding officers may exercise discretion in the day-to-day employment of soldiers under their command, subject to the needs of the service. However, it is also the responsibility of all soldiers—male and female, single or married—to make suitable arrangements for the care of their children so that they are fully able to meet their service commitments.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent mothers of young children in the armed forces are required to carry out the same duties as male soldiers. [8214]

Mr. Soames: Female personnel with young children are, in common with all other service personnel, with or without the care and control of young children, expected to carry out the full range of duties for which they are employed. However, in accordance with health and safety regulations, special considerations apply to pregnant women and breast-feeding mothers which may result in their employment on alternative duties.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the terms and conditions of service in the armed forces for serving mothers with young children will be reviewed. [8215]

Mr. Soames: There are no plans for a special review of the terms and conditions of service for serving mothers with young children. A fundamental review of the terms and conditions of service for all service personnel is taking place under the independent review.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what information he received in respect of explosions on the sea bed in and around Beaufort's dyke in the North channel during 1995; when he received this information; what action he is taking as a result; and if he will make a statement; [8323]

(2) if he will list the explosions on the sea bed in and around Beaufort's dyke in the North channel notified to his Department for each year form 1979 to 1994, indicating the assumed cause of such explosions. [8324]

Mr. Soames: My Department has only recently received information about probable explosions dating back to 1982 from the British Geological Survey. There are many possible explanations for the readings recorded by the British Geological Survey, but the information provided is incomplete, and accordingly it is not yet possible to make a full analysis of the data.

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will (a) publish and (b) place in the Library all correspondence between his Department and Scottish Power and Northern Ireland Electricity on the route of the proposed electricity interconnector between Scotland and Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [8325]

Mr. Soames: It is not our general practice to publish current correspondence between my Department and others.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further assessment he has made in respect of his Department's advice to Scottish Power and Northern Ireland Electricity on the route of the proposed electricity interconnector with regard to (a) problems with the British Gas pipeline and (b) the recent report by the British Geological Survey on explosions around Beaufort's dyke; and if he will make a statement. [8326]

Mr. Soames: Future marine engineering work may proceed only once those proposing the work have shown that a thorough environmental survey, including risk analysis, has been conducted and have satisfied the responsible Government Departments and other authorities accordingly. My Department is consulted as necessary as part of this process.

Royal Observer Corps

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what public commendation or recognition his Department has given in respect of the Royal Observer Corps; and if he will make a statement. [8452]

Mr. Soames: On 8 December 1995, to commemorate the stand-down of the remaining element of the Royal Observer Corps, invited guests, officers and other ranks attended a ceremony at the Royal Air Force college, Cranwell to lodge the Royal Observer Corps banner in college hall. To mark this occasion, I wrote formally to the commandant of the Royal Observer Corps paying tribute to the men and women of the corps who have given so much to their sovereign and to their country. Throughout they have carried out their duties with honour and dedication.

Low Flying

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the applicability of EU directives to compensation arrangements for pain, suffering and loss of amenity arising from military low flying over inhabited areas of Great Britain. [8240]

Mr. Soames: We are unaware of any relevant new or impending EU directives having a bearing on the present compensation arrangements arising from military low flying.

Gulf War

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received and what research he has commissioned about the use of chemical or biological weapons by the Iraqis during the Gulf war and the effect of such weapons on British service men. [9063]

Mr. Soames: There was no evidence of any use of chemical or biological weapons during the Gulf war. Scientific and medical investigations have since confirmed that there is also no evidence that British service men have suffered from any effects which could be attributed to the use of chemical or biological weapons.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions United Kingdom authorities were consulted before the United States of America used depleted weapons in the Gulf war; and if he will make a statement. [9030]

Mr. Soames: There were no such consultations nor was there a need for them. Depleted uranium ammunition is a standard part of the inventory of both UK and US armed forces.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of depleted uranium in the Gulf war; what assessment has been made by his Department of the longer-term consequences of its use with particular reference to United Kingdom military personnel subject; what plans he has to develop depleted uranium as a weapon for the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [9029]

Mr. Soames: The British armed forces are equipped with two kinds of ammunition containing depleted uranium, DU: 120 mm tank ammunition, some small quantities of which were fired by Challenger tanks during the Gulf conflict; and 20 mm ammunition for the Royal Navy's Vulcan phalanx point defence system which, apart from some rounds fired for proving purposes, was not used in the Gulf.

There is no evidence that members of the British forces were exposed to harmful levels of radiation. My Department has, however, run a programme of reassurance monitoring for personnel who were concerned that they may have been exposed to DU. This monitoring has shown no detectable DU contamination of any individual.

Stocks of an anti-tank round, charm 1, which utilises a depleted uranium penetrator, are available for use by Challenger 1 tanks. Development of the charm 3 round for Challenger 2 tanks, which will also use depleted uranium, will be completed by the end of 1996. Stocks of DU ammunition for the phalanx weapons system are available for use by the Royal Navy. There are no other current plans to purchase further naval weapons systems which employ DU.

Munitions Dumping

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will hold an inquiry into the condition of munitions deposited in deep water, as marked on the relevant charts, just south of the inner sound of Raasay; and if he will make a statement; [9189]

(2) what representations he has received in respect of sea bed munition dumping, as marked on the relevant charts, in the vicinity of the inner sound of Raasay; and if he will make a statement. [9188]

Mr. Soames: My Department has no plans to hold an inquiry. Current scientific advice indicates that dump sites present no significant risk to human health or the marine environment if left undisturbed. My Department has no record of any representations about the inner sound of Raasay munition dumping ground.

Merchant Vessels

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many merchant vessels have been chartered by his Department for exercises and military support operations in 1995; and how many of these were under the British flag. [9495]

Mr. Soames: Some 91 merchant vessels have been chartered for exercises and military support operations in 1995, of which 17 were under the British flag.

Trident (Nuclear Incidents)

Mrs Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what emergency berths exist in Scotland for Trident in the event of a nuclear reactor or weapon incident; and where they are situated. [9410]

Mr. Soames: No berths are designated specifically for emergency use. The normal operating berths for Trident submarines are at the Clyde submarine base, Faslane and at the royal naval armaments depot, Coulport.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements exist for the safety of (a) military and (b) civilian populations in the event of a nuclear leak from Trident; and if he will make a statement. [9411]

Mr. Soames: In the event of an accident involving any defence nuclear material in the UK, the Ministry of Defence nuclear accident response organisation would work in conjunction with the appropriate civil agencies to ensure an effective response to safeguard the public and departmental employees. Where appropriate, information has been issued by the MOD under the provisions of the Public Information for Radiation Emergencies Regulations 1992; public safety schemes exist in respect of all UK berths used by nuclear-powered submarines; and guidance on appropriate protective measures in the event of an accident during the transportation of nuclear weapons has been issued to local authorities and the emergency services. These arrangements were described on pages 39 and 40 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1995".

Stolen and Lost Property

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 102, about stolen and lost property (a) how many weapons were lost or missing in each period and service and (b) what proportion of (i) all losses and (ii) weapon loss occurred in Northern Ireland. [9723]

Mr. Soames: Figures for weapons reported as lost or missing in each period and service could be provided only at disproportionate cost. A central register detailing losses to this level of information is not held.

Details of losses were given in my answer to the hon. Member on 9 January, Official Report, column 102. The proportion of those losses occurring in Northern Ireland for each of the last five years is:

	Per cent.
1990–91	3.2
1991–92	1.7
1992–93	1.6
1993–94	2.6
1994–95	[1]5.2

[1]The figure for 1994–95 does not take into account figures for Germany for which returns are not yet available.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the dates on which, (b) the locations where and (c) the units which during the Gulf war were ordered to take nerve agent pre-treatment set tablets because of an assessed threat of possible chemical agent attack. [9619]

Mr. Soames: During the conduct of Operation Granby, which ran from 9 August 1990 to 11 April 1991, the assessed threat of chemical weapon attack in the theatre of operations was regarded as sufficiently high to necessitate the issuing of orders for nerve agent pre-treatment, set tablets to be taken during the period from 18 January 1991, following the start of the air war, to 1 March 1991, when hostilities ceased. The orders applied to all units and personnel in, or deploying into, theatre.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many volunteer reservists served with the Royal Air Force in the Gulf war; and how many of them have notified his Department that they are suffering from the condition known as Gulf war syndrome. [9620]

Mr. Soames: Records indicate that a total of 286 Royal Auxiliary Air Force and Royal Air Force Volunteer Reserve personnel served with the Royal Air Force during Operation Granby, of whom approximately 140 deployed to the Gulf theatre. Of those Gulf veterans who have notified my Department of health concerns which they attribute to service in the Gulf, four individuals have indicated that they served with the RAF as reservists.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9595]

Mr. Soames: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ukrainian Personnel

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the arrangements that have been made to assist the retraining of Ukrainian military personnel; and if he will make a statement; [9407]

(2) what assistance is being provided for the resettlement of Ukrainian armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [9408]

Mr. Soames: In the course of an increasingly warm bilateral relationship with Ukraine, representatives of the Ukrainian MOD, the defence and security committee of the Supreme Council and the ex-servicemen's committee have been briefed on the UK system for retraining and resettling retired military personnel. These discussions are expected to continue. I also understand that assistance in this area has been provided by the FCO's know-how fund, by the European Union technical aid to the Commonwealth of Independent States—TACIS—programme, by the Soros Foundation's international renaissance foundation and by the German Government.

Married Quarters (Longhoughton)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the sale of surplus married quarters in Longhoughton, Northumberland, to a housing association was completed; and if he will name the housing association involved. [7706]

Mr. Soames [holding answer Tuesday 9 January 1996]: The 21 surplus married quarters at Longhoughton, Northumberland were offered for sale by limited tender to four housing associations in December 1995. No acceptable offer was received and it has therefore been decided to include these properties in those being offered for transfer to the private sector.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Greenpark Hospital Trust

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the exact amount of debt accrued by the Green Park Hospital HSS Healthcare trust as of 12 December 1995 to its creditors; and if he will list the creditors indicating the amounts owing to each. [8225]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available in the exact form requested. As at 31 December 1995, the Green Park Hospital HSS Healthcare trust had trade creditors of £1.9 million. This total comprises individual amounts in respect of some 600 creditors. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it is not appropriate to list amounts owed to individual creditors.

Mr. Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what amount of debt a self-regulatory trust is allowed to accrue at any stage during its fiscal year; and if he will indicate the figure in respect of Green Park Hospital HCC Healthcare trust. [8226]

Mr. Moss: A health and social services trust has three key financial duties. These are (1) to break even taking one year with another; (2) to make a 6 per cent. return on its relevant net assets; (3) to operate within its existing external financing limit. A trust is required to operate sound financial systems to control its income and expenditure and satisfy the duties set out in points (1) to (3). The EFL limits a trust's access to all sources of external finance, including the accumulation of trade creditors. For the year 1995–96, the Green Park Hospital HSS Healthcare trust's current EFL is £1,676,000. It should be noted that the EFL is a composite figure which takes account of the overall financial position of trust including debtor, creditor, stock and cash balances. The Green Park Hospital HSS Healthcare trust forecasts to stay within its EFL in 1995–96.

Colleges of Nursing

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many colleges of nursing there are in Northern Ireland; how many students attend each college of nursing (a) in total and (b) from the Republic of Ireland; what is the value of the bursary paid to a student from the Republic of Ireland; to what extent this bursary is means-tested; and what is the estimated cost to public funds for the annual expenditure for Republic of Ireland students. [8227]

Mr. Moss: The information is as follows:

There are six Colleges of Nursing and Midwifery in Northern Ireland

Training Institution	Number of students in training	Number of students from ROI[1]
Eastern Area College—Northside	429	82
Eastern Area College—Southside	397	46
Northern Area College of Nursing	371	26
Southern Area College of Nursing	257	63
Western Area College of Nursing	232	89
NI College of Midwifery	54	6
Totals	1,740	312

Figures as at 31 December 1995.
[1] Republic of Ireland.

The amount of bursary payable to students is not dependent on their Country of Origin and information on bursaries in payment is therefore not held by Country of Origin.
Bursaries are not means tested.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Northern Ireland applicants were refused places in 1995 in the colleges of nursing; and what priority is accorded to students from the Republic of Ireland over students from Northern Ireland in the provision of places. [8228]

Mr. Moss: Experience has shown that, on average, there are approximately 10 applicants for each student place.

No priority is accorded to students from the Republic of Ireland as all places are awarded on a merit basis.

Royal Ulster Constabulary (Expenditure)

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the projected expenditure for RUC operational policing in 1996; [8472]

(2) what was the (a) projected and (b) actual expenditure on RUC operational policing in 1995. [8471]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not held in the form requested; police budgets are calculated by financial, not calendar, year. The approved police authority grant for the 1996–97 financial year will be £584 million.

The projected expenditure—the approved grant to the Police Authority for Northern Ireland for the 1995–96 financial year—was £609.2 million. I will write to the hon. Member once the actual expenditure for 1995–96 is known in April 1996. In both cases, the provision covers all RUC and PANI costs.

Fair Employment Acts (Education)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were (a) the total number and (b) the annual salary payments of staff in the category of school teachers exempted from the anti-discrimination rules of the fair employment Acts; and if he will break down the figures by education board or council for Catholic maintained schools, and by controlled or maintained schools. [8495]

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

	Controlled/non-Catholic maintained		Catholic maintained		Total
	Numbers	£ million	Numbers	£ million	Numbers	£ million
Belfast Education and Library Board	1,382	33.3	1,573	37.3	2,955	70.6

Grant Aid

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much grant aid, and from which sources, has been allocated to each of the four Belfast constituencies in the past 10 years. [8010]

Mr. Ancram: The following grant aid has been committed by the Industrial Development Board under selective financial assistance to client companies in each of the four Belfast constituencies in the last 10 years.

Belfast North: £2,969,000

Belfast South: £41,905,000

Belfast East: £9,348,000

Belfast West: £67,937,000.

The figures exclude assistance under the privatisation agreements with Harland and Wolff and Shorts in 1989 which amounted to £205 million and £115 million respectively.

Information on schemes operated by IDB trade and export division is not recorded in a way in which it could be broken down into constituencies. The information is not therefore available.

The Local Enterprise Development Unit has committed the following grant aid in the period from 1 April 1988. Information prior to this date would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Belfast North: £9,925,000

Belfast South: £10,783,000

Belfast East: £7,648,000

Belfast West: £14,137,000.

Ulster Museum

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the attendance figures for 1995 reported by the Ulster museum, including its outstations, with the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1994. [9012]

Mr. Ancram: In 1995, a total of 337,829 people visited the Ulster museum and the Armagh county museum—an increase of 25.57 per cent. on the attendance figure for 1994.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9586]

Sir John Wheeler: This information is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Spending

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the change in Government spending in Northern Ireland in the law, order and protective services budget in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98; and if he will indicate the sums of money by which other areas of public spending will benefit from these savings in each of these years. [8222]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is as follows:

£ million

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
1993 Public Expenditure Survey Outcome	944	963	963
1995 Public Expenditure Survey Outcome	[1]905	858	858

[1] Latest estimated outturn.

The fact that my right hon. and learned Friend has been able to reallocate these savings within the Northern Ireland block to social and economic programmes has clearly been beneficial. As all savings within the block are combined and used to meet pressures, it is not possible to be precise about where the savings have been allocated.

Further information was given by my right hon. and learned Friend in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 11 December 1995, Official Report, columns 541–42.

Prisoners (Home Leave)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many (a) republican and (b) loyalist paramilitary prisoners were granted home leave over Christmas; and how many of each persuasion failed to return; [8483]

(2) how many (a) republican and (b) loyalist paramilitary prisoners were not granted home leave over Christmas. [8484]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for this subject has been delegated to the Northern Ireland Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. D. Shannon to Mr. Tony Worthington, dated 16 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to the two Parliamentary Questions you listed relating to the numbers of paramilitary prisoners who were granted/refused Home Leave over the Christmas period.

Of those prisoners who are assumed to have paramilitary associations, 125 were eligible to apply for leave under the 1995 Christmas Home Leave Scheme. All of these prisoners were granted 7 days leave from 22-29 December and all returned to prison on 29 December 1995.

The breakdown was:

68 prisoners with Republican affiliations

57 prisoners with Loyalist affiliations

No such prisoner who was eligible to apply under the 1995 Scheme was refused Christmas Home Leave.

I hope this information is helpful.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ukraine

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what involvement the United Kingdom has in Ukrainian defence conversion projects; and if he will make a statement. [9409]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Her Majesty's Government support the conversion of the Ukrainian military industrial complex through multilateral programmes such as the technical aid to the Commonwealth of Independent States—TACIS—programme of the European Union. A total of 5 million ecu has been budgeted to three defence conversion projects in Ukraine. In the 1992 budget, 1 million ecu was allocated to the setting up of an advisory company which was to assist military enterprises in the Kharkov area with defence conversion. Another 1 million ecu has been allocated to six companies from the MIC which are now producing agricultural equipment.

In the 1993 financial year, 3 million ecu was allocated to another six companies from the MIC.

British companies from the private sector are also active in this field. For example, a British-Ukrainian joint venture recently signed a contract with the Ukrainian Government for the conversion of a military shipyard to civilian use.

A feasibility study for this project received support from the UK know-how fund.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9584]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary has responsibility for making statutory instruments which are subject to the negative resolution procedure under the Southern Rhodesia Act 1979, the Antarctic Act 1994 and the Hong Kong Act 1985. He has responsibility for making statutory instruments which are subject to the affirmative resolution procedure under the Crown Agents Act 1979, the Zimbabwe Act 1979, the Overseas Development and Co-operation Act 1980 and the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency Act 1988.

SCOTLAND

Consultants

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those (a) consultants, (b) outside organisations and (c) individuals employed by his Department each year since 1990, indicating the purposes of their employment and the total payments made to them. [3956]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total number of Scottish Office staff can be found in the civil service staff in post summary tables which have been placed in the Library. Staff costs are published in the Scottish Office departmental report. It is not possible to provide the other information without disproportionate cost.

Scottish Homes

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Scottish Homes spent in each of the last three years on publicity and promotions. [7743]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information is as follows:

1992–93: £1.142 million

1993–94: £1.149 million

1994–95: £0.990 million.

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in his Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by him before they are sent; and if he will identify such letters to which amendments by him have been made in 1994–95. [7824]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Parliamentary questions are passed to the head of an executive agency for reply when the matter is one delegated to the chief executive under the terms of the agency framework document. My right hon. Friend may, on occasion, specifically ask to see a copy of the reply before it is sent, but would not normally intervene in operational matters. To date, my right hon. Friend has not asked to see before issue a copy of any of the answers given by chief executives.

Severe Weather Conditions

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Glasgow have been made temporarily homeless due to the recent severe weather conditions. [8941]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Information obtained from Glasgow district council suggests that around 1,000 people had to be placed in temporary accommodation following the recent severe weather. This figure does not include those who managed to find temporary accommodation with friends and relatives.

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the recent severe weather in Scotland. [8938]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Ayr (Mr. Gallie) on 10 January, Official Report, columns 235–38.

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit those areas of Glasgow his Department estimates to be worst affected by the recent severe weather conditions. [8958]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 15 January 1996]: On 5 January, my right hon. Friend visited the Strathclyde regional council water department headquarters and heard at first hand from the staff who had worked long and hard over the holiday period to maintain services. He learnt about the large numbers of properties which were affected by burst pipes and the efforts made to reduce the ensuring damage. I and my colleagues have paid similar visits in other parts of Scotland and we are all aware of the tremendous efforts made by the staff of the water authorities. Benefits Agency staff have also done very well in dealing with urgent cases of hardship. My right hon. Friend has established a working party to report on the lessons to be learnt from what was, by any standards, an extraordinary series of events.

Creagan Bridge

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) who he has consulted on the subject of a Creagan road bridge; and what plans he has to further consultations; [8544]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of the construction of the Creagan bridge; [8585]

(3) what is the timetable for the construction of the Creagan bridge; and if he will make a statement; [8542]

(4) what public funds will be made available for the construction of the Creagan bridge. [8543]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have consulted extensively on plans for the Creagan bridge with statutory consultees in line with schedule 1 to the Roads (Scotland) Act 1984. All directly affected landowners were visited by representatives from the National Roads Directorate. Plans were available for inspection locally at the time the draft road orders were published. On 1 May 1992, a compulsory purchase order was published under the Acquisition of Land (Authorisation Procedure) Scotland Act 1947 and on 5 February 1993 main line and side road orders were confirmed. Arrangements are currently being made for a public local inquiry to consider one unwithdrawn objection from a local landowner to the compulsory purchase order.

The cost of the scheme is currently estimated at £6.22 million. Given a satisfactory outcome at the public inquiry, and the continuing availability of resources, it is anticipated that construction will start in 1997–98, as a publicly funded project.

Flood Prevention (Strathclyde)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what response he has given (a) in writing or (b) verbally to Strathclyde regional council in respect of capital projects concerned with flood prevention. [8485]

Mr. Kynoch: No recent approaches have been made by Strathclyde regional council to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in respect of capital projects concerned with flood prevention. Indeed, no approaches have been made since the Brock burn/leven water flood prevention scheme was confirmed in 1993. This scheme was completed in late 1994 and grant assistance at 50 per cent. of eligible costs has been paid.

However, I am aware that Strathclyde has now commissioned flood studies of some of the areas affected in December 1994. This will assist the unitary councils in determining their flood prevention strategies. I welcome this initiative by Strathclyde regional council.

Munitions Dumping

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will hold an inquiry into the condition of munitions deposited in deep water, as marked on the relevant charts, just south of the inner sound of Raasay; and if he will make a statement. [9186]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish Office has no plans to hold an inquiry.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received in respect of sea bed munition dumping, as marked on the relevant charts, in the vicinity of the inner sound of Raasay; and if he will make a statement. [9187]

Mr. Robertson: No representations have been received by the Scottish Office in respect of munition dumping in that vicinity.

Skye Bridge Toll

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest available total number of cases referred to the local procurator fiscal in respect of non-payment of the Skye bridge toll; when he expects the procurator fiscal to report further; if such alleged offences will be subject to civil or criminal proceedings; and if he will make a statement. [8677]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available figures relating to non-payment of the Skye bridge toll in contravention of section 38(1) of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 are as follows:

> There have been 466 instances of non-payment which have been reported to the procurator fiscal; these instances involve 186 separate individuals. The procurator fiscal has been instructed by the Lord Advocate to institute criminal proceedings in respect of all instances where there is a sufficiency of evidence and the charges are now in course of preparation. The procurator fiscal will report the results of these proceedings to the Crown Office.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) guidelines and (b) other advice has been issued by his Department to (i) NHS bodies and (ii) other organisations regarding the extension of the private finance initiative to the operation of health services. [9081]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The "Private Finance Guide", issued to the NHS in Scotland, is the main source of guidance on PFI. In it, it is stated that the NHS would

> "manage and provide all the core health services, while the private sector partner could provide a fully serviced building. The precise division of responsibilities between the Trust and its private partner would need to be determined on the basis of whatever arrangement would offer best value for money and least risk".

No other guidelines have been issued on this subject. It is for trusts and boards to make this decision. The model so far has been that trusts will continue to operate core health services, with the private sector operating support services.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 14 December 1995, Official Report, column 817, if he will now agree to extend the nature and coverage of the follow-up survey of Beaufort's dyke (a) to include more sophisticated sonar and laser equipment and (b) to cover a wider geographic area, including depths below 30 m; and if he will make a statement. [8576]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 15 January 1996]: Full particulars of the further Government survey work announced at a press conference on 8 January in Aberdeen will be made available in due course.

Prisons (Education)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy towards education in Scottish prisons. [9276]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 January 1996]: As a recognised regime activity, education for prisoners is provided on the basis of need subject to prisoners' willingness to participate in what is a voluntary activity and resources being available. Courses range from literary and numeracy to degree level with a sizeable proportion focusing on recognised qualifications such as the Scottish Vocational Education Council modules to help prisoners find employment and to continue with their studies on release.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list those prisons in Scotland which provide educational courses leading to recognised qualifications for prisoners; [9273]

(2) if he will estimate the level of public expenditure that has been devoted to education in Scottish prisons over the last five years and the levels projected to be spent over the next three years; [9274]

(3) how many prisoners in Scottish jails are currently studying on courses leading to educational qualifications; [9275]

(4) what studies his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated to investigate the effect of education in Scottish jails on recidivism rates; [9277]

(5) what plans he has to set up a Scottish prison education trust to assist in promoting education in Scottish prisons; [9278]

(6) what estimate he has made of the proportion of prisoners in Scottish prisons who would be willing to undertake education while serving prison sentences if appropriate courses were available. [9279]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The subjects of the questions relate to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. A. Stewart to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 16 January 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked the Chief Executive to reply to your questions about listing those prisons which provide educational courses leading to recognised qualifications for prisoners, the level of public expenditure devoted to education in prisons, the number of prisoners currently studying on courses leading to educational qualifications, what studies have been carried out to investigate the effect of education on recidivism rates, what plans there are to set up a Scottish Prison Education Trust and what estimate has been made of the proportion of prisoners who would be willing to undertake education if appropriate courses were available. In absence of the Chief Executive form the office, I am replying on his behalf.

All prison establishments in Scotland provide educational courses leading to recognised qualification for prisoners save, for the present, the recently formed Peterhead Unit and National Induction Centre at Shotts and Longriggend Remand Unit where the average length of stay for those on remand is relatively short.

Expenditure on education for prisoners for each of the four years to 31 March 1995 together with the budget for the current financial year is as follows:

Year	£000
1991–92	1,273
1992–93	[1]1,674
1993–94	1,545
1994–95	1,657
1995–96 Budget	1,678

[1] Payment pattern skewed by incorporation of colleges of further education on 1 April 1993.

Budget allocations for establishments for 1996–97 (including budgets for education) are still in the process of being agreed. Budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 will be set in due course.

In terms of the number of prisoners currently studying on courses leading to educational qualifications a recent snapshot showed that there are approximately 1,100 prisoners in this category.

On the topic of education and recidivism rates, no specific research studies have been undertaken to investigate the effects of education on recidivism. However, the recent computerisation of the system of prisoner records in Scotland will provide an opportunity, in future years, to examine the impact of a range of prisoner programmes, including education on recidivism.

The Scottish Prison Service has no plans to set up a Scottish Prison Education Trust.

An estimate of the proportion of prisoners willing to undertake education is not held centrally. Each establishment keeps under review the appropriate mix of regime activities, including education, in the light of the needs of prisoners.

HEALTH

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

9. Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the annual saving to the NHS arising from compulsory competitive tendering. [7500]

Mr. Horam: As a result of market testing, it is estimated that since 1983 the national health service has saved a total in excess of £1 billion. The improved value for money achieved has released additional resources for direct patient care.

Paediatric Beds

10. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the availability of paediatric beds. [7501]

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities and trusts are best placed to determine the level and range of paediatric care that is needed by their local population. The development of day care services for children has reduced the demand for beds while increasing the number treated.

General Practitioner Fundholding

11. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation has been made of the results of the general practitioner fundholding initiative. [7502]

Mr. Malone: Independent evaluation of general practitioner fundholding has supported its development and many commentators, including the National Audit Office, have called for the benefits to be extended as widely as possible.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department maintains on the use of general practice fundholders' savings (a) by general practitioner fundholding practices and (b) by regional health authorities. [9034]

Mr. Malone: The Department receives information from each family health services authority each year on total savings spent by general practitioner fundholders, excluding amounts used to supplement their fundholding budgets.

Monitoring of the detailed use of savings is a local responsibility. Information is not collected centrally.

Accident and Emergency Services (London)

12. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received about accident and emergency services in London. [7503]

Mr. Malone: Over the last three months, we have received a total of 18 letters from hon. Members and others.

National Health Service Facilities (Sales)

14. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association to discuss the purchasing by the private sector of NHS facilities. [7505]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend regularly meets representatives of the medical profession and discussions cover a wide variety of topics.

Intensive Care Paediatric Beds

15. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the present occupancy rate of intensive care paediatric beds. [7506]

Mr. Bowis: Because information on bed occupancy was not available centrally, the national health service executive arranged for Sheffield Children's hospital to co-ordinate the monitoring of occupancy and demand for beds at the 17 paediatric intensive care units in England for the period to 31 March.

Edgware General Hospital

16. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further representations on the future of Edgware general hospital he has received after the meeting on Wednesday 13 December. [7507]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend has received just over 200 representations, most of which were pre-printed postcards.

Regional Health Authorities

17. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the annual saving resulting from the abolition of regional health authorities. [7508]

Mr. Malone: By 1997–98, total annual savings from the abolition of regional health authorities are expected to be around £100 million. These substantial savings will be retained by the national health service and reinvested in patient care.

Emergency Admission Beds

18. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he collects centrally concerning the non-availability of beds for emergency admissions in the areas of each district health authority. [7509]

Mr. Horam: Health authorities and national health service trusts should work together to plan and ensure that facilities are available to meet demand. The new patients charter standard on emergency admissions is focusing attention on the importance of this area of work. The NHS executive is looking at ways of identifying best practice and ensuring that it is disseminated across the service.

Acute and Medical Emergency Beds (Birmingham)

19. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent consultations he has had with West Midlands regional health authority over the provision of acute and medical emergency beds in hospitals in the city of Birmingham. [7510]

Mr. Horam: I am kept regularly informed of emergency services provision in the west midlands and am aware that accident and emergency facilities across Birmingham continue to be made a priority.

Trust Amalgamations (Isle of Wight)

20. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce the amalgamation of the health and hospital trusts on the Isle of Wight. [7511]

Mr. Horam: We have not received a proposal from the Isle of Wight Community Healthcare NHS trust or St. Mary's Hospital NHS trust to amalgamate.

District Health Authorities (Purchasing Policy)

21. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the purchasing policies of district health authorities. [7512]

27. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring he has undertaken of the purchasing policies of district health authorities. [7518]

Mr. Malone: Local information about purchasing plans is not collected centrally.

Private Finance Initiative

22. Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private finance initiative schemes he (a) has agreed and (b) is considering. [7513]

Mr. Horam: To ensure that national health service capital projects meet NHS needs as cost-effectively as possible, the option of using private finance, under the Government's private finance initiative, must be considered for every potential capital project. Formulation of plans for projects to meet local needs is the responsibility of NHS trusts and health authorities. So far, 45 PFI schemes have been approved by the NHS executive, with a total capital value of over £160 million. Information on the number of PFI schemes being considered is not available centrally.

Hospital Porters

23. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of hospital porters. [7514]

Mr. Malone: The role of hospital porters is typically to transport patients between wards and departments and to move records, equipment and supplies from storage to where they are needed.

Intensive Care Beds

24. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the availability of staff for intensive care beds. [7515]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for local health authorities and national health service trusts, which are best placed to determine the needs of their local populations. They have been asked to examine and review local intensive care provision in the light of the report on intensive care provision in England 1993–94.

Community Care

25. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the Association of Directors of Social Services to discuss community care. [7516]

Mr. Bowis: I meet members and officers of the Association of Directors of Social Services on numerous occasions throughout the year and discuss a range of issues with them, including issues related to community care.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what current instructions he has issued to local health authorities to ensure that, prior to patients being released from health care into community care, adequate inquiries are made to ascertain if this is practicable; and if he will make a statement. [9117]

Mr. Bowis: In the case of those treated in hospital for mental disorder, our guidance emphasises that no patient should be discharged unless and until those responsible are satisfied that he or she can live safely in the community, and that adequate arrangements have been made for the patient's treatment supervision, support and care.

For patients with continuing health and social care needs, recent guidance stresses the need for clear procedures and responsibility for taking decisions about discharge and effective collaboration between key health and social service professionals.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring he has undertaken of community care provision; and if he will make a statement on its findings. [7436]

Mr. Bowis: Since April 1993, we have had a very full monitoring programme for community care in order to ensure that implementation stayed on track. In addition, the social services inspectorate carries out regular inspections, statistics are regularly collected and published and longer-term research is in hand to evaluate progress.

Our monitoring has shown that the implementation of community care has been a good story for vulnerable people, who have already benefited greatly from the new arrangements. Firm foundations have been laid and steady progress continues to be made.

Community care is, however, a long-term programme and work remains to be done before the full benefits are delivered in all areas. Our programme for development set out in the document "Building Partnerships for Success" will help encourage this further development. As the Audit Commission has pointed out, local authorities need good financial control of their social services budgets. Some could do better if greater use were made of independent sector provision.

Alcohol-related Services

26. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS will spend this year on alcohol-related services. [7517]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1148.

Care Guidelines (Elderly People)

28. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines he has issued about the provision of care to elderly people living in the community. [7519]

Mr. Bowis: Policy and practice guidance has been issued by the Department to all local authorities in relation to their community care responsibilities, in "Community Care in the Next Decade and Beyond", published in November 1990. Practice guidance on "Care Management and Assessment" was issued in 1991. In addition, the social services inspectorate has produced reports relating to care for elderly people. Guidance was issued in February 1995 on national health service responsibilities for meeting continuing health care needs.

Copies of the documents are available in the Library.

Darenth Park General Hospital

29. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in respect of the new general hospital at Darenth park for the Dartford and Gravesham NHS trust. [7520]

Mr. Horam: The trust has shortlisted four consortia which have been invited to submit their detailed proposals for the new general hospital by the end of the month.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women over the age of 65 years (a) developed breast cancer and (b) died from breast cancer in each region in each of the last four years. [8480]

Mr. Horam: The number of women aged 65 years and over who have died from breast cancer in each region in each of the last four years for which data are available is as follows:

Long-term Care

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce a ring-fenced levy in order to finance the long-term care of the elderly; if he will include the payment from this levy of the costs of residential and nursing home care; and if he will make a statement. [9120]

Mr. Bowis: We have no plans to do so.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those trusts which have made more than a 6 per cent. rate of return on their assets in each year since their inception, indicating the rate of return achieved. [8714]

Mr. Horam: The information will be placed in the Library.

Reginald Dixon

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the prosecution of Reginald Dixon for illegally performing an abortion on Barbara Whiten; and whether, following this case he has any plans to introduce new guidelines or bring forward legislation to clarify patients' rights. [8704]

Mr. Horam: We have no plans to introduce legislation in this area. A patient has the right under common law to give or withhold consent prior to examination or treatment. However, in an emergency when a patient is not in a position to express her consent or refusal, a doctor may act without consent when he or she reasonably believes that it is in the best interests of the patient to do so. Guidance on consent for examination or treatment was issued to the national health service in 1990. I understand that the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists is considering the implications of the recent case for best professional practice.

Acute and Community Mental Health Services

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were seen by (a) acute and (b) community mental health services in each health authority in each of the last three years. [8716]

Mr. Bowis: The information is not available in the form requested. Information on the number of episodes of in-patient treatment under mental health specialists is published in "Ordinary and Day Case Admissions for England". Information on the number of initial contacts with community psychiatric nurses is published in "Patient Care in the Community, Community Psychiatric Nursing, Summary information for England". Both publications give the information by individual national health service providers, that is, trusts, directly managed units and specialist health authorities with summaries for regional office areas; the data are not available for health authorities. The publications for 1994–95 and for earlier years are available in the Library.

Carers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure early help is given to the carers of the elderly and disabled in accordance with the recommendations of the British Medical

Association's report on the subject; and if he will make a statement. [9129]

Mr. Bowis: Support for carers is one of our key community care priorities. It is not practicable to prescribe centrally the form which this support should take. It is the responsibility of health and local authorities to offer a suitable range of support, such as respite and home care, based on local needs. Case by case, the services and support provided should reflect the circumstances of individual users and carers.

Our current guidance to health and local authorities makes clear the importance of involving their carers in decisions made about service users. From April 1996, under the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995, carers who provide substantial care on a regular basis will have a right to their own assessment if they want it.

This year, we have included an additional £30 million in community care funding for the provision of respite and home care. Our monitoring shows that the extra £20 million made available in 1994–95 resulted in more day and respite care being provided to the benefit of carers.

Health Authority Standards

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that all NHS health authorities follow the best practice and highest standards which any one authority attains; if he will require that they regard the standards set out in his Department's guidance HSG(95)8 in February 1995 as the minimum acceptable standards; and if he will make a statement. [9153]

Mr. Bowis: Health authorities are expected to implement fully the requirements set out in HSG(95)8. The details of our arrangements to monitor the implementation of this guidance were set out in a letter to health authorities and local authorities which was issued on 17 August 1995. Copies of the letter are available in the Library.

Mental Health

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on mental health in each health authority area in each of the last three years (a) in the acute sector and (b) in the community sector. [8715]

Mr. Bowis: The information is not available centrally.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts have (a) informed the NHS executive or (b) been investigated in respect of their long-term financial viability. [8711]

Mr. Horam: The financial viability of all trusts is investigated before their establishment. Subsequently, this process is on-going as a part of each trust's annual business planning cycle. Trust plans are reviewed by the national health service executive.

Eye Tests (Walthamstow)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in Walthamstow have had eye tests in each year since 1987. [8978]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available.

Local Authority Responsibilities

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the statutory responsibilities of local authorities to meet all needs assessed under the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990; and within what time scale services should be provided. [8722]

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities are required to assess people whom they think may require community care services, as defined under the NHS and Community Care Act 1990, and to decide on the basis of that assessment what, if any, services they should provide and how the needs of local people should be met.

A summary of local authorities' key powers and duties in community care under this Act and other legislation is set out in our document "A Framework for Local Community Care Charters in England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Local authorities are expected to publish their first local charters, based on this framework, in April 1996. These local charters will give people local information about the services and standards they can expect from their local social services departments, as well as from health and housing authorities.

Westcliffe Hospital, Stoke-on-Trent

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to approve the bid for PFI funding for the replacement long-stay beds at Westcliffe hospital, Stoke-on-Trent; and if he will make a statement. [9206]

Mr. Horam: The national health service executive expects to receive a full business case from North Staffordshire Combined Healthcare NHS trust to replace the majority of the beds early in 1997. Approval to funding a capital investment using private finance would be conditional upon such an approach increasing cost-effectiveness and reducing risks for the NHS. The balance of the service will be the responsibility of the health authority, which will be seeking to place patients with local nursing homes.

Doncaster Health Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names and qualifications of the current chairman and non-executive directors of Doncaster health authority. [9902]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 30 October 1995, Official Report, columns 40–41. Chairmen and non-executive members of health authorities are appointed for their personal qualities and skills and the contribution that they can make to the board.

Infant and Perinatal Mortality

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the change in (a) infant mortality rates and (b) perinatal mortality rates since 1979. [7498]

Mr. Horam: Infant and perinatal mortality rates have fallen, between 1979 and 1994, to the lowest levels ever recorded. Deaths in children under one year of age—the infant mortality rate—have fallen by half. Stillbirths and deaths of babies less than a week old—the perinatal rate—have fallen by nearly 40 per cent.

Drug Misuse Database

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who owns the data codes and structure of the drug misuse database. [9412]

Mr. Bowis: The ownership of such data codes and the structure of the drug misuse database is shared between the Department of Health and the university of Manchester.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9597]

Mr. Horam: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Straw: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases were discontinued by the Crown Prosecution Service; what was the total number of cases (a) received by magistrates courts and (b) finalised in magistrates courts; and how many cases were (i) received by the Crown Prosecution Service from the police, (ii) completed in the magistrates court, (iii) discontinued by the Crown Prosecution Service before or at the magistrates court hearing, (iv) committed to the Crown court by the magistrates court or (v) otherwise disposed of in each Crown Prosecution Service region in total in the first nine months of 1995–96. [8478]

The Attorney-General: The table shows the number of defendants whose case was dealt with by the 13 areas of the Crown Prosecution Service during the period of April to September 1995. The figures are not yet available for the quarter ending December 1995. The figures do not include the specialised casework undertaken by the headquarters of the service.

Other disposals comprise committal hearings in which the defendant was discharged, cases where the defendant was bound over to keep the peace, instances where the defendant could not be found, and other cases where the prosecution could not proceed (e.g. through the death of the defendant).

Other proceedings comprise non-criminal proceedings, such as forfeiture hearings under Section 3 of the Obscene Publications Act.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Attorney-General when the internal review of the functions of the Crown Prosecution Service was established; what is its terms of reference; by whom it is being conducted; and when its conclusions will be reported to Parliament. [8460]

The Attorney-General: A number of important reviews of the work of the CPS were concluded last year. These included: a report on the merits and feasibility of merger between the CPS fraud divisions and the Serious Fraud Office; a prior options study in the context of the Government's initiative on next steps; and a senior management review. I reported to Parliament the outcome of the merger study and of the prior options study on 31 March 1995, Official Report, columns 1309–17, and 27 October 1995, Official Report, columns 820–21, respectively. On the Senior management review, the CPS, in common with most other Departments, has carried out a senior management review following the White Papers on the civil service, continuity and change. The report of the senior management review was produced in August 1995 and has been made available to staff and others outside the CPS. Separately, as I announced on 4 December, Official Report, column 17, work continues on a range of measures to improve further the working relationships between the CPS and the police.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement. [9144]

The Attorney-General: The one agency for which I am responsible is the Government Property Lawyers. The GPL currently uses the pre-retirement courses provided by the Home Office, but keeps under review the possibility of using courses offered by other bodies.

Marchioness Accident

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration the Crown Prosecution Service has given to initiating a prosecution in respect of the Marchioness accident since the inquest jury reached its verdict; and if he will make a statement. [9032]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has received in November and December 1995 from the coroner transcripts of the evidence given at the inquest. These are being studied. Once they have been considered, together with the pre-inquest evidence and the results of any additional inquiries which may be necessary, a decision will be made as to whether further criminal proceedings should be instituted.

WALES

Cancer Registration

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current estimate of the date of completion of the review of cancer registration and the management and organisation of the Wales Cancer Registry; and if he will make a statement. [8467]

Mr. Hague: Proposals for the future management of the registry submitted by the Velindre NHS trust and the Welsh combined centres for public health are currently under consideration. I expect the management of the registry to transfer early in the next financial year.

Electronic Mail

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has for the introduction of electronic mail for departmental press releases and for their transmission to the Library. [8465]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Tuesday 9 January 1996, Official Report, columns 109–10.

Water and Sewage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the National Rivers Authority Wales area and the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation in relation to the corporation's proposals for water uses in the impounded lake behind the Cardiff bay barrage and proposed reductions in sewage pumping stations and interceptor sewers at Leckwith moors, Brindley road, Ferry road and Park street; [8462]

(2) what consultations he has had with the chairman of Cardiff Bay development corporation and of the National Rivers Authority Wales on the water use strategy for the impounded lake behind the Cardiff bay barrage, in relation to the types of immersion sports, water contact water sports and non-contact water sports that will be permitted; and if he will make a statement. [8461]

Mr. Hague: None. This is an operational matter for the Cardiff Bay development corporation.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in relation to the membership of community health councils; if he will place a copy of all such representations in the Library; and if he will list the organisations or individuals who have made representations in favour of his proposed changes. [8466]

Mr. Hague: More than 150 responses to the consultation have been received, covering a wide spectrum of views. I will consider very carefully all comments before announcing what the next steps should be. At that stage, I will arrange for all the responses, apart from those where respondents have indicated that they would prefer their views not to be separately identified, to be placed in the Library of the House.

Literacy and Numeracy Centres

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for literacy and numeracy centres in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9069]

Mr. Richards: Plans for raising standards of literacy and numeracy in schools in Wales are set out in the published "Bright Future" programme. Every primary school is to set targets for improvements. Some £3 million is to be devoted to schemes in support during 1996–97.

Disadvantaged Pupils

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to give extra support in the schooling of children from disadvantaged homes; and if he will make a statement. [9065]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend announced his provisional local government revenue proposals for 1996–97 in the House on 28 November, Official Report, column 600. It is for individual local authorities to determine how the resources that are made available are allocated between services, including education, in the light of their statutory responsibilities and their perception of local needs and priorities.

Government Expenditure Report

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will seek payment from the central office of the Conservative party to recompense the Welsh Office for the time taken by civil servants on undertaking the recent report on the purported income and expenditure of all Government Departments in Wales, and in printing and publishing the report. [8636]

Mr. Hague: No. The report presents an objective assessment of Government expenditure on behalf of the population of Wales and revenue raised in Wales. The methodology used is clearly explained and open to scrutiny. I am satisfied that the report adds to public understanding of fiscal issues relating to Wales and that its preparation and publication at public expense is fully justified.

Education Standards

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if the percentage of lessons consistently identified as poor by Ofsted included assessments of lessons given in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9071]

Mr. Richards: No.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of failing schools in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9070]

Mr. Richards: No such estimates are made. Whether a school is in need of special measures will depend on the findings of a full office of Her Majesty's chief inspector.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what cash he has earmarked to identify and improve failing schools; and if he will make a statement. [9072]

Mr. Richards: The costs of identifying failing schools are borne from within the overall budget for the office of Her Majesty's chief inspector. Those for improving failing schools will vary: they are not limited to a specifically earmarked sum.

Valleys Park

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to promote the establishment of a valleys park; and if he will make a statement. [8971]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Under the programme for the valleys, my right hon. Friend is keen to encourage projects which will help to improve the quality of the environment of the south Wales valleys. I understand an application has been submitted to the Millennium Commission for the development of a valleys park.

Electricity and Water Industries

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implications for employment of the proposed takeover of Swalec by Welsh Water. [8637]

Mr. Hague: This is a matter for the companies concerned.

Homework Centres

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homework centres he has established in each of the local education authorities of Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9064]

Mr. Richards: Establishment of such centres is a matter for individual schools. The "Bright Future" programme provides that each school in Wales should consider offering facilities for study after hours.

Adult Education

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning adult education. [9199]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to "People and Prosperity: An Agenda for Action in Wales". It is our policy in Wales to extend educational opportunity and choice, and improve standards, in all phases of education. This includes making good quality education accessible to adults to help them improve their qualifications and update their skills, and promoting a culture of lifelong learning.

Arts Centre

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he proposes to take to ensure that the establishment of a national concert hall, opera house and centre for the performing arts is established in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9313]

Mr. Hague: I am sympathetic to the development of a national opera house in Wales, but decisions on the provision of arts facilities are a matter for the funding bodies concerned.

Millennium Fund

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what involvement his Department has in the process of deciding on millennium fund projects in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9338]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh Office does not participate in decision making on millennium fund applications. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) on 23 October 1995, Official Report, column 474.

InterCity

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will arrange as a matter of urgency to meet executives of InterCity rail services to discuss the robustness of the advertised InterCity through service from Holyhead to Euston. [9314]

Mr. Hague: The advertisement and provision of rail services are operational matters for the operator.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh language schemes have so far been agreed between the Welsh Language Board and public bodies in Wales covered by the provisions of the Welsh Language Act 1993. [9312]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1160, and to the letter sent to him by the chief executive of the Welsh Language Board on the same day.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will reconcile the apparent discrepancy for the expenditure on education in Wales, as shown in tables 3 and 4, for 1993–94, of his departmental report, "Government Expenditure and Revenue, Wales 1993–94", published on 8 January. [9514]

Mr. Richards: There is no discrepancy. The figures in table 3 relate to expenditure per head, as stated in the title. They show that expenditure per head on education was about the same in England as in Wales. The figures in table 4 relate to total expenditure. They show that expenditure on education in Wales was a smaller proportion of identifiable general Government expenditure than in England.

Disabled People (Sport)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in relation to the development of sports for disabled people. [9289]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Policy for the development of sports for disabled people is a matter for the Sports Council for Wales. In its strategy document "Changing Times, Changing Needs", the council reaffirmed its commitment to have particular regard to the needs of disabled people within its programmes. The council published the report "Willing and Able: The Provision of Sports Opportunity for Children with Disabilities" in March 1995 and is currently consulting on action programmes for the future.

Education Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of funding for the new unitary authority local education authorities in Wales to carry out their responsibilities from 1 April; and if he will make a statement. [9396]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend announced his provisional local government revenue settlement proposals for 1996–97 on 28 November, Official Report, column 600. It is for individual local authorities to determine how the resources are allocated between functions, including education, in the light of their statutory responsibilities and their perception of local needs and priorities.

National Museum and Gallery of Wales

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the attendance figures for 1995 reported by the national museum and gallery of Wales, including its outstations, with the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1994. [9013]

Mr. Richards: A total of 780,344 people visited the national museums and galleries of Wales during 1995, a decrease of 10.6 per cent. compared with the 872,936 total in 1994.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much funding was committed by the Welsh Development Agency to each of the objective 5(b) projects in 1995 listed in his letter of 8 January 1996, ref. CT/95–16178, in answer to the hon. Member for Pembroke; and how much has been allocated to each project to date. [9615]

Mr. Hague: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9590]

Mr. Hague: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cardiff Bay Opera House Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation concerning the future public funding of the Cardiff Bay opera house trust; when the present public funding of the trust expires; and if he will make a statement. [9721]

Mr. Hague: None. This is an operational matter for the corporation.

Staffing

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest number of staff employed for each civil service grade by his office, indicating the percentage who are Welsh speaking where this is known. [2067]

Mr. Hague [pursuant to his reply, 4 December 1995, c. 76–77]: I regret that there was an error in my answer. The figure should accordingly read:

Grade	Number of people	Percentage who have notified they have some ability in the use of Welsh

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the total amounts paid to recipients of housing benefit in (1) Scarborough and Whitby, (2) Torquay, (3) Weston-super-Mare, (4) Bournemouth, (5) Brighton, (6) Eastbourne, (7) Newquay, (8) Ramsgate, (9) Margate, (10) Southend-on-Sea, (11) Clacton, (12) Great Yarmouth, (13) Barmouth, (14) Pwllheli, (15) Llandudno, (16) Rhyl, (17) Prestatyn, (18) Southport, (19) Lytham St. Annes, (20) Fleetwood, (21) Morecombe, (22) Skegness, (23) Cleethorpes, (24) Minehead, (25) Worthing, (26) Bridlington, (27) Bognor Regis, (28) Torbay, (29) Polperro, (30) Brixham, (31) Falmouth, (32) St. Ives, (33) Ilfracombe, (34) Burnham on Sea, (35) Weymouth and (36) Herne Bay, in (a) 1991–92 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [3192]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Expenditure figures are those for the local authority districts covering the towns in question. Where a local authority has the same name as a town, for example Brighton, it is possible that they do not cover the same geographic area.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the numbers of people aged under 25 years who will be affected by the changes announced in housing benefit for young people in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [8508]

Mr. Evans: The proposed changes are to come into effect on 7 October 1996. All new claims after that date, movers, and claims made from 2 January 1996 at the first review will be affected.

Some 180,000 single people aged under 25 years live in the private rented sector and receive housing benefit. We estimate that some 130,000 in 1996–97 and 150,000 in 1997–98 will be affected.

Ministerial Travel and Accommodation Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of ministers. [6408]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table:

Financial year	[1]Overseas travel and accommodation £	Car and chauffeuring costs £	[2]Domestic travel and accommodation £
1991–92	n/a	[1]286,391.00	n/a

1994–95	27,570.38	[2]325,815.00	17,228.00
1995–30/11	4,222.35	[2]203,088.00	12,225.00

[1] Includes expenditure incurred by Ministers and officials acting in direct support of Ministers.
[2] Includes expenditure by Minsters only.
n/a = not available.
Expenditure on Ministerial security costs is included in the running costs expenditure of the Departme.t which is published in the Annual Report.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6407]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Financial year	Total staff cost £	Hospitality £
1990–91	n/a	7,111.00
1991–92	n/a	8,230.00
1992–93	n/a	6,846.00
1993–94	n/a	5,667.00

1995–30/November	1,026,079.00	7,893.00

1. Expenditure on hospitality includes the annual reception for disabled people and organisations representing them held by the Minister of State for Social Security and Disabled People.
2. Expenditure on hospitality includes entertainment, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks.
3. Expenditure on telephone bills, press and communications, stationery and office refurbishment is included in the running cost expenditure of the Department which is published in the Annual Report.
4. The information is for all Ministerial offices.
n/a = not available.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance issued by the Benefits Agency medical services to assist its medical practitioners when considering incapacity benefit applications. [7749]

Mr. Burt: A copy of the medical advisers' guide to incapacity benefit is available in the Library.

Mr. Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people to date have undergone a medical examination by a medical assistant of the Benefits Agency in relation to claims for the consideration of incapacity benefit; and how many of those applicants have had their benefit stopped as a result. [7750]

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

	Number
Total examinations	[1]222,003
Total all work test cases disallowed following examination	[2]39,626

[1] Includes all work test examinations for Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance and credits only cases.
[2] As there is often a delay between the examination and the adjudication officer's decision this figure does not accurately reflect the proportion of examinations which resulted in disallowance.
1. All information is from 13 April 1995 to 30 November 1995 and is subject to change.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated number of hours per month that Benefits Agency doctors will spend dealing with incapacity benefit claims in 1996–97. [8016]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 13 December, Official Report, column 670, regarding claims for incapacity benefit, if he will express the numbers of incapacity benefit claimants in the various categories as a proportion of the total. [7812]

Mr. Burt: The information requested is in the table.

	Per cent.
Disallowed for failure to return questionnaire (IB50) without good cause as proportion of total questionnaires issued	0.5
Disallowed for failure to attend medical examination without good cause as a proportion of total examinations performed	0.4
Found capable of work following all work test as a proportion of all work test examinations	[1]17
Appeals lodged with ITS as proportion of those failing all work test	31
Successful appeals as proportion of those heard	43
Appeals superseded by adjudication officer as proportion of those lodged	3.8

[1] As there is often a delay between the examination and the adjudication officer's decision this figure does not accurately represent the proportion of examinations which resulted in disallowance.
1. Figures include only incapacity benefit claimants and are subject to change.
2. All figures to end of October 1995.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the benefit savings resulting from activities in respect of liable relatives in each year since 1989; and how much of this was attributable to maintenance paid. [8142]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is in the list:

1989–90: £207 million

1990–91: £232 million

1991–92: £283.9 million

1992–93: £313 million.

In 1992–93 liable relative action fell under the umbrella of the child support unit.

These figures include savings made where the level of maintenance reduced the amount of income support in payment; where maintenance removed the need for income support; and those cases where the claim for income support was withdrawn following liable relative action. It is not possible to break the figures down into these different categories.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security to what extent the benefit savings claimed by the Child Support Agency are calculated in a manner which gives a like-for-like comparison with (a) the liable relatives unit and (b) the court system which preceded it. [8120]

Mr. Mitchell: Because of the differing nature of the work, there is no direct like-for-like comparison.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans he has to audit the benefit savings figures produced by the Child Support Agency; [8126]

(2) what assessment he has made of accounting methods used by the Child Support Agency to calculate benefit savings. [8122]

Mr. Mitchell: Audits were carried out by Price Waterhouse in 1993–94 and 1994–95. The auditors found that the procedure for reporting and measuring benefit savings was more likely to understate than overstate benefit savings.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the benefit savings claimed by the Child Support Agency are calculated on the same basis as the benefit savings estimates in the financial memorandum of the Child Support Act 1991. [8127]

Mr. Mitchell: No. While the Child Support Agency's benefit savings figures include the effect on benefit expenditure of maintenance paid calculated on the same basis as the estimates for the financial memorandum, the latter figure also included an estimate of the longer-term effect on expenditure of a reduction in the number of lone parents on benefit resulting from enhanced work incentives and other factors. The benefit savings figures, on the other hand, include estimates of the effect on expenditure of claims to benefit ceasing as a result of agency action but take no account of the longer-term incentive effect of the work of the Child Support Agency.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his estimate of expenditure savings following the Child Support Act 1991 included a calculation of the effects of the withdrawal of benefit claims by recipients of income support. [8141]

Mr. Mitchell: Yes.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what procedures are followed by the Child Support Agency when contacting absent parents in cases where paternity has not yet been established; and in how many cases Child Support Agency procedures have been breached in this matter. [5767]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Peter Thurnham, dated 11 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the procedures followed by the Child Support Agency when tracing and identifying absent parents in cases where paternity has not been established.

Information about absent parents is provided to the Agency in the first instance by the parent with care (PWC). Where paternity is not yet established the Agency follows set procedures in contacting the alleged absent parent (AAP), and these vary depending on whether the AAP knows that the PWC considers him to be the parent of the child or children in question. Where the PWC has provided a current and confident address for the AAP, and the AAP knows that the PWC considers him to be the parent, the Agency issues a maintenance enquiry form by post to the AAP.

Where the PWC has provided a current and confident address for the AAP, but the AAP does not know that he is considered to be the parent, the Agency writes to him inviting him to call at the office to discuss "a social security matter". The letter does not give any indication of the Agency's interest.

If the information provided by the PWC on the identity or address of the AAP is not complete or confident, the Agency takes action to trace the right person. Child support legislation provides that this may include an approach being made to an employer to enable an AAP to be traced. The objective is to arrange for a private interview in the same way as described above, to resolve the paternity issue. Sometimes several men have to be interviewed to eliminate those whose personal details indicate they may be the AAP, before the correct man is identified.

The method of contacting an employer may be by telephone or letter. When correspondence is sent to an employer it is marked "Private and Confidential—The Personnel Manager". It gives no details for the reason for our request, but quotes the legislation which is being invoked—in this case Child Support legislation—because the employer will have already refused to give the information over the phone in response to a generalised "DSS" request. There are a number of reasons why we could be approaching an employer in this way, including the need to contact a parent who is due money as well as a parent who may be liable to pay it. We never divulge the precise reason to the employer either in our phone contacts or in our letters.

No correspondence should be issued to an AAP until the Agency is sure that the person traced could very well be the AAP described by the PWC. As explained above, the type of correspondence then issued depends upon whether or not the AAP knows that the PWC regards him as the parent. This is not a new way of working, the Benefits Agency and the DSS before it took similar action when it had responsibility for liable relative work.

The Agency does not collate information on the number of cases where procedures have been breached. The Agency will, of course, investigate fully any complaint that the correct procedures have not been followed, but such instances are very unusual. For example, available data shows that out of 852,763 maintenance enquiry forms issued from April 1993 (the inception of the Agency), to October 1995, 222 of them (0.026 per cent) were issued to someone who in fact had no child maintenance liability in the case concerned. Of this relatively small number, by no means all were because the CSA acted incorrectly (PWCs sometimes give wrong information), but wherever our strict procedures are breached, disciplinary action is taken against the member(s) of staff who are culpable.

You may wish to note that the Agency has traced and/or identified the whereabouts of over 100,000 absent parents since it was created in April 1993.

I hope this is helpful.

Social Security Spending

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the change in social security spending in real terms in each year since 1978–79, including estimates for each of the next three years, giving figures on the same basis as the answer of 7 June 1993, Official Report, column 144. [8501]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Social Security[1] spending from 1978–79 to 1998–99

Expenditure in £ million

Years	Cash	1995–96 prices	Percentage change in real terms over previous year

1998–99	96,264	89,391	1.09

[1] Excludes non DSS expenditure on housing and council tax/community charge benefits.

1. 1994–95 figures are estimated outturn.
2. Figures from 1995–96 to 1998–99 are planned expenditure.
3. The real terms decrease over the period 1987–88 to 1990–91 is largely attributable to the fall in unemployment since 1986.
4. The figures from 1978–79 to 1989–90 are from the 1994 DR and earlier equivalents.
5. Figures from 1990–91 to 1998–99 are from the 1996–97 FSBR.

Child Care Disregard

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the average number of families who will benefit in 1996–97 from the increase in the child care disregard. [8500]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: We estimate that on average between 5,000 and 10,000 families will benefit from the increase in the child care disregard during 1996–97.

Earnings Disregards

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the freeze in earnings disregards for housing benefit, council tax benefit, invalid care allowance, unemployment benefit (daily rate) and income support claims; how many claimants (i) of each benefit and (ii) in total will be affected by the freeze; what evidence he has of the effect on work incentives of such a freeze; and if he will make a statement. [8514]

Mr. Roger Evans: None. The level of earnings disregards and thresholds are kept under review but it has never been the practice to uprate them on an annual basis.

One-Parent and Child Benefits

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he proposes to introduce regulations to integrate one-parent benefit; and child benefit; and if he will make a statement. [8510]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: We aim to commence the statutory consultation procedures under sections 170 to 176 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992 in February. Regulations will be laid before Parliament as soon as possible after the consultation process is completed.

Benefits Freeze

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the freeze in social fund (i) maternity payments, (ii) cold weather payments and (iii) capital; how many claimants (1) of each benefit and (2) in total he estimates will be affected by the freeze; and if he will make a statement. [8512]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested.

If social fund maternity payments had been uprated in line with Rossi since 1990, when they were last increased, the value of estimated additional expenditure—over current forecasts—would be £7 million in 1996–97 and £8 million in 1997–98. Approximately 230,000 claimants would be affected.

Notes:

1. The information in respect of Cold Weather Payments is not available as expenditure depends on weather conditions over the next two years.

2. The information requested for capital is also unavailable.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the freeze in disregards for war pensions, student loans and covenants, expenses from sub-tenants and income from boarders under disability working allowance, family credit, housing benefit, council tax benefit, invalid care allowance, unemployment benefit (daily rate) and income support claims; how many claimants (i) of each benefit and (ii) in total will be affected by the freeze; and if he will make a statement. [8513]

Mr. Evans: None. The income disregards are kept under review, and increased only when it is prudent to do so. None of the incomes listed is taken into account in the calculation of either invalid care allowance or unemployment benefit.

Family Credit

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of family credit claimants receive the £10 increase for full-time work. [8516]

Mr. Roger Evans: As at 31 August 1995, 87,000 new and renewal family credit awards included the new £10 premium. Awards already in payment when the premium came into effect on 17 July 1995 will become eligible on renewal of the 26 week award. Most existing family credit recipients working 30 hours or more should therefore by now be receiving the increase. In the longer term, we estimate that 345,000 families will benefit.

Source: Family credit 5 per cent. sample of awards.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the effect of revenues in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 of the freeze in the maintenance disregard for family credit claims; how many claimants will be affected by the freeze; and if he will make a statement. [8515]

Mr. Evans: No estimate is made of savings to public funds when a disregard on income is not increased. The income disregards are kept under review and are increased only when it is prudent to do so.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families are currently in receipt of family credit and what has been the cost of this benefit in each year since 1989–90. [9264]

Mr. Evans: The latest available information is that 605,800 families were receiving family credit on 30 April 1995. The cost of family credit in each year from 1989–90 is set out in the table:

Year	Family credit outturn £ million
1989–90	425
1990–91	494
1991–92	626
1992–93	929
1993–94	1,208
1994–95	1,441

Housing and Council Tax Benefits

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the proposal to extend help with housing benefit and council tax benefit during the first four weeks of work for unemployed people returning to work. [8505]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated additional cost of paying of housing benefit and council tax benefit for the first four weeks for unemployed people, lone parents, carers and those attending Government training schemes who return to work is £50 million for each of the years 1996–97 and 1997–98. The overall final cost will depend on the number of people whom this work incentive measure helps back into work. We shall be monitoring and evaluating this carefully.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement. [9139]

Mr. Burt: The Department and its agencies—except the Resettlement Agency, which will cease to operate on 1 April 1996—are committed to offering pre-retirement courses to all eligible staff. There are no plans to change this arrangement.

Habitual Residence Rules

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what savings have resulted from the application of the habitual residence rules. [9347]

Mr. Roger Evans: The savings from the application of the habitual residence test for the period August 1994 to November 1995 are estimated at £37 million.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many asylum seekers living in the parliamentary constituency of Tottenham have children living with them; and how many (a) have claimed and (b) receive child benefit. [9814]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Andrew Smith: to ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 90, if the administrative costs of implementing the jobseeker's allowance are additional to those referred to in paragraph 6.19 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96"; and for what reasons these additional costs have arisen. [9810]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administrative costs of implementing the jobseeker's allowance are additional to those referred to in paragraph 6.19 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96". Provision for last year was made on account, pending identification of the full costs of implementation.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 90, what he expects the £200 million DSS administrative costs which have been reclassified as running costs from other current expenditure in 1996–97 will be spent on; and for what reasons it has proved necessary to reclassify this. [9809]

Mr. Burt: The reclassification of £200 million DSS administrative costs from other current expenditure to running costs represents a reversal of an earlier, incorrect reclassification. This arose from uncertainties about the vote impact of outsourcing proposals in respect of the Information Technology Services Agency. It returns DSS running costs provision to the level agreed in the public expenditure survey. Details of how this provision will be applied will be provided in the forthcoming social security departmental report "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1996–97 to 1998–99".

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Secretary of State under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9593]

Mr. Burt: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Funeral Payments

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many funeral payments from the social fund for payment towards funeral directors' fees equivalent to the maximum contribution allowable have been paid in each of the last five years, in Scotland. [8587]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alex Salmond, dated 15 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many Funeral Payments from the Social Fund for payment towards funeral director's fees equivalent to the maximum contribution allowable have been paid in each of the last five years, in Scotland.

£500 is the maximum contribution that can be included in a Funeral Payment towards funeral director's fees. This limit was introduced on 5 June 1995 along with other changes to the Funeral Payment scheme. Prior to this date, payments were made at the discretion of the Adjudication Officer and no distinction was made between that part of a Funeral Payment which related to funeral director's fees and other costs.

The available information is in the enclosed Table A which shows the number of Funeral Payments paid in Scotland, in each month since 5 June 1995, where the amount paid towards the funeral director's fees has been restricted to £500.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

The number of Funeral Payments made in Scotland since June 1995 where that part of the award relating to funeral director's fees has been restricted to £500.

War Pensions Agency

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if staff working for the War Pensions Agency receive commission in respect of the number of claims which are met; and if he will make a statement. [9521]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: This is a matter for Mr. Kevin Caldwell, the chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 15 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about commission to War Pensions Agency (WPA) staff.

WPA staff do not receive commission in respect of the number of claims which are met.

All staff in WPA, as in other agencies, receive pay awards related to performance. Performance markings are based on achievement of ranges of personal objectives derived from the Agency's high level targets, as published in the business plan.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 152, which offices of the Benefits Agency, other than the Sheffield office, have issued letters to claimants regarding the proposed changes in entitlement under the urgent cases regulations; what action was taken regarding those letters; and if he will place copies of them in the Library. [6434]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 15 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question, pursuant to his Answer of 5th December, Official Report, column 152, which offices of the Benefits Agency, other than the Sheffield office, have issued letters to claimants regarding the proposed changes in entitlement under the urgent cases regulations; what action was taken regarding those letters; and if he will place copies of them in the Library.

Benefits Agency offices are organised on a District basis and each District can include up to six offices. Annex A, provides a list of those Districts which incorrectly issued letters to customers following the announcement of the proposed changes.

Some Districts issued clerical notifications, examples of which are at Annex B and will be placed in the Library.

Other Districts issued disallowance notices via the Income Support Computer System (ISCS). Unfortunately, it is not practicable to provide copies of these as they are made-up from a library of more than 1000 standard paragraphs and differ depending on a customer's individual circumstances.

Instructions were issued to all District offices on 1 December 1995 advising that decisions should be rescinded and letters of apology sent to all the customers involved.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Care (Heringey)

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many unaccompanied children are being cared for by the London borough of Haringey under the Children Act 1989. [9815]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

The latest validated information available centrally on the London borough of Haringey is for 31 March 1993, when there were no children being looked after because they had no available parents or other persons with parental responsibility.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Crown Court Statistics

Mr. Straw: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the number of cases coming to trial in the Crown court, acquittals and convictions in 1994, and in that part of 1995 for which figures are now available. [8479]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Jack Straw dated 17 January 1996:

CROWN COURT TRIAL, ACQUITTAL AND CONVICTION FIGURES FOR 1994 AND 1995

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of cases coming to trial in the Crown Court in 1994 and 1995 and the number of acquittals and convictions in these years.

The figures requested are as follows:

	1994	1995 (January–November)
Cases committed to the Crown Court	89,301	75,790
Defendants pleading guilty	59,827	58,650
Defendants pleading not guilty:
convicted on one or more counts	15,206	14,879
acquitted on all counts	15,772	15,299

The total number of defendants does not equate directly to the number of cases committed to the Crown Court as a proportion of cases will have more than one defendant and as some cases are discontinued by the prosecution before trial.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Upper Waiting Hall Exhibition

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to NatWest's "Face 2 Face with Finance" scheme to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall from 19 February to 23 February. [8090]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 19 February to Friday 23 February 1996.

DEFENCE

Gulf War (Low Flying)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the comments by Sir Peter de la Billiere on the suspension of low flying in the Gulf war for the future operational needs of low flying; what are the consequences for low flying training; and if he will make a statement. [9483]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 15 January 1996, Official Report, columns 423-24.

Torture

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to investigate allegations of torture regarding soldiers of the Royal Welch Fusiliers serving in Bosnia. [9395]

Mr. Soames: I refer the Hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Newport, West on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 425-26.

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if soldiers from the Royal Welch Fusiliers will give oral evidence to the war crimes tribunal at The Hague regarding allegations of torture in Bosnia. [9394]

Mr. Soames: As part of its investigation into the detention of UN personnel by Bosnian Serb forces, the UN war crimes tribunal proposes to interview a representative group of soldiers from 1st Battalion, Royal Welch Fusiliers who were among those taken hostage in May 1995.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (d) non-departmental bodies and (d) outside bodies and arms-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9224]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 15 January by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People, Official Report, columns 417-18. I will ensure that my Department and any bodies for which it is responsible will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Cyprus (Forces' Behaviour)

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures have been taken by the British military authorities in Cyprus to control the behaviour of British military personnel towards the local population when off duty. [9392]

Mr. Soames: British Forces Cyprus attaches great importance to the maintenance of the very good existing relations with the local population. With this in mind, all service personnel and their dependents are briefed on the expected standards of conduct on arrival in Cyprus. The message is reiterated in routine and other orders and the Commander, British Forces Cyprus, regularly reminds his subordinate commanders that they have a responsibility to ensure that service personnel behave in an exemplary manner both on and off duty.

This is reinforced by a number of selective restrictions which exclude service men from potential trouble spots. The tourist strips in Limassol and Larnaca are subject to a 1 am curfew for service personnel, and individual premises elsewhere may be placed out of bounds. In addition, the Ayia Napa area remains out of bounds in the wake of the death of Louise Jensen in September 1994. The penalties for the infringement of these rules range from a fine to the sending home of the individual concerned to the UK.

Many disturbances in Cyprus involving groups of local youths are unconnected with the British military presence, with service personnel occasionally suffering unprovoked attacks. The restrictions applied are, therefore, as much to protect UK military personnel as for other reasons. Analysis shows that British Forces Cyprus has a good record for discipline, with a relatively small number of serious disciplinary incidents.

Landmines (International Ban)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made in the international discussions aimed at outlawing the use of landmines. [9385]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The first resumed session of the UN weaponry convention review conference is taking place this week in Geneva. The purpose of this conference is to strengthen protocol II to the convention, which governs the use of mines in armed conflict. We are working hard to achieve international agreement on effective measures to reduce the dangers to civilian from the indiscriminate use of anti-personnel mines.

Devonport Dockyard

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has received on the stability of the geological base on which Devonport dockyard is built; and if he will make a statement. [9381]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Site investigations, including borehole surveys, and desk studies have been carried out to verify that the nature of the underlying geology is suitable to support the development of nuclear submarine refitting facilities at Devonport royal dockyard. The surveys confirmed that the rock underlying the site will form a suitable foundation for the proposed nuclear installations. No significant geological problems have been encountered on site to date.

Trident Refitting

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the public expenditure implications of the Trident missile submarine refit at Devonport beyond those specified in the successful tender documents submitted by Devonport Management Ltd. [9380]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Negotiations on the design and build of facilities for refitting Vanguard class submarines at Devonport are proceeding and it would not be appropriate to speculate about details, including cost, while negotiations are under way.

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he intends to take to ensure the highest safety standards are enforced in the future refitting of Trident submarines. [9358]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Refitting facilities for nuclear powered submarines are being designed and will be constructed to meet all necessary safety standards and are being monitored and regulated by both civilian and MOD authorities. The future operators of the nuclear powered submarine refitting facility will be required to demonstrate to these authorities the appropriate levels of safety standards in order to obtain a nuclear site licence and the necessary consent to operate the facility.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the negotiations with Devonport Management Ltd. over Trident refitting. [9357]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Negotiations on the design and build of the facilities for refitting Vanguard class and ultimately all nuclear powered submarines at Devonport are proceeding with the consortium forming Devonport Management Ltd. A decision on contract award is expected in the first part of this year.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions there have been formal and informal contacts with Rosyth royal dockyard on the Trident refit programme since July 1993; and who initiated each contact. [9355]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Between July and September 1993, my Department corresponded regularly with the Rosyth royal dockyard management company about the decision to construct nuclear submarine refitting facilities at Devonport. Since then, there have been no formal discussions or negotiations with the company about the location at which Vanguard class submarines will be refitted. During the last year, the company wrote on two occasions indicating that Rosyth would be capable of accommodating Vanguard class refits should the Government wish to reconsider their decision. I wrote to the company in August to the effect that the Government have no such plans. No record is held of the number of informal contacts that Ministers or officials have had with representatives of the Rosyth royal dockyard management company since July 1993 nor of the topics of discussion.

MOD Police

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Royal Ordnance paid his Department for the services of the Ministry of Defence police in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [9376]

Mr. Soames: It is not the Department's practice to disclose commercially sensitive information.

Army Ambulances

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army ambulances were (a) used and (b) damaged or lost in (i) the Gulf conflict and (ii) in deployment with the United Nations in the former Yugoslavia. [9456]

Mr. Soames: Information regarding the number of Army ambulances used, damaged or lost during the Gulf conflict is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The number of Army ambulances deployed to the former Yugoslavia in support of the United Nations fluctuated throughout the period, but the average number in theatre at any one time was 17 wheeled ambulances and 13 tracked ambulances. No ambulances were lost during the deployment. Information on the number damaged is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Air Misses

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 96, when he expects the study on the probability of a random mid-air collision to be completed. [9778]

Mr. Soames: The study should be completed by the end of this year.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the causes of the mid-air collision on 10 January involving two Tornado F3 fighters. [9693]

Mr. Soames: An RAF board of inquiry is investigating the cause of this accident. A copy of the summary of its findings will be placed in the Library of the House in due course.

Royal Marines School of Music

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) costs additional to those forecast and (b) delays in preparing the naval detention quarters are being incurred in connection with the closure of the Royal Marines school of music at Deal and the proposed move to Portsmouth; and if he will make a statement. [9681]

Mr. Soames: The contract now let for the conversion of the former RN detention quarters is at a cost of £505,000 compared with our original estimate of £450,000 contained in the consultative document. The conversion work is planned to be completed by mid-April, when the RMSM personnel return from their normal Easter leave.

Equerries

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many equerries are provided by his Department; and to whom they are allocated. [8682]

Mr. Soames: Five equerries are provided by my Department to the royal households. They are allocated as follows:

HM The Queen

HM The Queen Mother

HRH The Duke of Edinburgh

HRH The Prince of Wales

HRH The Duke of York.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many days the royal yacht was used on official business in 1994–95. [8684]

Mr. Soames: In 1994, HMY Britannia was at sea for 164 days, of which 31 entailed royal duties, and 13 were devoted to trade promotion. In 1995, she was at sea for 156 days, of which 35 entailed royal duties, and 11 were devoted to trade promotion.

Brown and Root

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps he is taking and has taken to investigate Brown and Root's ability to oversee the refitting of Trident submarines; and when he will make a decision; [9356]

(2) if he will make a statement on the suitability of Brown and Root for Trident refitting work; [9353]

(3) what assessment he made of the records of the parent company in the United States in respect of contracts when considering the suitability of Brown and Root for Trident refitting work. [9354]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Brown and Root Ltd. is a UK-based company and is a member of the consortium forming Devonport Management Ltd., with which my Department is involved in contractual negotiations for the design and build of nuclear refitting facilities at Devonport. A decision on contract award is expected in the first part of this year. Steps have been, and will be, taken to ensure that any company ultimately contracted to undertake the work is both able and suitable to do so, including the provision of appropriate guarantees and assurances from parent companies where necessary.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the powers and authority of the Home Office controllers at Doncaster prison; what are their salaries; and if he will make a statement. [8056]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the powers and authority of the Home Office Controllers at Doncaster.

The Criminal Justice Act of 1991 requires that "every contracted-out prison shall have a Controller who shall be a Crown Servant appointed by the Secretary of State". This function is currently carried out at Doncaster prison by a senior governor grade and his deputy. His duties include authorising the temporary release of prisoners, their removal from association, approving the use of special cells and restraints, and carrying out adjudications. He also has a general duty to keep under review and to report to the Secretary of State on the running of the prison by and on behalf of the Director as well as to investigate and report to the Secretary of State on any allegations made against prisoner custody officers performing custodial duties at the prison. The Controller is also authorised to suspend and refer for revocation the certificate of a prisoner custody officer if he considers him or her not to be a fit and proper person to carry out custodial functions.

The current salaries of the Controller and Deputy Controller are £43,000 and £32,000 a year respectively.

Prisons (Cellular Accommodation)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide more robust cellular accommodation within the prison estate. [8256]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what plans he has to provide more robust cellular accommodation within the prison estate.

Since the late 1980s all new prisons and all new houseblocks and refurbished accommodation at existing prisons have included secure cellular accommodation to the current security standard. This standard is kept under review and revised as necessary.

The six new privately built and managed prisons which are planned will include secure cellular accommodation to accepted standards.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional inmate places will be available for use by the end of 1996 at HMP Holloway. [8446]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many additional inmate places will be available for use by the end of 1996 at Holloway prison.

There are no additional inmate places planned for Holloway prison in 1996.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how long the mother and baby unit at Holloway prison has been closed; for what reason; when it is expected to be available for use again; and if he will make a statement. [9038]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how long the mother and baby unit at Holloway prison has been closed; for what reason it has been closed; and when it is expected to be available for use again.

The mother and baby unit at Holloway prison has not been closed and there are no plans to close it.

Prisons (Mental Health Care)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates in Doncaster prison received some form of mental health care in each month since the prison opened. [8426]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of inmates in Doncaster prison who have received some form of mental health care in each month since the prison opened.

Listed on the attached table are details showing the number of inmates seen by a psychiatrist.

Prisons (Sick Leave)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the daily average number of prison staff at Doncaster prison absent on sick leave, as a total number and as a percentage of the total prison's work force. [8425]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the daily average number of prison staff at Doncaster prison absent on sick leave, as a total number and as a percentage of the total prison's work force.

The average daily sickness is 10.23 staff, which represents 3.28 per cent of the daily work force.

Prisons (Inmate Places)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional inmate places will be available for use by the end of 1996 at Doncaster prison. [8445]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many additional inmate places will be available for use by the end of 1996 at Doncaster prison.

The Certified Normal Accommodation (CNA) at Doncaster prison was increased from 771 to 850 from Monday 20 November 1995 for a period of six months. This is intended to be a short term measure in order to help cope with the current high population levels. When the arrangements cease, it is intended that the CNA will revert to 771.

Prisons (Mechanical Restraints)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the (a) shortest, (b) longest and (c) average time during which inmates at HMP Holloway have been detained in a bodybelt or mechanical restraint since January 1990. [8443]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what is the (a) shortest, (b) longest and (c) average time during which inmates at Holloway prison have been detained in a bodybelt or mechanical restraint since January 1990.

The shortest period of time prisoners have been restrained in a bodybelt or mechanical restraint at Holloway prison since January 1990 is 1 hour 40 minutes; the longest is 5 hours 10 minutes; and the average time is 3 hours 13 minutes.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often the Home Office official at HMP Holloway responsible for the punishment of inmates has authorised the use of (a) bodybelts, (b) ankle straps, (c) handcuffs and (c) special segregation unit cells for each year since January 1990. [8423]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how often the Home Office official at Holloway prison responsible for the punishment of inmates has authorised the use of (a) bodybelts, (b) ankle straps, (c) handcuffs and (d) special segregation unit cells for each year since January 1990.

The use of body belts, ankle straps, and special cells in the segregation unit have been authorised by the governor since 1990 on the number of occasions shown in the attached table, as a means of restraint and not punishment.

Handcuffs are used as a security measure when prisoners are being moved and are a routine occurrence. In the context of restraining violent prisoners there is no record of their use.

	Body belt	Ankle straps	Special cell Segregation Unit	Handcuffs

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action the heads of all his Department's executive agencies are taking to protect pre-retirement courses from being abandoned in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies; and if he will make a statement. [9133]

Mr. Howard: Pre-retirement courses continue to be run for staff in the Home Office and its agencies, apart from the Prison Service, by the main Home Office. In the Prison Service courses are organised by the Prison Service college. There are no plans for any reductions in the number of courses.

Police Vehicle Escorts

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines exist for police escorting slow-moving loads on motorways, with special reference to whether single police vehicles should drive in the inside lane behind the slow-moving vehicle. [9401]

Mr. Maclean: The precise procedure adopted for the escorting of abnormal loads is an operational matter for chief officers of police. But guidelines on the escorting of abnormal loads on motorways are contained in the police service's "National Motorway Manual", which has been issued to forces by the traffic committee of the Association of Chief Police Officers.

The guidelines advise that police vehicles should be positioned not less than 50 m to the rear of the load and occupy a complete lane. In normal circumstances the lane the police vehicle occupies will be determined by the width of the load. Loads which project into the second or middle lane will normally be followed by a police vehicle in that lane.

British Citizenship

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that every woman who is not herself a British citizen but is or has been the wife of a British citizen who is the mother of a child by that husband and the child is a British citizen, will in all but the most exceptional circumstances, be granted a permanent right to abode in the United Kingdom; and if he will give the number of such mothers who have during the last 12 months been refused right of abode in the United Kingdom. [9315]

Mr. Kirkhope: No. Each application for leave to remain as the wife of a British citizen is considered in the light of all the relevant circumstance. There are no separate statistics of the number of foreign wives, married to British husbands, with British children, who are refused leave to remain.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, column 969, if he will specify the items of expenditure wrongly classified as hospitality in the original figure given for 1994–95. [9539]

Mr. Howard: The reclassification related solely to expenditure by the Fire Service College executive agency. The provisional figure given in my answer of 1 May at column 94, included the cost of meals and accommodation provided free of charge to visiting lecturers, auditors and contractors who would otherwise have included an element for these expenses in their invoices, and to candidates attending certain course selection interviews which should have been attributed to the costs of the course. The expenditure classified as hospitality should have been only that incurred on the business entertaining of the college's clients and potential clients.

Incapacitants

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the safety of (i) pepper spray and (ii) CS incapacitant. [9668]

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office police scientific development branch has reviewed all the available information about the effects on human health of CS and of incapacitant products containing oleoresin capsicum. In addition, research commissioned by my right hon. and learned Friend has been undertaken into the possible carcinogenic effects of oleoresin capsicum's main incapacitating ingredient, capsaicin.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the reason for the suspension of trials in the west midlands on CS incapacitant. [9669]

Mr. Maclean: West Midlands police is one of a number of forces due to participate in police trials of CS incapacitant for self-defence. The Association of Chief Police Officers announced last November that the trials would be delayed pending further work to ensure that the solvent used to disperse the CS irritant was the most appropriate, and to ensure that the advice to police officers and medical practitioners on the aftercare of people sprayed was the best available.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what legal costs, arising from the Scott inquiry, have been incurred by the Department on behalf of current and past (a) civil servants and (b) advisers and secondees; [8749]

(2) what legal costs, arising from the Scott inquiry, have been incurred, on behalf of Ministers and ex-Ministers, by his Department; and if he will name the individuals concerned. [8751]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 15 January 1996]: No legal costs have been incurred by my Department on behalf of Ministers, ex-Ministers, civil servants, former civil servants or other advisers or secondees of my Department in connection with the Scott inquiry. The cost of any advice in connection with the Scott inquiry given by Government lawyers as part of their normal duties cannot be quantified.

Ashford (Middlesex) Remand Centre

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to sell the site of the former Ashford (Middlesex) remand centre as soon as possible. [8531]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. David Wilshire, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the future of the former Ashford remand centre.

The Prison Service is currently considering a number of sites in the London area for a new prison. The site at Ashford is not a preferred option and the Prison Service does not have any current plans to rebuild a prison on the site.

However, the anticipated growth in the prison population, particularly in the London area, necessitates the retention of the Ashford site for future possible development should the need arise. The Prison Service is currently in the process of renewing the lease for the site from the Council.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9750]

Mr. Howard: Mobile telephones, including car telephones, are procured after comparison of service providers' tariffs to meet individual requirements at best value for money. The companies which have supplied mobile telephones to my Department in the last three years are Advance Communications, British Telecommunications Mobile, Cellnet, Mercury One-2-One, Martin Dawes, Motorola, Orange, People's Phone, Securicor, Vodac, Vodafone and WaveTech.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9749]

Mr. Howard: There are currently no agreements with companies for the provision of mobile and car telephones other than the contracts for the individual telephones.

PRIME MINISTER

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisation which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9217]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People on 15 January, Official Report, column 417. I will ensure that my office and those bodies for which I am responsible are made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Civil List

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what was the amount of the civil list in 1994–95; what is the projected amount for 1995–96; and what is the current assessed surplus over actual expenditure. [8685]

The Prime Minister: As announced by my predecessor on 24 July 1990 Official Report, columns 299–300, and implemented by SI 1990/2018 of 12 October 1990, the provision of Her Majesty's civil list is £7.9 million in each year of the current 10-year settlement. Surplus provision in the early years is designed to cover shortfalls in the later ones.

For details of the current surplus, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe) on 10 January, Official Report, columns 244–45.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what legal costs, arising from the Scott inquiry, have been incurred by the Department on behalf of current and past (a) civil servants and (b) advisers and secondees; [8750]

(2) what legal costs, arising from the Scott inquiry, have been incurred, on behalf of Ministers and ex-Ministers, by his Department; and if he will name the individuals concerned. [8752]

Mr. Hanley: The cost of legal services charged by the Treasury Solicitor's Department together with accounts settled to date from public funds for the provision of external legal services incurred on behalf of Ministers, ex-Ministers, civil servants and former civil servants of my Department in connection with the Scott inquiry is £318,165.46. No legal costs have been incurred on behalf of other advisers and secondees. The cost of any legal advice in connection with the Scott inquiry given by Government lawyers as part of their normal duties cannot be quantified.

It is not the Government's policy to identify the individuals who have received legal advice either directly or indirectly.

Hafez Dalkamoni

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Germany concerning the possible release by the German authorities of Hafez Dalkamoni. [9403]

Mr. David Davis: None. Any decision concerning the release of a national of a third country from a German prison is solely a matter for the German authorities.

British Council

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions have taken place with the British Council about its withdrawal from countries overseas as a result of the proposed reductions in the aid budget. [9603]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on the British Council's overseas activities of the reductions proposed in the autumn statement. [9602]

Mr. Hanley: Preliminary discussions have taken place with the British Council about the possible effects of the 1995 Budget settlement. The council is preparing detailed proposals which will be discussed further with the FCO, diplomatic wing, and the ODA.

Kurds

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has evaluated in respect of alleged mass killings by Turkish troops of the Kurds; and if he will make a statement. [9695]

Mr. David Davis: I have seen no reports on the mass killings by Turkish troops. I am aware of photographs which recent newspaper articles have alleged to show Turkish soldiers posing with the mutilated bodies of Kurds. I understand that the Turkish ambassador in London has sent copies of the photographs to Ankara for investigation.

Ivory (Hong Kong)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current total of all ivory notified to his Department as held in Hong Kong; and on what date it was last assessed. [8884]

Mr. Hanley: The aggregate total declared quantity shown on commercial ivory possession licences in Hong Kong was 307 tonnes on 31 December 1995.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current number of licensed ivory traders in Hong Kong; and what was the number on 26 February 1992. [8900]

Mr. Hanley: There were 821 possession licences held by commercial ivory stock-holders in Hong Kong on 31 December 1995. The number was 963 on 26 February 1992.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the confiscation of ivory by the Hong Kong authorities since 25 February 1992; and what prosecutions for illegal export have occurred during that period. [8902]

Mr. Hanley: Since 25 February 1992, the Hong Kong authorities have seized a total of 909.6 kg of ivory. There were three prosecutions for illegal export during the period.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current tradeable ivory stock held in Hong Kong; and to which countries ivory has been exported since 7 July 1990. [8898]

Mr. Hanley: The aggregate total declared quantity shown on commercial ivory possession licences in Hong Kong was 307 tonnes on 31 December 1995. No commercial exports of ivory have been authorised by the Hong Kong authorities since 7 July 1990 except for pre-convention specimens to the United Kingdom and the United States of America.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many spot checks on ivory-holding premises were carried out by the Hong Kong authorities in each year since 1991. [8899]

Mr. Hanley: The number of checks carried out by the Hong Kong authorities on ivory-holding premises in each year since 1991 are as follows:

Year	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995
Number of checks	220	319	320	807	284

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on licenses issued by the Hong Kong authorities for the export of ivory since 1991. [8901]

Mr. Hanley: No commercial exports of ivory have been authorised since 1991 except for nine licences to export pre-convention specimens to the United Kingdom and USA.

British Embassy, Moscow

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total cost of modifications and decoration in the British embassy in Moscow during 1994–95; what was the figure for the previous financial year; and what was the total cost in respect of manpower and materials associated with the proposed additions to the banqueting hall in 1994. [8908]

Mr. Hanley: The total cost of modifications and decoration at the British embassy in Moscow in 1994–95 was £431,000, including £377,000 on re-organisation of the visa section. In 1993–94, the cost of modifications and decoration totalled £760,000. This included £540,000 for a complete refurbishment of the run-down—outhoused—commercial office and £215,000 for the installation of new security gates at all embassy entrances.

There is no banqueting hall as such. Formal dinners are held in the dining room of the ambassador's house and official functions in the reception room there. No additions to either room were proposed or carried out in 1994. The reception room was redecorated in 1994 at a total cost, including manpower and materials, of £28,000.

Endangered Species (Hong Kong)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the items from endangered species seized by the Hong Kong authorities in each year since 1992; and how many prosecutions arose from such seizures. [8905]

Mr. Hanley: Since 1992, the Hong Kong authorities have seized a wide variety of specimens of endangered species. Details of seizures will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. During the same period, there were 1,239 prosecutions.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9757]

Mr. Hanley: Within this current financial year, 11 mobile phones have been withdrawn from service at an estimated total cost of £750 for contractual disconnection charges. The companies involved were Cellcom Ltd. (seven), British Telecom Mobile Communications (two) and VODAC Ltd. (two) Most disconnections result from obsolete or damaged equipment.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9755]

Mr. Hanley: Service contracts of 12 months duration have been awarded to the following companies:

VODAC Ltd.

VODACOM Ltd.

British Telecom Mobile Communications

Motorola Telco Ltd.

Cellular One Ltd.

Direct Mobile Communications Ltd.

DVH Communications Ltd.

Operating costs for the current financial year in respect of 217 phones; including call charges and monthly line rental/airtime totalled £83,200.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9756]

Mr. Hanley: Service contracts are awarded to companies submitting the most competitive bid and offering the best value for money. The following companies have variously been involved:

VODAC Ltd.
VODACOM Ltd.
DVH Communications Ltd.
BT Mobile Services
Bradford Mobile Phone Company
DX Mobile Phones
K1 Mobile Phones
Mercury Mobile Services
Motorola Telco Ltd.
NAG Telecom
Woodend Communications.

HEALTH

Nursing Home Costs

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many extra people will now have their nursing home costs paid (a) entirely and (b) in part as a result of raising the thresholds to (i) £10,000 and (ii) £16,000; what is the cost of each category to the Treasury; how many people will have their care costs paid in full as a result of raising the capital threshold from £3,000 to £10,000; and what is the cost to the Treasury. [8696]

Mr. Bowis: Around 50,000 people in residential care and nursing homes are expected to benefit from the increases in the capital thresholds. The estimated cost of the increases is around £60 million. All residents, whether placed in residential care or nursing homes by a local authority, or in receipt of income support to pay towards their care costs, have to contribute out of income as well as capital, so the number of those having their care costs paid in full is negligible.

Vaccinations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will consider involving parents in the preparation of future leaflets produced to warn of the adverse effects of vaccinations along the lines of the co-operative scheme established in the United States. [8702]

Mr. Horam: The design of all immunisation and promotional materials by the Health Education Authority is informed by qualitative and quantitative research into parents' needs and concerns. At the developmental stage, qualitative research is undertaken to determine parents' perceptions of individual diseases and immunisations. Draft materials are then pre-tested with parents and modified to improve clarity and understanding.

In addition, quantitative tracking studies monitor awareness of promotional activity and materials, as well as which sources of information are most used and considered to be most useful by parents of young children. This research is also used to assess the information given to them by health workers.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the incidences of Crohn's disease in relation to vaccinations. [8648]

Mr. Horam: Considerable research has already been conducted around the world and convincing links between immunisation and Crohn's disease have not been demonstrated.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish a compensation fund for victims of the adverse effects of vaccines along the lines of the scheme in place in the United States. [8701]

Mr. Horam: None. Compensation for alleged vaccine damage is a matter that should be determined by the courts. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security administers the Vaccine Damage Payment Act 1979. Payments made under the Act are not compensation but are intended to ease the present and future burdens of those suffering from vaccine damage and their families.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish a public inquiry into cases of adverse effects of the administration of immunisation against measles and rubella. [8703]

Mr. Horam: The Department has undertaken rigorous evaluation of the measles/rubella campaign, including the analysis of reports of suspected adverse reactions. This analysis concluded that measles/rubella vaccine was very safe and this conclusion was supported by two independent committees of clinical experts: the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, which advises the Department of Health, and the Committee on Safety of Medicines, which advises the Licensing Authority regarding the safety of vaccines. Details of adverse reactions have been published in "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance", a copy of which is in the Library. This publication is sent to all doctors, pharmacists, dentists and coroners who are then free to comment publicly on the data. In view of this action and the very low reporting rate of suspected adverse reactions, there is no need for a public inquiry.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies; and if he will make a statement. [9149]

Mr. Horam: The Department provides a range of counselling, "life planning", career management and employee assistance courses to those staff in the Department's executive agencies who have successfully applied under the Department's voluntary early retirement or voluntary severance schemes. The contract for these services is funded centrally by the Department.

Pre-retirement courses for staff approaching normal retirement age are not funded by the Department centrally and provision for them must be considered by individual agencies as part of their forward planning exercises.

Hospices (National Lottery)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the national lottery on raising funds to support the development and operation of the hospice movement and hospices; what plans he has to ensure the financial security of hospices; and if he will make a statement. [9281]

Mr. Horam: There is as yet no conclusive evidence concerning the impact of the national lottery on the fund-raising activities of voluntary hospices. The National Council for Hospice and Specialist Palliative Care Services and the National Association of Hospice Fund-raisers, are continuing to keep this under review. Three hospices in England have, however, benefited from the national lottery fund.

To help promote hospices' financial security, Government funding for hospices and specialist palliative care services has, since 1994–95, been built into health authorities' general allocations and health authorities have been encouraged to enter into three year rolling contracts for the purchase of specialist palliative care services.

Incontinence Pads

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is in relation to the supply of incontinence pads to those who require them because of disability; what plans he has to review these arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [9212]

Mr. Bowis: The organisation of continence services in England and the matter in which they are delivered, including the provision of continence pads, are matters for district health authorities and hospital and community trusts. They are under a general obligation to provide these services where the need exists and in the light of their resources and priorities.

National health service responsibilities for meeting continuing health care needs, which include the provision of community health services such as the supply of continence pads, are set out in circular HSG (95) 8, copies of which are available in the Library.

Dentists

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in each family health services authority have withdrawn from the NHS in each year since 1992. [9503]

Mr. Malone: This information will be placed in the Library. At 30 September 1995, there were 15,951 dentists on the lists of family health services authorities in England, the highest September figure ever.

Divorce

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what forecast has been made by Her Majesty's Government of the proportion of new and recent marriages that are likely to end in divorce; and what previous estimates have been made. [9601]

Mr. Horam: An estimate has recently been made of the proportion of marriages which would end in divorce if divorce and death rates each remained at the average level recorded throughout 1993 and 1994. On this basis, 41 per cent. of marriages in England and Wales would end in divorce. Earlier estimates based on 1979–80 and 1987 rates remaining constant were 34 and 37 per cent. respectively. The latest estimate, together with associated commentary and technical explanation, is due to be published by HMSO in mid-March in an article in "Population Trends, 83", copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Newcastle General Hospital (Chemotherapy)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are currently receiving chemotherapy in Newcastle general hospital; how many were turned away from the hospital during the first two weeks in January 1996 owing to the scarcity of beds and; if he will make a statement. [9670]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for the Freeman Group of Hospitals national health service trust, which manages chemotherapy treatment on the Newcastle general hospital site. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Leonard Barron, chairman of the trust for details.

NHS Trusts (Staffing)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will instruct the NHS executive to investigate medical staffing in NHS trusts. [9906]

Mr. Malone: The national health service executive takes advice on staffing from the advisory group on medical education, training and staffing. The number of doctors in higher specialist training in each specialty is planned through the specialist workforce advisory group, to ensure that there are sufficient trained candidates to fill consultant posts in the future.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what would be (a) the annual cost and (b) the current charges if prescription charges had been raised in line with price inflation since 1979. [8962]

Mr. Malone: The loss of income to the national health service if the prescription charge had been raised in line with the GDP deflator index would be about £260 million per year. This calculation is based on a comparison with charge income in 1994–95.

The standard prescription charge per item would be £0.51.

Cataracts

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the number of operations for cataracts undertaken in each of the last five years by the NHS; [9193]

(2) what is the estimated annual cost to the NHS of cataract eye disease; [9191]

(3) what is the incidence of cataract eye disease in England, Wales and Scotland. [9192]

Mr. Horam: The number of eye lens operations, which are mainly for cataracts, undertaken in England in the last five years is shown in the table.

Year	Thousands
1989–90	92.2
1990–91	97.9
1991–92	111.7
1992–93	118.6
1993–94	130.5

Source:
Hospital Episode Statistics.

Information on the incidence and the estimated annual cost to the national health service in England of cataract eye disease is not available centrally.

Information concerning Wales and Scotland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland.

Meningitis

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to improve the information and training offered to general practitioners in diagnosing meningitis; and if he will make a statement. [8760]

Mr. Horam: The chief medical officer issued advice on meningococcal infection in his update letter of October—CMO update 7—which is sent to all doctors, copies of which are available in the Library. In this letter, doctors were reminded of the seasonal increase in meningococcal infection, were given advice on the early diagnosis of suspected cases and on the need for antibiotic treatment and urgent referral to hospital. The letter follows on from previous reminders which have been sent to general practitioners in the past. Additionally, articles in medical journals continually emphasise to doctors advice similar to that issued by the chief medical officer.

The training received by GP trainees during their vocational training year covers infectious diseases. This is supplemented and developed further through the inclusion of infectious diseases in continuing medical education programmes.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information is made available on a nationwide basis to parents in care of infants of the symptoms of meningococcal disease and the procedures that should be adopted once the symptoms have been observed; and what plans he has to increase the information made available during an outbreak of 'flu; [8893]

(2) what steps his Department is currently taking to inform the public of the symptoms of meningitis and the procedures that should be adopted at the outset of such symptoms; [8896]

(3) the leaflet produced by the Department on meningitis was first made available; and in what manner the leaflet has been distributed. [8894]

Mr. Horam: Health visitors provide new parents with the Health Education Authority's leaflet "A Guide to Childhood Immunisations", which includes advice on recognising meningitis. In February 1994, new public information leaflets on meningitis and septicaemia were sent to all general practitioners to be made available to the public. Copies of both leaflets are available in the Library. Supplies of the leaflet were provided to the National Meningitis Trust and Meningitis Research. Leaflets have also been distributed to college students and there was a further wider distribution to students in September 1995. The Department of Health also provides funding to the National Meningitis Trust to support its valuable information and support work. The trust is active in raising public awareness immediately before, and during, the winter peak. Advice on recognising meningitis can be found in the Health Education Authority's "Birth to Five" book which is issued to all first-time parents. The Department of Health also contributes to the many newspaper articles and television and radio programmes that appear during the winter peak.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for health what procedures are currently in place to inform staff working in nurseries, playgroups and schools of the symptoms of meningitis and the procedures that should be adopted once the symptoms have been observed; and if his Department plans to update these procedures. [8895]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for local arrangement by the local consultant in communicable disease control. Revised guidelines for outbreak management of meningococcal infection, prepared by the meningococcal working party of the Public Health Laboratory Service, were published in the "Communicable Disease Report" vol. 5, No. 13 in December, copies of which are available in the Library. The guidance has been sent to all public health physicians including consultants in communicable disease control and includes advice on notifying nurseries, playgroups and schools.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9753]

Mr. Horam: In September 1993, the Department invited, via an advertisement in the EC Journal, tenders for the supply of minor items of telecommunications equipment which included mobile telephones. Full open tendering procedures were followed. The companies which tendered were:

Vodafone
Mercury Communications
Rocom
Martin Dawes
BT (Cellnet)
Interconnect
Phillips
Securicor
Pennine Telecoms Ltd
Motorola

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9752]

Mr. Horam: A contract of three years with a possible one-year extension was awarded to Vodafone from 1 April 1994 for the supply of mobile and car phones. For each mobile phone ordered, a one-year agreement applies—thereafter 90 days notice is required to terminate individual mobile phone agreements. Since April 1994 approximately 200 mobiles have been issued at a rental cost of £60,000—£300 per unit per annum. In addition, there are the call charges at £30,000, which average about £150 per unit per annum.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9754]

Mr. Horam: No costs have been incurred by the Department as a result of withdrawing from the contract with Vodafone as it is still in place.

Live Vaccines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase funding support for research into alternatives to live vaccines. [8700]

Mr. Horam: The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. The MRC is an independent body which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. The MRC gives high priority to research relevant to developing new and improved vaccines against diseases. A proportion of this is relevant to developing alternatives to live vaccines.

ENVIRONMENT

Fur Imports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library the briefing notes prepared by United Kingdom representatives in Brussels for the Coreper deliberations on the import of furs from animals caught in leg-hold traps in countries outside the European Union. [8698]

Mr. Clappison: It would not be appropriate for such papers to be placed in the Library. The papers are internal documents whose disclosure might harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Local Government (Services to Disabled People)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest assessment of the impact of local government reorganisation on the provision of services for disabled people; what guidelines he (a) has issued, and (b) intends to issue, to unitary authorities on the provision of services for and to disabled people; what arrangements he intends to put in place to ensure the continuation of services which are currently provided across the new local government authority boundaries; and if he will make a statement. [9238]

Sir Paul Beresford: All new unitary authorities will be responsible for deciding how their statutory responsibilities for personal social services can best be discharged. On 12 May 1995 the Department of Health issued an advice document to all local authorities entitled "Social Services: Maintaining Standards in A Changing World", under cover of a local authority social services letter (95)5. Copies of the advice document are available in the Library. It draws attention to the special features of social services which the new authorities will need to consider if they are to deliver those services effectively to people who need them.

Local Government (Essex)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on which date he expects to receive the final proposals of the Local Government Commission in respect of the county of Essex; and when he expects to announce his decisions arising from the report. [9326]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Local Government Commission published its final report for all its reviews of individual districts on 19 December 1995. Interested parties have until 13 February to make representations; we aim to announce our decisions soon after that date.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he intends to issue to local authorities about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9245]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People on Monday 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 417.

Local Government Elections

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what circumstances it is possible to hold the general election of all councillors for proposed unitary authorities at a time other than the normal scheduled date in May. [9325]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is possible by means of a structural change order to hold elections in other months. This is consequential upon the structural change. However, it is our policy not to have local elections other than at the normal time in May. Local authorities do not receive full powers to plan for change until the elections and we believe that, given the importance of proper preparation, there should be the full 11 months between the elections and reorganisation. In addition, because the May elections could be cancelled only by means of the structural change order, the result would be two sets of elections in the one year.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest date upon which parliamentary approval would be required for those orders giving effect to the proposals of the Local Government Commission in respect of the county of Essex to permit the holding in May 1996, of the general election of all councillors for the proposed unitary authorities. [9327]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. member for Littleborough and Saddleworth (Mr. Davies) on 11 January 1996, Official Report, column 288.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to require water companies to provide financial and other information to the National Rivers Authority relating to the costs of implementing activity plans drawn up by the National Rivers Authority. [9691]

Mr. Clappison: No. It is for the Director General of Water Services to secure that those appointed as water and sewerage undertakers are able to finance the proper carrying out of the functions of such undertakers. Accordingly, water and sewerage undertakers provide financial and other information to the director general including in respect of obligations arising from requirements imposed or to be imposed by the National Rivers Authority and in future the Environment Agency. As regards any requirement to provide information to the agency, the Government's view was set out in another place during the passage of the Environment Act 1995, Official Report, 31 January 1995, column 1376, including in respect of the potential implications of such a requirement for the Environment Agency in carrying out its duties under section 39 of that Act.

Education Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for each authority in England, the education standard spending assessment for 1995–96 and the provisional education standard spending assessment for 1996–97. [9689]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mine Accidents

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish figures showing the number of (a) fatal and (b) serious reportable accidents, gathered by the mines inspectorate, covering (i) direct and (ii) contract employees of each of the coal companies operating deep mines which were previously publicly owned, in those months in 1995 for which figures are available; and if he will publish equivalent figures for 1994. [9775]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information for individual mines is not produced. Statistics for the industry are published as an aggregate figure in the Health and Safety Commission's annual report. Those for the period from January 1994 to March 1995 are included in the 1993–94 and 1994–95 statistics. Copies of the commission's annual reports have been placed in the House Library.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information, and at what intervals, is required to be provided to the Health and Safety Executive regarding serious injuries occurring in private coal companies. [9717]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985—RIDDOR—require the manager of the mine to notify the Health and Safety Executive forthwith in the event of an accident at work to any employee or member of the public resulting in a fatality or major injury or if there is a dangerous occurrence. Accidents at work to employees resulting in an absence of more than three days must be reported within seven days. Cases of occupational disease specified in the schedule to the regulations must be reported as soon as an employer receives notification from a doctor.

Incidents must be reported on an approved report form published by HSE. The information required includes details of the employer concerned, the premises where the incident occurred, the injured person and the nature of their injuries, and a description of the accident.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will require private coal companies to publish, at regular intervals, detailed statistics relating to the number and types of serious reportable accidents, sustained by (a) directly employed and (b) contract workers. [9776]

Sir Paul Beresford: No.

Gas Engineers

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further steps he is taking to ensure that only Confederation of Registered Gas Installers—approved gas engineers carry out work on gas appliances. [7924]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994 require that gas installation businesses carrying out gas work in domestic or commercial premises must be registered with a body approved by the Health and Safety Executive. Currently, the approved body for this purpose is the Council for Registered Gas Installers. This legal requirement is being reinforced in the HSE's current national publicity campaign about the dangers of gas-related carbon monoxide poisoning.

On 1 December 1995, the HSE published new criteria against which it will consider and approve organisations to operate a statutory registration scheme for gas installation businesses. These criteria introduce a specific requirement on bodies so approved to publicise regularly the need for the public to use only registered installation businesses to undertake gas work. An approved body must operate within criteria prescribed by the HSE.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the effect of the change in the estimated level of Government financial support for 1996–97, on (a) local government expenditure and (b) local government taxation. [8891]

Sir Paul Beresford: The overall level of aggregate external finance—that is the total central Government support for English local authorities—will increase by £960 million—2.8 per cent.—in 1996–97. This increase in AEF is to support the Government's view of the appropriate level of revenue spending for local authorities in England—total standard spending, which is £44.9 billion in 1996–97; an increase of 3.3 per cent.

Local authorities are however, subject to capping, free to set their budgets at the level they consider appropriate. The actual level of local authority expenditure will therefore depend on local decisions. If English local authorities increase their spending in line with the increase in TSS, average council taxes in England would increase by between 5 and 6 per cent. in 1996–97. The pessimistic view of local authority behaviour taken in my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's "Financial Statement and Budget Report", imply that council tax levels will rise by 8 per cent. on average next year.

Local authority funding in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Elephant Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many licences he has issued for the sale of elephant ivory since 17 October 1990. [8897]

Mr. Clappison: Since 17 October 1990, my Department has issued 138 individual licences allowing the sale of items made from, or containing, ivory, in accordance with the EC convention on international trade in endangered species.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which TECs included funding for business start-up (a) grants and (b) training in their last single regeneration budget bid; and which of these bids were successful. [9195]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information in the form requested is not available. The kind of support provided for business start-up activity in SRB challenge fund bids is determined by local partnerships to reflect the needs of their localities. Challenge fund grant is made available by the Government to help meet the costs of these locally determined initiatives.

In rounds 1 and 2 of the challenge fund, a total of 25 training and enterprise councils took the lead in 39 successful bids that included funding for business start-up. Over their lifetime, these schemes are expected to provide 36,000 new business starts and to receive £140 million in challenge fund support. The TECs concerned are:

Merseyside
Greater Nottingham
Hereford and Worcester
South London
London East
Central London
City and Inner London
North West London
North London
West London
AZTEC
Gloucestershire
Cheshire, Ellesmere Port and Wirral
St Helens
South and East Cheshire
Greater Peterborogh
Herts
Norfolk and Waveney
Shropshire
Lancashire Area West and East Lancashire
Teesside
Tyneside
Northumberland
Heart of England
North Yorkshire.

A further 199 challenge fund schemes are expected to produce an additional 44,000 business start-ups over their lifetime. Although not led by TECs, most of these schemes involve TECs as members of partnerships.

Butterflies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what value he places on the number of butterflies as an indicator group of the state of biodiversity of species; [9297]

(2) what proposals he has to monitor the number of rare and common butterflies; and what new proposals he has to establish new butterfly conservation areas; [9298]

(3) his Department will respond to the biodiversity steering group's recent published report; [9299]

(4) what proposals he has to honour the United Kingdom's commitments made at the Rio de Janeiro earth summit in regard to butterfly and moth conservation. [9300]

Mr. Clappison: The United Kingdom was one of the first countries to produce a national biodiversity plan when "Biodiversity: The UK Action Plan" was published in January 1994.

The biodiversity steering group, chaired by my Department, with members drawn from all sectors, published its findings on 13 December 1995. "Biodiversity: The UK Steering Group Report", identifies 25 butterfly and 122 moth species whose populations should be monitored where practicable. The report includes costed action plans for seven of the butterflies and three of the moths and recommends that costed action plans for a further three butterflies and 50 moths be produced within three years. The Government expect to publish their response to the report in the spring of 1996.

On 8 January, two further candidate special areas of conservation for the conservation of the marsh fritillary butterfly were submitted to the European Commission. In all six candidate SACs for this species have been notified to the European Commission. Butterflies will be one of the groups of species used in the preliminary package of UK indicators of sustainable development which my Department will publish in the early spring of 1996.

Car Boot Sales

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with local authorities about more effective planning controls for car boot sales. [9622]

Sir Paul Beresford: There is a general planning permission to use land for car boot sales for up to 14 occasions in any period of 12 months. If there is a real and specific threat to amenity or the environment however, a local planning authority may withdraw this right and require a planning application for such use. We have no plans to change this position and have not recently discussed the issue with local authorities.

Tenants' Choice

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of tenants' choice. [10524]

Mr. Curry: Part IV of the Housing Act 1988 introduced the tenants' choice scheme in 1989. The scheme has been overtaken by other more effective initiatives which meet its objectives of improving housing management performance and providing local authority tenants with opportunities to change their landlords. Better services and more tenant control are being delivered through right to manage and tenant consultation on housing management compulsory competitive tendering. Change of landlord can be achieved through large-scale voluntary transfers, and the new estates renewal challenge fund.

The tenants' choice scheme no longer serves a useful purpose and the forthcoming Housing Bill will include provisions to repeal the legislation in England and Wales.

TREASURY

Income Tax Relief

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the full year yield of restricting income tax relief available at the 40 per cent. marginal rate to (a) £2,000, (b) £3,000, (c) £4,000, (d) £6,000 and (e) £8,000, (i) including and (ii) excluding profit-related pay, giving in each case the number of people affected. [7064]

Mr. Jack: The full-year yield of restricting income tax reliefs, but not personal allowances, for higher rate taxpayers only and the number of people affected at 1996–97 income levels are given in the table. Detailed information is not available to provide estimates taking account of profit-related pay.

Upper limit for total allowances[1] £	Yield in full year £ million	Number of higher rate taxpayers thousands
2,000	1,100	890
3,000	830	490
4,000	680	310
6,000	500	160
8,000	400	100

[1] Including only reliefs available at 40 per cent. marginal rates and excluding profit related pay.

The estimates do not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such a limit.

Profit-related Pay Schemes

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evaluation his Department has undertaken of profit-related pay schemes during the last two years; and what is his evaluation of the success of the scheme in achieving the objectives intended for it. [8309]

Mr. Jack: An independent survey of the tax relief for profit-related pay was commissioned by the Inland Revenue, the Department of Employment and the Treasury and was published in May 1995. The survey suggested that tax relief had stimulated significant additional take-up of profit-related pay.

Save-as-you-earn Share Options Schemes

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees were involved in save-as-you-earn share option schemes in each year since 1980; how many employees use the savings and bonus to purchase shares and at what cost to public funds; and how many employees take out the savings and bonus without buying shares and at what cost to public funds. [8308]

Mr. Jack: Estimates of the cost of income tax relief for options exercised under approved savings-related share option schemes, and the number of employees to whom options were granted are published in table 6.1 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1995", a copy of which is the Library.

The number of employees who exercised options is given in the table.

Year	Number exercising options (thousands)
1984–85	20
1985–86	25
1986–87	65
1987–88	60
1988–89	70
1989–90	100
1990–91	175
1991–92	165
1992–93	190
1993–94	240

An estimate of the number of employees who take out their savings and bonus without buying shares is not available, but the cost of tax relief for the related save-as-you-earn accounts is included in the estimated cost of SAYE shown in table B.1 of "Inland Revenue Statistics".

Labour Statistics

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the total number of adults of working age, (b) the total in employment, (c) the total who were unemployed and (d) the total in employment as a percentage of the total number of adults for each year since 1966. [8528]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Available information relating to 1971–95 is given in the following table.

United Kingdom (seasonally adjusted)

Unemployment Benefit (Seaham and Peterlee)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in the Seaham and Peterlee areas are in receipt of unemployment benefit. [9505]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In November 1995, the number of people claiming unemployment-related benefits—unemployment benefit, income support or national insurance credits—numbered 1,303 in the Employment Service local office area of Seaham and 1,833 in the Peterlee local office area. These figures are not seasonally adjusted.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the use of the private finance initiative in the purchase of information technology by Government Departments. [7896]

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the use of the private finance initiative in the purchase of information technology by Government Departments. [7918]

Mr. Jack: On 22 December, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced the appointment of Graham Jordan as head of the new unit set up to co-ordinate a strategic approach to information technology across Government. At the core of this approach will be the use of the private finance initiative. With Government spending over £2 billion a year on IT, there are many exciting opportunities to improve public services in this area through the involvement of the private sector. The private finance panel has already identified around 150 potential IT private finance initiative projects.

Central Chancery of the Orders of Knighthood

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give an itemised breakdown of the costs of maintaining the Central Chancery of the Order of Knighthood in 1994–95. [8913]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The breakdown for 1994–95 is shown in the table.

	£000
Insignia	204
Staff	201
Printing	92
Capital equipment	16
Maintenance	12
Stationery	8
VAT	53
Less receipts	(26)

Extra-statutory Concessions

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many extra-statutory concessions will remain in effect following enactment of clause 186 and schedule 35 of the Finance Bill. [9292]

Mr. Jack: There are 207 published extra-statutory concessions. Clause 186 and schedule 35 of the Bill will enact 11 of these. A further five will be enacted by other provisions in the Bill.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the estimated level of Government financial support for each local authority, for England and for the United Kingdom in constant prices for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97, indicating the percentage yearly change in each case and the overall cumulative change (i) net of community care and the estimated cost of local government reorganisation and (ii) including community care and where appropriate the estimated cost of local government reorganisation; [8886]

(2) what is the estimated level of Government financial support for each of the new unitary local authorities and for Scotland as a whole in constant prices for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97, indicating the percentage yearly change in each case and the overall cumulative change (i) net of community care and the estimated cost of local government reorganisation and (ii) including community care and the estimated cost of local government reorganisation. [8887]

Mr. Waldegrave: Central Government support to local authorities comprises:

grants within aggregate external finance, which represent central Government's contribution towards the cost of core local authority services such as education and community care. They include revenue support grant, non-domestic rates redistributed to authorities from the national pools and certain grants in respect of specific services; current specific grants outside AEF, notably in respect of housing benefit and mandatory student awards;

capital grants; and credit approvals.

Table 6.7 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97" (HC 30) set out the Government's plans for total support to local authorities and their components. The table shows those figures in the form requested, including and excluding Department's latest plans for support in respect of local government reorganisation and the current costs of community care. The capital costs of community care are not separately identified.

Table 1: Central Government support to local authorities at 1994–95 prices: United Kingdom

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	Yearly change 1995–96 per cent.	Yearly change 1996–97 per cent.	Cumulative change per cent.
Including reorganisation and community care	61,254	60,438	58,725	–1.3	–2.8	–4.1
Excluding reorganisation and community care	59,771	58,239	56,074	–2.6	–3.7	–6.2

Some of these elements are distributed by Departments with responsibilities spanning Great Britain. Not all of these Departments have yet allocated their spending plans for 1996–97 between the countries of the Union. It is therefore not presently possible to break down the United Kingdom figure for support for that year. This information will be included in the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", to be published in February.

The table shows the figures which are available.

Table 2: Central Government support to local authorities at 1994–95 prices

	1994–95 £	1995–96[1] £	Change Per cent.
England
Including reorganisation and community care	50,218	49,074	–2.3
Excluding reorganisation and community care	48,939	47,237	–3.5
Scotland
Including reorganisation and community care	7,292	7,219	–1.0
Excluding reorganisation and community care	7,174	7,017	–2.2

[1] Figures shown in this column are not necessarily consistent with table 1 above, which is based on later information which was not broken down between the countries of the Union.

Grants and credit approvals are distributed to local authorities by a number of different Departments. Figures for the total support provided to each authority could therefore only be collated at disproportionate expense.

Cheques

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will bring forward proposals to amend the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 to allow (a) the electronic presentation of cheques, (b) dishonour of cheques by electronic means and (c) authenticated copies of cheques to be valid as receipts, in accordance with the recommendations of the Jack report. [10409]

Mrs Angela Knight: I am pleased to announce the publication today of a consultation document setting out proposals on these issues. Subject to the outcome of the consultation, the Government intend to bring forward an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994, to give effect to the proposed changes. Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Incomes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of wealth was owned, by the most wealthy 1, 2, 5, 10, 25 and 50 per cent. of the population in each year since 1979. [9317]

Mr. Jack: The available information on marketable wealth is given in table 13.5 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1995", a copy of which is in the Library.

TRANSPORT

British School of Motoring

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many schools are now using the British School of Motoring's ignition young driver education course; and how many of these are supplying the names and addresses of pupils using the British School of Motoring package. [8302]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is not held centrally. It is a matter for individual schools to determine both how and when they provide road safety education and which resource materials or programmes they use to support that teaching.

Transport Research Laboratory

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which of the shortlisted bidders he has selected as the purchaser of the Transport Research Laboratory; and if he will make a statement. [10621]

Mr. Norris: The Government have selected the Transport Research Foundation as the preferred purchaser for the final negotiations on the sale of the Transport Research Laboratory. The foundation includes members of TRL's existing management and is seeking to acquire TRL as a non-profit distributing company. Although the competing bid from the consortium of Pell Frischmann Consulting Engineers Ltd., Mouchel Associates Ltd., the Automobile Association and the Royal Automobile Club was strong, the foundation's bid was judged better to meet the objectives for the sale announced by the then Secretary of State on 14 March 1995.

We expect to complete the sale of TRL by the end of February.

Royal Train

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how often the royal train was used in 1994–95 on official business. [8683]

Mr. Watts: Between 1 April 1994 and 31 March 1995, the royal train was used 27 times to enable members of the royal family to carry out official engagements.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9732]

Mr. Norris: The procedures adopted for award of contracts relating to mobile phones across the Department of Transport has ranged from full competitive tendering procedures to simple competitive quotations, dependent upon the number of phones and predicted future requirements involved.

The companies involved with the processes are, in alphabetical order:

BT Mobile, Carphone Warehouse, Connections, Cellcom, EDS, ETC Communications, Hutchison Telecom, Intercity Mobile, Intercell, Martin Dawes, Mobile Cellular, Motorola, Newgate Coms, Prestige, Securior Cellular, Talkland, Uniqueair, Uplands Radio, Vodac, Vodacom Ltd., Voicecast.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9733]

Mr. Norris: Some £800; as a result of one agency consolidating its time contracts. Companies involved were British Telecom, Hutchison Telecom and Cellcom.

Public Transport (Fare Increases)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list (a) the annual percentage change and (b) the increase in fares on (i) London Buses, (ii) London Underground, (iii) all London Transport, (iv) Network SouthEast and (v) British Rail in each year since 1986–87 taking 1985–86 as the base and showing the increase in both actual and real terms, what estimate he has made for 1995–96; and if [illegible] indicate the percentage change relative to the rate of inflation in each year since 1991 for (1) adults and (2) children; [9160]

(2) if he will list (a) the annual percentage change and (b) the increase in child fares on London Transport in each of the years since 1986–87, taking 1985–86 as the base and showing the increase both in actual and real terms; [9159]

(3) what is the annual per cent. increase in fares on London Buses, London Underground and British Rail Network SouthEast in each of the financial years 1985–1995. [9156]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The information is shown in the tables.

1995–96	0.1	n/a

[1] Ordinary tickets only. Information on travelcards and season tickets is not available.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9731]

Mr. Norris: Figures are not available for the cost of each agreement nor the specific number of phones involved. Contract duration varies between 0 to 24 months, the bulk being 15 months including notice period. Companies with which the Departments and its executive agencies hold air-time contracts are, in alphabetical order.

BT Mobile, Cellcom, Hutchison Telecom, Intercell, Intercity Mobile, Martin Dawes, Motorola, Newgate Coms, Securior Cellular, Talkland, Uniqueair, Uplands Radio, Vodac.

Rail Transport Research

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he will be introducing to ensure that research into rail transport will continue following rail privatisation taking place. [8606]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 January 1996]: It will be a matter for companies in the railway industry to determine their own individual research requirements and how they may best be fulfilled.

London Transport

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff worked for London Transport on 24 November 1994; and how many permanent staff, full-time equivalent, were employed by London Transport on the most recent date for which figures are available. [8945]

Mr. Norris: On 12 November 1994—the nearest date to 24 November 1994 for which figures are available—London Transport employed 21,391 staff, of whom 20,437 were permanent staff, full-time equivalent.

On 9 December 1995, the most recent date for which figures are available, London Transport employed 18,152 permanent staff, full-time equivalent.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of those agencies seeking to make economies; and if he will make a statement. [9137]

Mr. Norris: The chief executives of the agencies in my Department will continue to offer pre-retirement courses to all their staff who are due to retire.

Telematics

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's telematics budget has been for the last five years; and what amount has been allocated for the next three years. [9687]

Mr. Norris: There is no separate budget for telematics, the use of advanced information and telecommunciation technologies. In each particular case where a telematic solution is thought to be the most cost-effective approach, it is budgeted for in the normal way as part of the relevant programme.

A13 (Private Management)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has in respect of private management schemes for the A13. [9686]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend announced on 28 November a further tranche of design, build, finance and operate road schemes, which included the A13 between east London and the M25.

The scope of the project is being refined, but it is intended to include the improvements at Ironbridge–Canning Town, A117 Woolwich Manor way junction and Movers lane junction, together with the management and maintenance of the A13 between east London and the M25. This will include management of the improvements between west of Heathway and Mar Dyke after construction is completed. Works are expected to commence in mid–1997.

Road Repairs

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects local authorities to have established a computerised street works register. [9333]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport is arranging for the provision of a computerised street works register for England and Wales. The contactor expects it to be fully operational by 1 March 1997.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers local authororities have to set timetables for street repairs by utilities in order to minimise traffic disruption; what plans he has to increase these powers. [9341]

Mr. Watts: Local highway authorities, in their capacity as street authorities, have a power under section 56 of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 to give directions to undertakers of proposed street works, in certain specified circumstances, as to the times when the works may or may not be carried out. The power does not apply to emergency works or to certain other urgent works for which no advance notice is required. There are no plans to increase it.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve the co-ordination of road repairs (a) between local authorities and (b) between local authorities and the Highways Agency. [9332]

Mr. Watts: Under the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991, highway authorities have a duty to co-ordinate the execution of works of all kinds in the streets for which they are responsible. That duty extends to co-ordination with other highway authorities where necessary.

Arrangements for implementing this requirement between local highway authorities are a matter for the authorities concerned. For trunk road and motorway work which affects local roads, co-ordination meetings between the Highways Agency and local highway authorities are held on a regular basis to agree future programmes of major road repairs. Improvements, through the greater use of information technology, are being developed.

British Rail Engineering Ltd. (Asbestos)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many claims for compensation for contracting asbestos-related diseases have been received by British Rail from or on behalf of former employees of British Rail Engineering Ltd. based in (a) York, (b) Derby, (c) Crewe and (d) other locations; in how many of these cases the former employee has died from an asbestos-related disease; how many of these claims have been settled; what was the (i) highest, (ii) lowest and (iii) the average cash sum paid in compensation in cases which resulted in the death of the employee; and how many weeks on average were taken in settling these claims from the time that they were initially submitted to British Rail. [9201]

Mr. Watts: British Rail has provided the following information:

BREL: asbestos-related compensation claims

	York	Derby	Crewe	Other
Claims registered	43	20	28	194
Claims closed	19	5	13	69

These data relate to claims registered since 1 April 1991.

Information on the number of cases in which former BREL employees have died from an asbestos-related disease, and on the compensation payable in such cases, is not readily available. In addition, in some cases the claim may be settled before death, and in others death may have occurred before the claim was submitted.

Details of financial settlements to date

Highest settlement: £262,134–05

Lowest settlement: £5,385–50

Average settlement: £37,515–64.

This information relates to all cases arising out of an asbestos-related disease, not just to those which resulted in the death of the employee.

The average time taken in settling claims from registration to closure of the case is 91 weeks. This period includes the time taken to pay plaintiff's costs and any costs payable by British Rail to its own legal advisors, as the claim cannot be closed until all legal costs have been paid.

Public Transport (London)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the change in fares on public transport in London in real terms relative to the rest of Britain since (a) 1991 and (b) 1992. [9157]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The table shows real percentage increases in public transport fares.

	1991–92 to 1994–95		1992–93 to 1994–95
	London	Rest of Great Britain	London	Rest of Great Britain
Bus fares	14.2	5.9	9.4	3.7
British Rail[1]	13.4	8.9	8.6	5.1
London Underground	13.9	n/a	9.0	n/a

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to seek additional powers to deal with defective foreign HGVs. [9840]

Mr. Norris: None. The Government are satisfied that the powers in the Road Traffic (Foreign Vehicles) Act 1972 and in the Road Traffic Act 1988 are sufficient.

Water Spray

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to require commercial vehicles to take steps to reduce water spray from their vehicles. [9832]

Mr. Norris: The Department is continuing to conduct research to find a reliable and repeatable way of measuring the effect of spray on driver's vision. When the research is completed, we shall be in a better position to consider improvements to the current standards.

Loose Loads

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to require commercial vehicles to restrain or cover loose loads. [9833]

Mr. Norris: The Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 and the Environmental Protection Act 1990 already require drivers of goods vehicles to ensure that loose loads are covered or restrained when being operated on the roads or in quarries.

The Department also issues a code of practice on the safety of loads, which has gained wide recognition within the haulage industry, in which advice is given on methods to constrain loose loads.

A30

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the contract for the improvement of the A30 trunk road junction at Kennards house, north Cornwall, to be let. [9609]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 16 January 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Paul Tyler, dated 17 January 1996:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr John Watts, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when the Secretary of State for Transport expects the contract for the improvement of the A30 trunk road junction at Kennards House, North Cornwall, to be let.

It had been planned to let a contract for this scheme during the current financial year. However, in light of the reduced level of funding for National Roads announced in November's Budget Statement, the Secretary of State announced changes to the Highways Agency's Business Plan for 1995/96 on 10 January. The scheme has been deferred but will be taken forward when funds become available.

I am sorry I cannot be more forthcoming at the moment.

Public Consultation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what public consultation exercises his Department has undertaken in the last three years in respect of transport policy. [8607]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 16 January 1996]: "Transport: The Way Ahead" was published as part of the national transport debate launched in 1995, and sought views on the future direction of transport policy. My Department has also conducted a number of consultation exercises on individual aspects of policy including:

- Passenger Rolling Stock (January 1993);
- Gaining Access to the Railway Network (February 1993);
- The Operation of Local Bus Services outside London (March 1993);
- Consultation on Route Options for the Channel Tunnel Rail Link (undertaken by Union Railways on behalf of DoT, Summer 1993).
- Paying For Better Motorways (May 1993);
- The Merchant Shipping Registration Regulations (August 1993);
- The future of Taxi and Private Hire Services in England and Wales (October 1993);
- Consultation on the principles of DBFO policy which accompanied the document, "Preliminary Note on Design, Build Finance and Operate contracts" (April 1994);
- Privatisation of the National Air Traffic Services (May 1994);
- Donaldson Report "Safer Ships, Cleaner Seas" (May 1994);
- Wreck Removal Powers (June 1994);
- Waste Reception Facilities in UK Ports (April 1995);
- Proposals for New Regulations on Transport of Radioactive Materials by Road In GB (April 1995);
- River crossings to the East of Tower Bridge (June 1995);
- Possible changes to Bus Deregulation (July 1994).

In addition, there have been a large number of consultations on very specific and/or technical issues such as: railway noise regulations and loading gauge standards; amending highways and vehicle regulations and aviation and shipping matters.

Motor Vehicles (West Yorkshire)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many motor vehicles over 25 years of age are currently registered in west Yorkshire. [8883]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 16 January 1996]: An estimated 9,350 vehicles over 25 years of age are currently licensed in the west Yorkshire area. Of these, 2,900 are in private and light goods, motorcycle or tricycle taxation classes and will qualify for exemption from vehicle excise duty as a result of the vehicle taxation changes announced in the budget on 28 November 1995.

Electric Cars

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the potential use of the electric car; and what proportion of his Department's transport budget this constituted in (i) percentage and (ii) real terms. [8598]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 16 January 1996]: The Government are considering the role that alternative fuels, including electricity, might play in minimising road transport emissions. To that end, they are continuing to sponsor studies, including the £1.2 million collaborative field trials of alternative fuels and a study into life cycle emissions. Results are expected towards the end of this year. It is not possible to apportion costs by fuel type.

Railway Stations

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many railway stations were (a) closed and (b) opened in the United Kingdom between (i) March 1974 and April 1979 and (b) May 1979 and December 1995; and what was the net figure for openings and closures for those two periods. [9608]

Mr. Watts: In Great Britain, between March 1974 and April 1979, 14 stations were closed and 31 opened or reopened, giving a net gain of 17 stations. Between May 1979 and December 1995, 63 stations were closed and 233 opened or reopened, giving a net gain of 170 stations. Figures for closures, openings and reopenings of stations in Northern Ireland between March 1974 and April 1979, and between May 1979 and December 1995, would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Coastguard Service

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the running cost budget for the Coastguard Agency in each of the last five years; and what it is for the current year. [9559]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Ms Joan Walley, dated 17 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Question about running cost budgets for the Coastguard Agency in each of the last five years.

The Coastguard Agency was formed on 1 April 1994 and the budgets since then are as follows:

1994–95: £24,882

1995–96: £25,596.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department is taking to ensure that workers on the construction of the Jubilee line are legitimately employed [9104]

Mr. Norris: Day-to-day management of the Jubilee line extension project is the responsibility of London Underground Ltd., whose contracts require construction companies to comply with the appropriate legislation covering the employment of labour.

Merchant Vessels

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of merchant vessels of 500 gross registered tonnes or more registered worldwide were constructed in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland an (d) Northern Ireland in each of the past five years. [9566]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 16 January 1996]: I understand that the information, as sourced from Lloyd's maritime information services, is as follows:

Operational merchant vessels in world fleet at 30 September 1995
By year and country of build

Percentage of registered vessels completed in year by country of build

Year of build	England	Scotland	Northern Ireland
1990	1.6	0.0	0.2
1991	1.2	0.0	0.5
1992	1.1	0.2	0.1
1993	0.2	0.2	0.2
1994	0.3	0.2	0.5

No merchant vessels were constructed in Wales during this period.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Eastern Europe

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are his Department's projections for future expenditure in eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. [8948]

Mr. Hanley: Planning figures for the period 1996–97—1998–89 are being finalised. As usual, these will be published in the 1996 Foreign and Commonwealth Office departmental report in March.

WALES

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of those agencies seeking to make economies; and if he will make a statement. [9136]

Mr. Hague: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments under its chief executive, Mr. T. J. Cassidy. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. J. Cassidy to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

PROVISION OF PRE-RETIREMENT COURSES

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the provision of pre-retirement courses with respect to Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments.

Cadw is an executive agency within the Welsh Office and all staff are employed by the parent Department. As a general rule, the agency does not run its own training courses. Cadw staff are eligible for in-house training courses provided by the Welsh Office (which include pre-retirement courses) and will also attend specialist courses provided by external trainers.

All staff in the agency are encouraged to attend courses relevant to their needs at the appropriate time and it is my understanding that the Welsh Office intend to continue with the existing programme of pre-retirement training.

Dentists

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations the Welsh Office had with (a) the British Dental Association and (b) dentist representative bodies in Wales, before instigating the Welsh Office initiative to attract more dentists to those areas in Wales where NHS dental capacity is currently inadequate; and if he will make a statement. [9339]

Mr. Hague: During the course of consultations on the Government's Green Paper, "Improving NHS Dentistry", Welsh Office officials met the British Dental Association, the General Dental Services Committee and held meetings with each of the eight local dental committees in Wales to which all dentists were invited. An individual meeting was offered to any dentist who wished to express views privately. Over 40 per cent. of dentists in Wales were seen in this way.

Local Government

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what will be the effect of the change in the estimated level of Government financial support for 1996–97, on (a) local government expenditure and (b) local government taxation. [8890]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend's provisional 1996–97 settlement proposals announced on 28 November provide for central Government support for local authority spending—through aggregate external finance—to rise by 2.1 per cent. to £2,517.4 million. This level of support represents 87.8 per cent. of total standard spending, compared with 88.6 per cent. in 1995–96.

Actual council tax levels depend also on local authorities' own budgetary decisions.

Butterflies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new proposals he has to strengthen and enlarge the work of butterfly conservation through nature reserves and butterfly and moth conservation areas. [9294]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The statutory countryside agencies, including the Countryside Council for Wales, are jointly funding with the World Wide Fund for Nature a three-year project "Action for Butterflies". It is intended to produce action plans for the conservation of 25 species of butterfly. In addition, two sites containing the Marsh Fritillary—Rhos Llawr Cwrt and Gower Commons—have been submitted to the European Commission as candidate special areas of conservation under the habitats directive. The Countryside Council for Wales continues to support the establishment of local nature reserves, many of which contain significant butterfly and moth populations.

Nursery Education

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his most recent calculation of the proportion of Welsh families that have state nursery education available to them in each education authority for children aged (a) three to four years and (b) four to five years. [9352]

Mr. Richards: No calculations have been made on the basis of families. The following table shows the number of children at maintained nursery and primary schools at January 1995, with estimated ages at 31 December 1994, expressed as a percentage of the Registrar General's mid-1994 population estimates for three and four-year-olds.

Percentage of children at maintained nursery and primary schools, by LEA and by age

	Age
LEA	3 years	4 years
Clwyd	63.4	98.5
Dyfed	43.4	86.7
Gwent	50.3	93.6
Gwynedd	23.2	75.2
Mid Glamorgan	52.9	91.9
Powys	26.8	87.1
South Glamorgan	38.2	80.4
West Glamorgan	72.7	99.2
Wales	49.7	90.2

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9770]

Mr. Hague: Welsh Office has no live contracts for the provision of mobile phones. Airtime contracts are presently held with:

	Number of phones
Astec Communications	13
BT	8
Cellular Communications Corporation	1
Martin Dawes Communications	3
Mercury Communications	1
Mobile Telecomms	6
Peoples Phone	100
Talkland International	4
Uniqueair	5
VHL Communications	1
VODACOMM	16

Airtime contracts for existing mobile phones are initially for 12 months from purchase date and following that period are reviewed competitively and let to ensure value for money.

Contract values are dependent on mobile phone usage.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9771]

Mr. Hague: My Department's standard competitive tendering procedures are used for the purchase of mobile telephones and car phones. Companies invited to tender for the supply of mobile phones include Peoples Phone, Talkland, Martin Dawes, Uplands Communications, Avenguard Communications, Astec Communications and VHL.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9772]

Mr. Hague: In the last three years we have paid £264 in penalties for terminating contracts early. The companies involved were Peoples Phone, Vodacom and Uniqueair.

Cardiff Bay (Birds)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce his plans for bird compensation measures for the loss of the Cardiff site of special scientific interest; and when he expects these to be completed. [10410]

Mr. Hague: I am pleased to announce my plans to proceed immediately with bird reserve compensation measures at Uskmouth and Goldcliff and the area in between on the Gwent levels. These new proposals have been developed with the assistance of the Countryside Council for Wales, from the conclusions reached by the Cardiff Bay development corporation steering group report on alternative mitigation measures—October 1995—and discussed with the European Commission. I have placed a copy of the steering group report in the Library of the House.

I have asked the Cardiff Bay development corporation to set up immediately a project implementation steering group to oversee the establishment of the new integral reserve of over 375 hectares, with the firm objective of completion before the start of impoundment of the waters in Cardiff bay. The longer term objective is for the reserve to be developed so that it qualifies for special protection area status. The first task of the group will be to provide clear proposals for the management of the site and by the end of May, specific targets for the birds to be attracted to it. The Land Authority for Wales, working on behalf of CBDC, has already secured from National Power 164 hectares of the land required and lodged a planning application for engineering works for the whole of the reserve site.

Animal Feedstuffs

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines the agricultural section of his Department gives to farmers and other workers in Wales with regard to the need to use gloves when handling animal feedstuffs; and if he will make a statement. [8693]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive has not issued specific guidelines concerning the use of gloves by farmers and other workers when handling animal feedstuffs. However, suppliers of animal feedstuffs have a duty to provide information regarding precautionary measures if the feedstuffs present a health hazard to people.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Engagements

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list her engagements for Monday 18 December and for Tuesday 19 December 1995. [8608]

Mrs. Bottomley [holding answer 16 January 1996]: In addition to my parliamentary duties, I had a series of meetings with ministerial colleagues, officials and others.

Military Knights

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will identify each of the military knights of Windsor who occupy accommodation on the occupied royal palaces estate; and what is the total amount received in rents and other charges from the occupiers. [8906]

Mr. Sproat: There are 13 military knights in residence at Windsor castle. All the military knights are distinguished ex-service men.

The military knights, who receive no payment for performing their ceremonial duties, live rent free but are responsible for internal repairs and decorations. They have paid a total of £1,287 in charges for water from the Windsor castle waterworks for the financial year 1995–96. They are billed for other utilities by the suppliers and they pay council tax.

Royal Residences

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what resources have been provided from public funds for the maintenance of each of the royal residences in each year from 1992–93. [8912]

Mr. Sproat: The cost to my Department for the maintenance of each of the royal residences, since 1992–93, is as follows:

£ Million

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Buckingham Palace	1.103	1.326	2.380
Buckingham Palace Mews and Gardens	1.760	0.613	0.624
Kensington Palace	0.483	0.985	1.145
St. James's Palace	1.106	0.974	2.172
Clarence House and Marlborough House Mews	0.468	0.271	0.241
Hampton Court Mews and Paddocks	0.067	0.061	0.155
Windsor Castle	8.518	5.380	2.077
Windsor Castle Mews	0.198	0.137	0.372
Windsor Castle Homes and Great Park	0.463	0.361	0.483

The figures for Windsor Castle exclude fire restoration costs.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Turkeys

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to ensure that turkeys are reared and slaughtered humanely. [8721]

Mrs. Browning: Legislation is already in place to ensure that the welfare of turkeys is protected. We are currently considering the recommendations in the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on turkeys which was published last year. We shall also participate actively in future discussions on the proposed Council of Europe recommendations on the welfare on turkeys.

Hedgerows

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many miles of hedgerows have been reinstated in the last four years; how many miles of hedgerows have been removed in each region; and at what cost in subsidy to public funds. [9606]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

Financial support for hedgerow restoration and planting is mainly provided through the Countryside Commission's countryside stewardship scheme, which incorporates the hedgerow incentive scheme, and MAFF's farm and conservation grant scheme.

The information requested in relation to countryside stewardship is set out in the table:

Agreement year (1 October–30 September)	Length of hedgerow planted/reinstated (approximately)	Expenditure (approximately) £
1992–93	142 miles (229 km)	410,169
1993–94	279 miles (449 km)	802,350
1994–95	487 miles (784 km)	1,522,087
1995–96	468 miles (754 km)	1,354,818

Comparable information in respect of the Farm and Conservation Grant Scheme is as follows:

Financial year	Length of hedgerow planted/reinstated approximately	Expenditure approximately £
1991–92	450 miles (735 km)	1,469,744
1992–93	570 miles (920 km)	1,839,446
1993–94	710 miles (1,146 km)	2,292,570
1994–95	530 miles (855 km)	1,709,479

Neither scheme provides assistance towards hedgerow removal.

Fish Stocks

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to commission studies into the artificial development of fish stocks by use of (a) discarded gas and oil structures, (b) protected closed areas and (c) other means and if he will make a statement. [8370]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 January 1996]: I see no justification for commissioning further studies of enhancement of marine fish stocks because work done so far, both in the United Kingdom and world-wide, suggests that such measures are rarely effective. On the specific suggestions made by the hon. Member.

(a) the development of artificial reefs has been shown to be feasible. However it has not been demonstrated that the use of artificial reefs necessarily leads to increases in stocks; it rather may lead to the aggregation of existing resources into a smaller, well defined area and make the fish easier to catch;

(b) I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 457.

(c) there have been various attempts around the world at enhancing marine fish stocks through the release of juveniles but these have so far been largely unsuccessful. A particular problem is that reared fish have generally exhibited high mortality rates once released. The expert view is that overall, artificial additions to fish stocks can at best make only a small contribution to total stocks; and unless great care is taken with preparation and release, the reared fish may provide no more than expensive food for other species.

Equidae

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many organisations have been recognised in Britain to register equidae within the meaning of directive 90/426/EEC; [9349]

(2) if he will name the organisations in Britain which have been recognised to register equidae within the meaning of directive 90/426/EEC; and if he will make a statement about the welfare implications for equidae of such registration. [9350]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 January 1996]: Under EC Council directive 90/426, "registered equidae" means any equidae registered with those organisations or associations maintaining studbooks which have been formally recognised under the terms of EC Council directive 90/427. Recognition is voluntary. Thirty seven organisations have so far been recognised in the United Kingdom as follows:

The National Pony Society
British Miniature Horse Society
National Light Horse Breeding Society
Anglo-European Studbook Ltd.
British Warm-Blood Society
British Sports Horse Registry
Arab Horse Society
Weatherbys
British Horse Foundation
Shire Horse Society
Suffolk Horse Society
The British Andalusian Horse Society
Falabella Horse Breeders Association
Caspian Pony Society
Dales Pony Society
Hackney Horse Society
Exmoor Pony Society
Lusitano Breed Society of Great Britain
British Skewbald and Piebald Association
New Forest Pony Breeding and Cattle Society
British Appaloosa Society
The Spotted Horse and Pony Register
English Connemara Pony Society
The Dartmoor Pony Society
Irish Draught Horse Society
British Hanoverian Horse Society
International Miniature Pony Society
Welsh Pony and Cob Society
Donkey Breed Society
British Palomino Society
Fjord Horse Society of Great Britain
British Lipizzaner Horse Society
Shetland Pony Society
British Quarter Horse Association
Trakehner Breeders Fraternity
Eriskay Pony Society
Highland Pony Society.

The welfare implications for registered equidae are being considered. We will be discussing this with interested parties as part of our continuing consultations on the implementation of Council Directive 95/29/EC.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Minimum Wage

11. Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the non-European countries which have minimum wage legislation. [7895]

Mr. Lang: The Government do not collect details of those countries throughout the world which have minimum wage legislation. However, the majority of research clearly shows that statutory minimum wages destroy jobs.

Citizens Advice Bureaux

20. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux on changes in the level of its services as a result of the budget he has allocated to it. [7908]

Mr. John M. Taylor: We have regular discussions with the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux about its funding and performance. I can announce today that the grant-in-aid available to the association for 1996–97 will be increased by £600,000 to a total of £12,516,000.

SWALEC (Takeover)

21. Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received on the takeover of SWALEC by Dwr Cymru plc. [7909]

Mr. John M. Taylor: One representation has been received by my Department.

Landfill Tax

22. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the impact of the landfill tax on the future of the coal industry. [7910]

Mr. Page: None, but I am aware that representations are being made by the industry. These will, of course, be taken fully into account before decisions are made on relevant aspects of the implementation of the tax.

Nuclear Waste

23. Mr. Purchase: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much of the current liability for processing nuclear waste it is proposed that the British Energy Company will meet. [7911]

Mr. Eggar: The final decisions on the precise split of assets and liabilities between the company remaining in the public sector—Nuclear Electric plc, to be renamed Magnox Electric plc—and the two companies to be privatised—Scottish Nuclear Ltd. and Nuclear Electric Ltd., as subsidies of British Energy plc—have not yet been taken.

We have established the basic principle that assets will be followed by the associated liabilities.

Businesses, Suffolk

25. Mr. Spring: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support is being given by his Department to businesses in Suffolk. [7913]

Mr. Page: My Department is supporting Business Link Suffolk and Business Link Norfolk and Waveney. Both business links opened recently and are now providing high quality services to local companies.

Central South Coast Region

26. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received in support of a new central south coast region. [7914]

Mr. Eggar: I have not received any recent representations on this issue.

Industrial Investment Levels

27. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on investment levels in United Kingdom industry (a) from 1974 to 1979 and (b) since 1979. [7915]

Mr. Eggar: Between 1974 and 1979, total investment grew on average by 0.75 per cent. in real terms each year. Since 1979, it has grown by 1.75 per cent. on average in real terms each year.

Competitiveness

28. Mr. McFall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures were proposed by Her Majesty's Government at the Madrid summit to improve the competitiveness of manufacturing and service industries in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other member states. [7916]

Mr. Lang: The Madrid European Council discussed competitiveness on the basis of a report produced by the European Commission's competitiveness advisory group under the chairmanship of Dr. Ciampi. The United Kingdom endorsed, in particular, the emphasis which the report placed on: the need to ensure the effective implementation of the single market, including the introduction of competition into the utilities sector, the need to give effective support to small and medium enterprises, especially through the removal of regulatory obstacles, and the importance of Europe competing effectively with the United States and Asia. The United Kingdom also reiterated its commitment to making progress with trans-European networks.

Competitiveness (Environmental Appraisal)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" was modified by the results of any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [8668]

(2) if "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; and if he will publish the appraisal; [8666]

(3) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead"; [8669]

(4) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" were considered in any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [8667]

Mr. Page: The 1994 White Paper "Competitiveness: Helping Business to Win" was the first comprehensive audit of the UK's competitive position. The 1995 White Paper "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" updated the analysis, and it will be reviewed and developed further in the competitiveness White Paper due to be published later this year.

The White Papers have analysed the main factors influencing competitiveness. They identified the primary responsibility of companies themselves to improve their competitive performance. They also outlined policies and initiatives across the whole of Government to help create the right framework and conditions to foster that improvement.

Against this background, the White Papers considered the relationship between environmental issues and competitiveness. The 1995 White Paper sets out the implications for business of the Government's commitment to sustainable development. It addresses the way that tax and regulatory policies are used to achieve environmental objectives and identifies the challenges and opportunities for business managers. There was no specific, separate written environmental appraisal of the White Papers themselves. It is a matter for each Government Department and individual company to consider and monitor the environmental implications of their activities in the normal way—including, where appropriate, the need for a written environmental appraisal.

Responsibility for managing the competitiveness agenda within the Government now lies with my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, and the Office of Public Service in the Cabinet Office.

Business Links

29. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the introduction of business links. [7917]

Mr. Lang: Business links are making excellent progress in raising the quality of business support services and simplifying access to them. For the first time, businesses have a simple route to top quality public and price sector support—support delivered by local business for local business and tailored to the customer's individual needs. Across the country, thousands of companies, especially small firms with the desire and potential to grow, are experiencing the tangible benefits which business link offers—a single point of access to a complete range of support, including help with exports, innovation and technology, access to finance, sources of supply and so on.

The national business link network is nearing completion. With 176 outlets now operational, close to 80 per cent. of VAT registered firms in England can now benefit from the services of their local business link. Complete coverage is expected by April.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of his Department's internal audit report into business links. [7902]

Mr. Page: This was a valuable report which has helped my Department to improve its management of the business link project. On 6 October 1995, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and Industry wrote to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn) as the then Chairman of the Trade and Industry Committee, providing a memorandum which included details of progress and covering key issues identified by the report. I have asked my officials to seek the agreement of the Committee to placing the memorandum in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Electric

30. Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when it is expected that Nuclear Electric will be able to meet the full cost of its liabilities. [7919]

Mr. Eggar: The major part of Nuclear Electric's liabilities are in respect of long-term provisions for nuclear fuel reprocessing, waste management and decommissioning costs, a substantial part of which will not fall due for payment for a considerable number of years. After the privatisation of British Energy, the Government will ensure that Magnox Electric has sufficient assets to meet its liabilities as they fall due.

Research and Development

31. Mr. Clelland: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people are employed in civil research and development in (a) 1979 and (b) the current year. [7920]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The information is not available for the years requested; 1993 is the latest year for which information is available and only total research and development figures were collected before 1990.

The total number of full-time equivalent persons engaged in research and development in the UK in 1978, 1990 and 1993, and the civil component for the latter two years were as follows:

	Total	Civil
1978	262,000	—
1990	280,000	231,000
1993	279,000	245,000

Communications Industry

32. Mr. Pope: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps his Department is taking to promote the competitiveness of United Kingdom manufacturers and suppliers of communications networks and services. [7921]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department promotes the competitiveness of the communications industry through a series of initiatives, many in close co-operation with trade associations. These initiatives tackle a number of issues such as skill shortages, quality, and the use of new applications of technology to enhance productivity. In addition, we continue to pursue a licensing policy for telecommunications operators which has created one of the most competitive telecom services markets in the world. This has brought benefits both to consumers and to the industry itself since many UK companies which have proved themselves to be competitive here are now taking advantage of opportunities in expanding overseas markets.

Eurofighter

33. Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the aerospace industry in relation to the United kingdom share of work in the Eurofighter project. [7922]

Mr. Eggar: My Department is staying in close touch with industry and, with the MOD, it is seeking to ensure a fair and realistic distribution of work in the Eurofighter project. My Department is also seeking to help secure the best conditions for UK industry's participation in Eurofighter through its own contacts with Governments and industry at home and abroad.

Small Business

34. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about his plans to promote small businesses. [7923]

Mr. Page: The Government are taking a number of measures to promote the interests of small businesses. These include:

- the establishment of the business link network which will offer advice and help to small and medium companies. By April 1996, every company in England will have access to a business link outlet and the range of services they offer;
- the creation of the small business Ministers forum to ensure that the issues and concerns of small businesses are addressed across Whitehall Departments.
- the current programme of "Your Business Matters" conferences being organised by the small firms' representative organisations is enabling small businesses themselves to have a direct say in the development of future Government policy for the sector. The outcomes of the conferences will be considered in this year's competitiveness White Paper.

Electricity Generation

5. Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of Britain's electricity is currently generated by power stations using (a) coal, (b) gas and (c) oil. [7889]

Mr. Eggar: In 1995, 50 per cent. of electricity in the United Kingdom was generated from coal, 15 per cent. from gas, and 5 per cent. from oil.

Private Finance Initiative

24. Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the impact of the private finance initiative on industrial performance. [7912]

Mr. Lang: Although the private finance initiative is expected to have a beneficial effect on the economy by improving the efficiency and effectiveness of public sector procurement, no assessment has been made of its impact on industrial performance.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects the results of the Scott inquiry to be published. [8539]

Mr. Lang: I expect the report to be published within the next few weeks.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost of public funds of each agreement; [9728]

(2) what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts; [9729]

(3) what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9730]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Mobile and car phones are purchased locally in accordance with established Government procurement procedures. Although records of the contracts are not held centrally, it is estimated that, excluding next steps agencies, there are currently in the region of 800 mobile phones in use in my Department. These will have come from a variety of suppliers.

Similarly, there are no central records of costs incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided.

Japanese Investment

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Japanese companies have invested for the first time in the United Kingdom during the period April 1992 to the present; and what were the equivalent figures between (a) 1979 and 1983, (b) 1983 and 1987 and (c) 1987 and 1992. [7900]

Mr. Oppenheim: There are around 228 Japanese manufacturing investments in the UK. From April 1992 to the present, 32 Japanese manufacturing companies invested in the UK for the first time. The equivalent figures in the financial years 1979 to 1983, 1983 to 1987 and 1987 to 1992 were 12, 27 and 114 respectively. The UK has succeeded in attracting around 40 per cent. of all Japanese manufacturing investment into the European Union.

Sales and Auctions

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with local authority organisations about the establishment of a system of advance notification and appropriate trader identification and record keeping for one-day sales or mock auctions. [9727]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My officials have periodically discussed the issues raised by particular one-day sales with trading standards officers. My officials will shortly meet the local authorities co-ordinating body on food and trading standards and other representatives of the trading standards service to review the situation. Mock auctions were made illegal by the Mock Auctions Act 1961.

Training and Enterprise Council

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each TEC (a) what grants it currently makes available for people starting up businesses, (b) how long those grants last, (c) what is the monetary value of the grants, (d) what restrictions are placed on applying for the grant and (e) if the grant applies across the TEC geographical areas. [9194]

Mr. Page: The information requested is not held centrally for each TEC and could be obtained from them individually only at disproportionate cost.

Research Vessel Services Ltd.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations he has have with the chairman of the Natural Environment Research Council in relation to the impact of moving Research Vessel Services Ltd., from Barry to Southampton on the costs of oceanographic research. [8733]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 15 January 1996]: None. The cost in 1996 of operating the research vessel services from Southampton is expected to be less in real terms than the cost of operation from Barry in 1995.

The transfer to Southampton is an important element in the creation of a world-class centre in deep sea oceanography.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arms-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9234]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Department of Social Security is primarily responsible for the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, and I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply from my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People, 15 January 1996, Official Report, columns 417–18.

I will ensure that my Department and any bodies for which it is responsible are reminded of their responsibilities under the Act.

Supermarkets

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has had on (a) profit margins of supermarkets and (b) references to the Office of Fair Trading of pricing policies by the supermarkets; and what studies his officials have made of these matters. [9463]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have received several representations concerning the profit margins and pricing policies of supermarkets, notably concerning bread, greengrocery products and turkeys.

The Office of Fair Trading keeps supermarket behaviour under review and has undertaken several inquiries into the pricing policies of large supermarkets, most recently in 1992. The director general has not concluded that action under the competition legislation was appropriate.

Part-time Workers

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what initiatives have been taken, and at what cost, to publicise the changes in qualifying periods for employment rights for part-time workers to (a) employees and (b) employers. [9600]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Employment announced in response to a written parliamentary question on 20 December 1994, Official Report, columns 1100–01 that regulations removing qualifying hours of work thresholds for employment rights would shortly be introduced. On the same day, the former Employment Department issued a detailed press notice about these changes which were widely reported in the press and professional journals. The changes were also covered in the February 1995 issue of the "Employment Gazette". The costs of these publicity items cannot be isolated from normal Departmental running costs.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will estimate the number of people (a) killed and (b) injured as a result of carbon monoxide poisoning in (i) 1993, (ii) 1994, and (iii) 1995. [9618]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 16 January 1996]: The annual totals of people in Great Britain accidentally killed by carbon monoxide from flammable gas, as recorded by the Health and Safety Executive, are:

Year	Number of fatalities [1]
1993	31
1994	[2]30
1995	n/a

[1] The totals do not include fatalities from carbon monoxide generated by solid fuel and oil. These figures are not yet available from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.
[2] Provisional.
n/a = no figures yet available.

The estimated annual number of people injured in the United Kingdom as a result of accidental carbon monoxide poisoning are as follows:

	Heating–appliance related	Not heating–appliance related	Total[1]
1993	105	42	147
1994	211	273	485
1995	n/a	n/a	n/a

[1] Estimates from the DTI Home Accident Surveillance System, which excludes accidents in the work place.
n/a = no estimates yet available.

Nuclear Power (Environmental Appraisal)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how "Prospects for Nuclear Power in the UK" (Cm 2860) was modified by the results of any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [8656]

(2) if "Prospects for Nuclear Power in the UK" (Cm 2860) has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by the Department of the Environment; and if he will publish the appraisal; [8654]

(3) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "Prospects for Nuclear Power in the UK" (Cm 2860); [8657]

(4) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in "Prospects for Nuclear Power in the UK" (Cm 2860) were considered in any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [8655]

Mr. Page: The environmental implications of the Government's proposals were addressed as part of the nuclear review and details of the conclusions reached were published in the White Paper.

SCOTLAND

World Heritage Site (Cairngorms)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to submit the application for the Cairngorms to be designated a world heritage site, and if he will make a statement. [8474]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has asked the Cairngorms Partnership Board to prepare the case for world heritage site listing for the Cairngorms in 1997, once the agreed management strategy for the area, on which so much rests, has been published in its final form towards the end of this year.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Williams Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mobile telephones have been contracted to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [9132]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Four mobile phones were hired from one supplier for periods up to one month in 1995. No phones were hired in the previous seven years.

Heart Transplants

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of heart transplants carried out in 1995. [8942]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of heart transplants carried out in Scottish NHS hospitals in 1995 was 32.

Severe Weather Conditions

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to make additional resources available to Scottish local authorities to tackle the damage caused by the recent severe weather conditions, [8940]

Mr. Kynoch: So far as the Bellwin scheme is concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Ayr (Mr. Gallie) on 10 January, Official Report, columns 235–38.

The Bellwin scheme does not relate to capital expenditure, but I recognise that local authorities may have to incur additional capital expenditure as a result of the recent severe weather. Any representations from authorities facing serious difficulties in this regard will be sympathetically considered in the light of available resources.

Central European Time

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish the preliminary conclusions of his analysis of the introduction of central European time on road accident casualties in Scotland; if he will immediately publish the methodology on which this analysis has been based; and what consultations his officials have had with the Transport Research Laboratory in the course of this study. [9454]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Scottish Office statisticians have published a report outlining the methodology used in their analysis of the likely effect on road accident casualties in Scotland following the introduction of central European time. Their interim conclusions are that such a change would be broadly neutral in terms of total road accident casualties in Scotland. Copies of the report are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses. My statisticians have met statisticians from the Transport Research Laboratory and the Department of Transport, most recently on 20 December 1995, to discuss the methodologies used for estimating casualty savings from adopting central European time.

I have arranged for this information to be made available to the Department of Transport and the Transport Research Laboratory.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arms-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement; [9235]

(2) what guidance he intends to issue to local authorities about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement; [9244]

(3) what guidance he intends to issue to health authorities and trusts about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9240]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People on 15 January, Official Report, column 417.

I will ensure that officials in the Scottish Office and all bodies for which it is responsible are made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Scottish Defence Initiative

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made on the Scottish defence initiative; and what proposals he has to extend it. [9406]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 16 January 1996]: The Scottish defence initiative was introduced by Scottish Enterprise as a response to expected reductions in defence expenditure. Progress on the initiative is consequently a matter for that organisation. I have asked the chairman of Scottish Enterprise to write to the hon. Member.

Business Purchases (Imports)

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of Scottish business purchases were imported from (a) elsewhere in the United Kingdom and (b) other countries; and if he will provide a breakdown by sector. [9567]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 16 January 1996]: The only data source which provides information on Scottish imports by industry is the Scottish input-output tables for 1989. A copy of this publication will shortly be placed in the House of Commons Library. A summary of the imports data contained in these tables is set out in the table:

	Purchases
Industry	Percentage rest of UK	Percentage rest of world
Agriculture	17.6	11.7
Forestry	10.6	2.5

Local Government Finance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the effect of the change in the estimated level of Government financial support for 1996–97, on (a) local government expenditure and (b) local government taxation. [8889]

Mr. Kynoch: This information is not yet available and will depend on decisions still to be taken by individual local authorities regarding their 1996–97 budgets and council tax levels.

Oil Pollution

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the final figures for recovered losses of birds and mammals arising from oil pollution in the Shetland Isles as a result of the MV Braer incident. [8903]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is contained in the report of the ecological steering group "The Environmental Impact of the Wreck of the Braer" (The Scottish Office, 1994), a copy of which is in the Library.

Butterflies and Moths

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what new proposals he has to strengthen and enlarge the work of butterfly conservation through nature reserves and butterfly and moth conservation areas. [9301]

Mr. Kynoch: Following publication of the UK biodiversity action plan steering group report last December, my right hon. Friend is currently considering proposals to enhance the conservation of butterfly and moth species occurring in Scotland. Requirements for habitat creation and specific conservation areas will be taken forward in the context of the Government's commitment to the UN convention on biological diversity.

Cairngorms

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spent on commissioning the report of the working party on the future of the Cairngorms; and how long it took to produce its report. [9569]

Mr. Kynoch: Spending on the Cairngorms working party, including the cost of working party meetings, publication of a consultation paper by the working party in May 1992, all consultancy fees and the costs of producing the working party's final report and associated documents, totalled £127.650. The working party was set up in March 1991 and its report was published on 26 March 1993.

Irvine Development Corporation

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce the names of the landlords who will be allowed onto the ballots for the properties currently owned by Irvine development corporation. [9843]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1067.

Housing

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what sums Scottish Homes has spent since its establishment on the development of housing associations; and if he will list those associations which have received funding from Scottish Homes and the amounts paid to each of them; [9844]

(2) if he will list the result of each ballot undertaken by Scottish Homes as part of its programme of stock transfers; and if he will indicate for each ballot (i) the number of tenants voting (a) in favour of and (b) against the stock transfer, (ii) the total number of tenants eligible to vote in each ballot, (iii) the percentage of tenants voting in favour of transferring to another landlord and (iv) the name of the successful bidding organisation in each case. [9846]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is a matter for Scottish Homes. I have asked the chairman, Sir James Mellon, to write to the hon. Member with the relevant information.

Commercial Properties (Revaluations Appeals)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals were lodged against the recent revaluations of commercial properties by each regional and island council; what was the number and percentage of appeals which have been dealt with; how many and what percentage of appeals have been successful; and what is the average amount of time taken to deal with an appeal. [9845]

Mr. Kynoch: The following table gives a provisional count, by assessors, of the number of appeals lodged against the 1995 revaluation of rateable values of all non-domestic subjects throughout Scotland. The information was gathered as at 15 December 1995, the date by which such appeals must be lodged. No information is available on the number of appeals by type of subject.

It is too early in the process to gather meaningful information about the progress of appeals. Regular, quarterly, information on the number and progress of appeals will be gathered from the end of March 1996.

	Number of appeals[1] lodged against the 1995 revaluation
Scotland	103,049
Borders	1,938
Central	5,494
Dumfries and Galloway	3,025
Fife	6,196
Grampian	10,286
Highland	5,589
Lothian	13,328
Strathclyde	48,436
Tayside	7,978
Orkney	174
Shetland	285
Western Isles	320

Note:

[1] It is possible for both owner and tenant to appeal in relation to the same property. The analysis shows the total number of appeals. Assessors estimate that these appeals relate to just over 94,000 separate properties.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the circulars his Department had issued up until 1 January 1996 in respect of current local government reforms in Scotland. [9847]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 23 November 1995, Official Report, columns 68–70. Since then, the following seven circulars related to reorganisation of local government have been issued.

Local Government Finance

Finance Circular 24/1995: 1996–97 Capping Regime: Report specifying notional amounts.

Circular Letter: The Local Government (Application of Enactments) (No. 2) Order 1995.

Planning

SODD Circular No. 25/1995: Designation of Structure Plan Areas (Scotland) Order 1995.

Industry

SOEID Circular No. 14/1995: Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994—Economic Development Powers.

Social Work

SWSG 21/1995: Community Care Planning: Joint Planning Structures.

Police

Circular on Police Amalgamation Schemes.

Fire

Circular on Fire Administration Schemes.

Health Boards (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what safeguards exist to ensure that contracts for goods or services are awarded in a proper way by health boards or NHS trusts in Scotland when these contracts are not awarded by competitive tendering. [9848]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is a statutory requirement on all health boards and national health service trusts to undergo an end-year audit by external auditors to ensure that the trust's standing financial instructions, and any other financial instructions determined by the management executive of the national health service in Scotland, have been complied with.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland at what level (a) local authorities and (b) health boards and NHS trusts in Scotland are obliged to enter into a competitive tendering exercise before agreeing a contract for goods or services. [9849]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Local authorities make their own standing orders covering financial probity in the handling of contracts and other matters. They are required to submit certain services to compulsory competitive tendering. As a result of local government reform, most of the compulsory competitive tendering requirements have been temporarily suspended, with the exception of construction contracts over £500,000.

Health boards and NHS trusts are required to include in their standing financial instructions detailed procedures on the procurement of goods, services and works by competitive tendering or other means. These instructions include the setting of locally agreed thresholds above which quotations or formal tenders must be obtained.

Local authorities and health boards and NHS trusts must also have regard to EC procurement directives, including the thresholds for the advertising of contracts.

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was (a) the number of intensive care beds within each health board area, (b) the number of people living within each board area and (c) the ratio of patients to intensive care beds in each financial year since 1979–80; [9841]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to increase the number of intensive care beds available in Scotland and the effectiveness of the intensive care system with particular reference to rural areas. [9842]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The tables show the number of intensive care beds by health board area of treatment, the estimated population resident in each health board area and the average number of patients discharged per available staffed beds by health board area of treatment.

It is for individual health boards and NHS trusts to ensure an appropriate level of intensive care bed provision to meet the needs of their population. The clinical resource and audit group and the Scottish management efficiency group produced a report in 1991 which made a number of recommendations relating to the effectiveness of adult intensive care such as the staffing of intensive care units and the piloting of guidelines for admission and discharge. A survey of intensive care facilities in all Scottish health board areas, which was carried out by the Scottish Office in August 1995, showed that health boards keep the need for intensive care services in their areas under review. I have asked general managers of health boards to continue to monitor the provision and use of intensive care facilities.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Roads (Newtownards)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's assessment of the bank at 114 Crawfordsburn road, Newtownards. [8526]

Mr. Moss: The bank in question reduces the sightlines for vehicles emerging from the private lane serving the property in question.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to level the bank at 114 Crawfordsburn road, Newtownards. [8499]

Mr. Moss: The Department does not own the bank in question and has no proposals to level it.

Multiple Occupancy Property

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will introduce legislation to require the owners or agents responsible for letting a house or property for multiple occupancy to register the property with the local authority and obtain approval for multiple occupancy or group tenancy before letting out the property; [8468]

(2) if he will introduce legislation to require that all existing properties leased for multiple occupancy or group tenancy provide adequate safeguards to ensure the safety of occupants as deemed necessary by an expert on fire risk. [8469]

Mr. Moss: The housing policy review consultative document "Building on Success", a copy of which is in the Library, confirms that consideration is being given as to how best to bring about improvement in the safety and quality of houses in multiple occupancy in Northern Ireland. When the consultation process is complete, final decisions will then be taken on further legislative provision in this sector.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken by the Department of the Environment to ensure that adequate fire safety arrangements are now in place in accommodation offered by the private sector for group and multiple occupancy. [8470]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. Under the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1992, the Housing Executive has a responsibility to inspect standards of accommodation and fire safety in houses in multiple occupation. The chief executive of the Housing Executive has advised me that it maintains a register of HMOs. If on inspection a property does not meet appropriate standards, including adequate fire safety arrangements, the executive is empowered to require the landlord to ensure that (i) the number of persons occupying the premises is appropriate for the facilities (ii) the premises are made fit and (iii) have adequate fire safety arrangements. As required by legislation, the Northern Ireland Fire Authority is consulted about the adequacy of means of escape from fire. The Housing Executive is also the authority to close all or part of the premises if the conditions are not met.

Housing Benefit (Private Landlords)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the 10 private landlords who received most in terms of indirect payments of housing benefit last year and the amounts involved. [8498]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Butterflies and Moths

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what new proposals he has to strengthen and expand the work of moth and butterfly conservation through nature reserves and conservation areas. [9295]

Mr. Moss: Moth and butterfly conservation in Northern Ireland will continue to benefit from the ongoing programme of site protection through the declaration and management of areas of special scientific interest and nature reserves.

There are now 85 ASSIs covering 75,327 hectares. These already include many of Northern Ireland's most important butterfly and moth sites. The target date for the completion of the declaration of ASSIs throughout Northern Ireland is 2001. Several new nature reserves are also proposed, some of which will be important for moths and butterflies.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what will be the effect of the change in the estimated level of Government financial support for 1996–97 on (a) local government expenditure and (b) local government taxation. [8892]

Mr. Moss: The resources available for general Exchequer grant for 1996–97 are equal to the original provision for 1995–96: £40.226 million. However, in 1995–96 a special once-only allocation of £2 million was provided to district councils to help kick-start the promotion of local economic development.

Roads Programme

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans his Department has to review its roads programme when road projects have been cancelled; and if the criteria used in re-assessing individual road schemes have been adjusted in concert with those of the Department of Transport. [8497]

Mr. Moss: The roads programme is reviewed annually following the outcome of the public expenditure survey and adjustments are made to reflect the funds allocated. The criteria used to re-assess schemes are consistent with those used by the Department of Transport.

Housing (Heating and Insulation)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the policy of his Department and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in relation to utilising double glazing in new housing and the installation of oil-fired central heating in both new and existing houses. [8496]

Mr. Moss: Energy conservation and the efficient use of energy resources are a Government priority. Since 1 April 1995 it has been the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's policy, approved by the Department, to install double glazing in all its new housing.

The installation of oil-fired central heating for the executive's existing houses is currently under review. However, with effect from 1 April 1996, its policy, approved by the Department, is to include oil heating as a option for all new-built houses.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5981]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Schools (Parental Choice)

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the role of parental choice in determining the school that a child can attend. [9464]

Mrs. Gillan: Parents have the right to express a preference for the school that they wish their child to attend. In most cases, that preference must be met if places are available. As a result of the Government's reforms, parents now have more rights, much better information, and access to many more kinds of schools.

Pupil Selection

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools applied for the right to select up to 10 per cent. of their pupils following the guidelines in her Department's circular 6/93; and what are the criteria under which the right to select was sought. [8969]

Mrs. Gillan: Local education authority-maintained schools do not have to seek the Secretary of State's approval to introduce such arrangements.

Some 43 grant-maintained schools have secured the Secretary of State's agreement to select up to 10 per cent. of their pupils on the basis of aptitude or ability in a particular subject or combination of subjects. Of these, 23 wished to select by reference to aptitude or ability in music alone, 17 by music and one or more other subjects, and three by technology.

Nottingham Schools (Funding)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the capital funding allocations to grant-maintained schools and the CTC in Nottingham for 1996–97. [9404]

Mrs. Gillan: Decisions on city technology colleges' capital allocations for 1996–97 have not yet been taken. Capital allocations to individual grant-maintained schools are a matter for the Funding Agency for Schools. I have asked the chairman of the agency to write to the hon. Member.

Sports (Disabled People)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on her Department's policy in relation to the development of sports for disabled people. [9216]

Mr. Robin Squire: The revised national curriculum for physical education provides teachers with sufficient flexibility to respond to the needs of all pupils, including those with special educational needs. It was drafted so that specific interpretation or modification is required for as few pupils with special educational needs as possible. The revised curriculum also enables teaching material to be selected from an earlier or later key stage where a teacher considers it necessary to enable pupils to progress and demonstrate achievement.

The sport policy statement, "Raising the Game", which was launched in July last year, sets out the Government's proposals for rebuilding the strength of British sport. That statement applies equally to all schools and the Government intend that the measures and recommendations set out in it will be interpreted or adapted for all sportsmen and sportswomen, regardless of their individual circumstances.

Nursery Education

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will give the Government's estimate of the extra administrative cost to Ealing council and each of the relevant schools within the borough boundary of administering the proposed nursery voucher scheme. [9384]

Mr. Robin Squire: An agency will administer the issue and redemption of nursery education vouchers. We are working with the voucher agency in phase one to ensure that the burdens on schools and local authorities are kept to a minimum.

Bluecoat School, Liverpool

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she received an application from the Bluecoat school, Liverpool about exchanges in admissions criteria; what length of time it usually takes to determine such applications; when she expects to make a decision; and if she will make a statement. [9674]

Mrs. Gillan: The governors' proposals to change the admission criteria for the Bluecoat school, Liverpool, were published on 28 January 1995. We normally aim to take decisions on all statutory proposals within five months of their publication, though in some cases a longer period is needed if full consideration is to be given to all relevant facts. My right hon. Friend will announce a decision on these proposals as soon as possible.

GEST

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the national allocations under the grants for education support and training programme for 1996–97. [9563]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table sets out the national allocations under the grants for education support and training programme for 1996–97. Fuller details were set out in the Department's press notice dated 5 January, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Grants for education support and training (GEST) 1996–97 programme

Helplines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list all the helplines, or schemes which include a helpline service, for which her Department provides any funding, stating which are (a) independent organisations, (b) run by her Department or agencies of her Department or (c) of another classification; how many calls each received in each of the last five years; and how much money each received from her Department in each of the last five years. [9799]

Mr. Robin Squire: Until the merger of July 1995, the Education and the Employment Departments operated independently, and will continue to do so for publicity purposes until the end of this financial year.

Records are not held centrally of helplines funded by the former Employment Department, including some set up in partnership with the former Department for Education.

Details of education helplines funded in the last five years are as follows:

Helplines run by the Department

Grant-maintained Schools

A six-week information helpline pilot in 1993, set up by the Department, received 2,500 calls at a cost of £25,000. The service was then provided by the Department's own staff, receiving a further 2,098 calls in 1993, 1,960 calls in 1994, and 1,540 in 1995. As servicing the helpline is part of many other duties, costs for operating this service following the pilot cannot be separated out.

Nursery Education

A nursery education helpline was set up by the Department in November 1995. To date, 5,000 calls have been received at an estimated cost of £16,000.

Helplines run by Agencies for the Department

The Teacher Training Agency set up a helpline for individuals wishing to go into teaching in August 1995. To date, around 7,980 calls and more than 3,530 letters have been received at a cost of £115,000.

The Funding Agency for Schools set up a helpline for schools in January 1996, in response to the recent survey of the condition of school buildings. Costs have yet to be finalised.

Literacy and Numeracy Centres

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will give a breakdown of the costs of the primary literacy and numeracy centres for 1996–97, indicating what amounts will be available for (a) capital and (b) running costs. [9564]

Mr. Robin Squire: The new grants for education, support and training programme specific grant will provide for £5 million of expenditure in 1996–97. The breakdown between capital and running costs will depend on the nature of successful bids from local education authorities.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what training each TEC makes available for small business start-ups; how many training places for start-ups are currently available; and what were the equivalent figures for each financial year since the TECs began. [9196]

Mr. Paice: The single regeneration budget allows training and enterprise councils and their local partners to provide training as part of an integrated programme of support for small business start-ups. In addition, TECs can use training for work budgets to help unemployed people who wish to become self-employed. The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what procedures were used by her Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to her Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9762]

Mr. Robin Squire: Contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones for the Department and for the Teachers' Pensions Agency are awarded through value for money comparisons—for low-value orders below £500—and competitive tender for higher value contracts.

The following companies have tendered:

BT

Vodac

Direct Mobile

Cellcom

Peoples Phone

4U Ltd.

Martin Dawes.

The Employment Service has had a framework agreement for the supply of mobile and car phones with Vodac for the past four years. Work is currently in hand to run a competition to put in place a single framework agreement which will be used by the Department and its executive agencies.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what agreements her Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9761]

Mr. Squire: The information sought is set out in the table, as far as it is readily available, in respect of centrally managed contracts.

Company	Number of phones	Agreement fixed charges £
BT	77	23,500
Vodac	52	14,200
Direct Mobile	1	300
Cellcom	9	3,000
Peoples Phone	29	15,000
4U Ltd.	5	1,700
Vodac—employment service framework agreement	1,129	297,474

1. Contracts for mobile and car phones are for a minimum of one years duration.

2. Details of call charges are not readily available and would involve disproportionate cost to provide.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what costs her Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9763]

Mr. Squire: The Department has no record of incurring costs as a result of withdrawing from mobile and car phone contracts, nor have either of its executive agencies—the Employment Service and the Teachers' Pensions Agency.

Homework Clubs

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received about the development of homework clubs; and if she will make a statement. [8091]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has received representations about out-of-school activities, including homework centres, from the Prince's Trust and from Education Extra. The Department contributed towards the cost of a conference on study support out-of-school hours organised by the Prince's Trust in November 1995, and is discussing possible further developments with the trust.

Disability Discrimination

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 147, when her Department or the then Department of Employment first became aware of the fact that 96 per cent. of employers would not be covered by the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; what plans she has to amend the Act to involve more employers; and what is her current estimate of unemployment amongst disabled people. [9726]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government first consulted on the possible introduction of a new statutory right of non-discrimination against disabled people in the document "A Consultation on Government measures to Tackle Discrimination Against Disabled People", published in July 1994. The document sought views on the exclusion of firms with fewer than 20 employees. In preparing that document, the Government were aware that about 95 per cent. of employers would not be covered by legislation if such small employers were excluded, but that about 80 per cent. of employees work for employers who would be within the legislation.

The Government have no immediate plans to amend the Disability Discrimination Act to bring more employers within its scope. However, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment is required under the Act to review section 7 of the Act—the small firms exemption—within five years of its coming into force, and to give Parliament the opportunity to debate the issue.

Estimates from the last labour force survey show that, in the summer of 1995, there were 330,000 unemployed people of working age in Great Britain who said they had a health problem or a disability expected to last for more than one year. The survey does not currently enable us to estimate the number of disabled people, as defined in the Disability Discrimination Act, who are unemployed.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Personal Pensions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many holders of personal pensions contribute (a) up to 5 per cent., (b) 5.1 to 10 per cent., (c) 10.1 to 15 per cent. and (d) more than 15 per cent. of their earnings; and, of each of the above categories, how many receive employer's contributions of (i) up to 5 per cent., (ii) 5.1 to 10 per cent., (iii) 10.1 to 15 per cent. and (iv) above 15 per cent. of earnings.

Mr. Heald: Provisional Inland Revenue estimates of the amounts of contributions to personal pensions for 1994–95, are £2,110 million of employees' contributions and £590 million of employers' contributions.

There are no statistically reliable sources of information on the proportion of earnings contributed to personal pensions.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to publish the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee on his proposals to restrict the entitlement of asylum seekers to benefit. [8979]

Mr. Roger Evans: The report of the Social Security Advisory Committee was laid before Parliament on Thursday 11 January and was published today in a Command Paper.

Pensioners (Benefits)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish for each year since 1979 (a) each means-tested benefit applicable to pensioners in that year, (b) the number of claimants of each benefit and (c) their figure as a percentage of the total number of pensioners. [9533]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the tables.

Notes:
1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand, percentages to one decimal place.
2. A pensioner has been defined as aged 60 and over.
3. Community Charge Benefit (CCB) replaced Rent Rebate in Scotland from April 1989 and the rest of Great Britain from April 1990. Figures for Community Charge Benefit in Scotland as at May 1989 are not available. Community Charge Benefit was replaced by Council Tax Benefit (CTB) from April 1993.
4. The total number of pensioners receiving Housing Benefit or Family Income Supplement is not available prior to 1989.
5. Income Support replaced Supplementary Benefit in April 1988.
6. Family Credit replaced Family Income Supplement in April 1988.
7. Sample Sizes: Income Support and Family Credit 5 per cent. Disability Working Allowance 100 per cent. count of all claims. Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit/Community Charge Benefit 1 per cent.
8. No figures are available for 1985 for Income Support due to industrial action.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9769]

Mr. Burt: None.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement; [9767]

(2) what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9768]

Mr. Burt: The Department does not currently have any agreements for the provision of mobile telephones. Each request for the supply of a mobile telephone is dealt with individually and following established public sector procurement procedures, the order is placed with the supplier that offers the most economically advantageous terms.

The information relating to the provision of mobile telephones that is readily available is shown in the table. Information for earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pensioners (Incomes)

Mr. Benton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost in 1996–97 of paying a basic pension supplement to all pensioner units whose total pension income from all sources is less than the level of income support to raise their pension incomes to the income support level; and what would be the annual cost of maintaining pensioners' pension incomes at that level in real terms for each year until 2001–02, assuming the 1996–97 income support regime and giving costs net of any effects on tax and benefit revenues. [6706]

Mr. Heald: The estimated cost in 1996–97 of raising the total pension income from all sources of all pensioner units to at least the level of income support is £2.15 billion. It is not possible to give estimates of this cost to the year 2001–02 as reliable forecasts of future levels of pensioners' incomes are not available for this period.

Notes:

1. It has been assumed that the pensioner supplement would be paid as an increase in income support levels. Maintaining the current income-related benefit system involves aligning the thresholds and income for assessment purposes in the other income-related benefits. As a result, there are increased costs in the housing benefit and council tax benefit included in the total.

2. To raise pension-only income to the levels specified implies that other income would be disregarded. The costs reflect this assumption also.

3. No account has been taken of any additional costs that would arise from the abolition of the existing capital limits in the income-related benefits which would be necessary to ensure that those above these limits also received any required increase in pension income.

4. As income support is not taxable for claimants over 60 years of age, there will be no net tax effects from the increased payments in income support.

5. The costs have been estimated using data drawn from the May 1994 Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry and the 1991, 1992 and 1993 Family Expenditure Surveys, uprated to 1996–97 prices and benefits levels and rounded to £50 million.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 623, how the throughput of incapacity benefit claims has been controlled; in what respects the cases processed so far are unrepresentative; what effect this is likely to have had on the proportion of successful claims; and when he expects to draw conclusions about the effectiveness of the benefit in meeting its objectives. [7926]

Mr. Burt: The rate at which pre-April invalidity benefit cases are being scheduled for the all work test is being carefully controlled to ensure that the total work available, including new claims, does not exceed operational capacity. This gradual introduction of pre-April claims into the system means that the greater proportion of cases being processed are new claims which is unrepresentative of the case load as a whole. As it is not possible to estimate accurately the effect that this might have on the proportion of successful claims, it would be unwise to draw any firm conclusions about the effectiveness of the new procedures during this transitional period.

Detailed arrangements for the monitoring and evaluation of the changes are in place. It is too early to predict when definitive conclusions might be drawn.

Housing and Council Tax Benefits

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of extending the proposal to give additional help with housing benefit and council tax benefit during the first four weeks of work for unemployed people returning to work, to include a continued entitlement to income support during that time. [8502]

Mr. Roger Evans: The cost of extending this proposal to include a continued entitlement to income support—and income-related jobseeker's allowance, where appropriate—on the same basis, is estimated to be £150 million in 1996–97 and £170 million in 1997–98. This does not include any behavioural effects such as more people returning to work.

Pensioners (Benefit Take-up)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total amount of income-related benefits, in constant prices, that has not been taken up by pensioners in each year since 1990; and what was the average amount of income-related benefits, in constant prices, not taken up per eligible pensioner in each year since 1990. [9050]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Table 1: Total amount of Housing Benefit and Income Support not taken up by pensioners

Constant 1993–94 prices	£10.05	£14.40	£13.45	£14.10

1. The constant price figures given above have been deflated using the GDP deflator.
2. The figures quoted below exclude full-time self-employed cases and those not living in private households.
3. Pensioner benefit units are defined as: a single person aged 60 years or over, or a couple one of whom is aged 60 years or over.
4. The most recent information is for 1993–94.
5. The figures in table 1 are presented as ranges within which it can be assumed that the true amount of benefit not taken up will lie.

Pensions (Uprating)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will base the calculation of the state retirement pension and public service pension on the formula of the higher of average (a) earnings or (b) prices; and if he will make a statement; [9106]

(2) to what extent the use of the data derived from the September retail prices index are now estimated by his Department to be pertinent in respect of the uprating of (a) state and (b) public service pensions following the Budget statement; what alternative arrangements he is considering; and if he will make a statement; [9109]

(3) if he will base the calculation of pension increases on the average earnings index; and if he will make a statement. [9105]

Mr. Heald: We have no plans to change the existing arrangements for the uprating of either state retirement pension or public service pensions.

Cold Weather Payments

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many eligible pensioners have not received cold weather payments due to not claiming pensioner or disability premiums with income support, in each year since the introduction of cold weather payments; and what is the total amount of money that would have been paid to such pensioners for cold weather payments, in constant prices, if they had claimed the income support pensioner or disability premiums for which they are entitled; [9048]

(2) what research his Department has carried out into the monthly death rates faced by pensioners not claiming pensioner or disability premiums with income support and cold weather payments despite being eligible; and what plans he has to investigate whether such pensioners face disproportionate death rates during the winter months. [9049]

Mr. Roger Evans: Pensioner and disability premiums are not a separate benefit, but form part of the calculation of income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit and are awarded automatically when the conditions are satisfied. Similarly, cold weather payments are awarded automatically when eligibility conditions are met.

Housing Benefit (Walthamstow)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of households in Walthamstow in receipt of housing benefit. [8980]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is not available in the format requested.

At 31 May 1995, there were 24,100[1] recipients of housing benefit in the London borough of Waltham Forest[2].

Notes:

[1] The number of recipients relates to benefit units which may be a single person or couple.

[2] Walthamstow is part of the London borough of Waltham Forest.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the benefits of privatising the Recruitment and Assessment Services, agency. [8328]

Mr. Willetts: Privatisation offers the best way to develop the potential of RAS. Freed from public sector constraints, it will be able to compete for business in wider markets, both public and private, offer new opportunities for investment and allow for the introduction of more flexible use of staff resources. Customer departments will benefit from the opportunities for improving performance that privatisation will bring. In reaching these conclusions, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster received advice from financial advisers and customer departments.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if his Department will retain ownership of the tests carried out by the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency if it is privatised; and if he will make a statement. [8436]

Mr. Willetts: The Government will retain ownership of the tests.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if all the functions of the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency are to be sold on its privatisation; and if he will make a statement. [8493]

Mr. Willetts: Yes. The services provided by the agency will transfer to the private sector.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what will be the length of the term of contract to the successful bidder of the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency if it is privatised; and if he will make a statement. [8434]

Mr. Willetts: This will be decided during the sale process in the light of customers' views and advice from financial and legal advisers.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what value he has set on the skill of Recruitment and Assessment Services agency staff for the purposes of privatisation; and if he will make a statement. [8475]

Mr. Willetts: The skills of RAS staff are vital to its business. The valuation placed on the business will recognise this.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the staff of the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency were consulted in advance prior to the announcement of its privatisation; and if he will make a statement. [8435]

Mr. Willetts: No. The decision to privatise the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency reflected the view reached by Ministers that privatisation was the best way to secure the long-term interests of the staff and customers, as well as those of the taxpayer.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what factors led him to set the time scale for privatising the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency; and if he will make a statement. [8527]

Mr. Willetts: To keep the period of uncertainty for RAS staff and customers to a minimum.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what public consultation process has been arranged in respect of privatising the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency; and if he will make a statement; [8327]

(2) what length of notice customers' organisations of the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency were given regarding its intended privatisation; and if he will make a statement. [8437]

Mr. Willetts: Major customers were consulted before the decision to privatise. The consultation provided adequate time for them to express views. There will be continuing close consultation with customers during the privatisation process. The principle of selection on merit by fair and open competition, to which the Government are committed, is not affected by the proposed privatisation.

Royal Family (Publicity Service Costs)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to publish the 1994–95 costs to the Central Office of Information for publicity services to the royal family. [8904]

Mr. Willetts: The COI is responsible for organising television, radio and newspaper attendance at visits by senior members of the royal family while carrying out their official duties outside London. Some 419 venues were visited in 1994–95. The COI provides appropriate briefing material for such visits and also provides a media summary service for the Queen when on official engagements overseas.

The cost of these services in 1994–95 was £354,051. These costs normally appear in the royal finance booklet. The 1994–95 costs were not available for the most recent edition of the booklet.

ENVIRONMENT

Homelessness

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of (a) the number of hostel places available for the homeless in London, (b) the number of unused hostel places in London, (c) the number of empty council houses in (i) central London and (ii) the old LCC area and (d) the estimated number of rough sleepers in London. [8876]

Mr. Clappison: The information requested on hostel places for the homeless is not held centrally.

The 1995 housing investment programme returns from London borough in the former LCC area show a total of 13,879 vacant local authority dwellings on 1 April 1995, the latest date for which figures are available. Of these, 6,049 were management vacants—that is, dwellings available for letting immediately or after minor repairs. A report containing the figures for individual borough—"1995 HIP1 All Items Print"—will be placed in the Library shortly.

Information about the extent of rough sleeping is mostly anecdotal or estimated, except for central London where voluntary sector agencies carry out a twice-yearly count of rough sleepers. The methodology for this arose from an independent evaluation of the rough sleepers initiative, commissioned by my Department. The most recent count, in November 1995, found 272 people sleeping rough in central London.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the total numbers of homeless individuals in (a) England, (b) Greater London, (c) outer London and (d) inner London in each year since 1991. [8914]

Mr. Clappison: The number of households for which local authorities accepted responsibility to secure accommodation, under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act, were as follows in the years 1991 to 1995:

Year	England	Greater London	Inner London[1]	Outer London
1991	144,780	37,060	21,950	15,110
1992	142,890	37,840	22,630	15,210
1993	132 380	31,890	17,550	14,340
1994	122,660	28,810	16,330	12,480

Contaminated Land (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on contaminated land in the district of Easington; and if he will list the locations of contaminated sites. [9578]

Mr. Clappison: The Government set out their policy on contaminated land in England in the document "Framework for Contaminated Land", published in November 1994. The document proposed a modern contaminated land power, which has been provided in section 57 of the Environment Act 1995. This will apply to any contaminated land in Easington in the same way as elsewhere.

The Department of the Environment does not keep records on individual contaminated sites.

Noise Pollution

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has had on the problems of (a) noise pollution and (b) noisy neighbours. [7850]

Mr. Clappison: My Department continues to receive representations about all forms of environmental noise on a regular basis. The vast majority of representations relate to neighbour noise issues.

Following the review of neighbour noise controls, a package of measures is being taken forward aimed at strengthening the controls over excessive noise from domestic premises and improving local authority noise services and liaison with the police through guidance and dissemination of best practice.

The hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) is taking forward a private Member's Bill which will introduce clearer powers for temporary confiscation of noise making equipment and a new criminal offence to deal with excessive noise at night from domestic premises.

GLC Heritage Collection

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which body is now responsible for the safekeeping of the Greater London council heritage collection inventory. [8763]

Sire Paul Beresford: The inventory of the GLC's heritage collection has been held at the Greater London record office since 1 April 1986.

Gulf War (Pollution)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the environmental damage caused by the deliberate release of oil into the Gulf between Khafji and the island of Abu Ai during the Gulf war; how many bird mortalities resulted from the pollution; and if the final ecological assessment of damage in the Gulf has now been made. [9085]

Mr. Clappison: A report by the United Nations environment programme on the environmental effects of the Gulf war was presented to the UNEP Governing Council in May 1993—UNEP GC.7 Inf.9. The report included an assessment of the impact of oil released into the Gulf during the conflict, including an assessment of bird mortalities. More than 30,000 birds are believed to have died during the conflict. A copy of the report is in the Library of the House. Further studies into possible long-term effects are largely a matter for the states in the region.

Habitat II Conference

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the United Kingdom's involvement in the Habitat II conference on sustainable communities; what are the implications of Habitat II for his Department's planning and housing policies; and if he will make a statement on his future objectives for Habitat II. [9951]

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom is taking an active part in the preparations for the United Nations conference on human settlements. We, together with our EU partners, are contributing to the drafting of the "Habitat Agenda" which is to be the major output of the conference.

My Department is co-ordinating the preparation of the UK's national report for the conference. We are also working closely with a wide range of organisations—local government, non-governmental and professional—through the UK National Council for Habitat II.

In respect of the future objectives for Habitat II, my Department will promote internationally UK ideas, policies and best practice and use the conference to raise international and national awareness of the means to achieve sustainable development.

We will need to await the outcome of Habitat II before determining the implications for my Department's planning and housing policies.

Erewash Borough Council

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has yet considered the responses by Erewash borough council to the notice served on it on 7 September 1995 under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988; and if he will make a statement. [10411]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend has considered carefully the responses which Erewash borough council has made to the notice served on the authority on 7 September 1995, and has today given the authority a direction under section 14 of the Local Government Act 1988.

After careful consideration, the Secretary of State remains of the opinion that the authority acted in an anti-competitive manner in awarding a contract to its in-house direct labour organisation in favour of a bid which was £70,000 cheaper, because it did not have well founded reasons for doing so. He feels that, in assigning the contract of £326,150 to its DSO, the authority did not show that it had carried out an adequate assessment of the private contractor's abilities.

The direction given to Erewash borough council requires the authority to retender the contract for a ground maintenance contract, which was the subject of the notice, so that new arrangements are in place by 1 January 1997, and to seek my right hon. Friend's consent should it wish to reassign the work in-house.

Leaseholders

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he plans to take to strengthen the rights of owners of leasehold flats. [10859]

Mr. Gummer: I have received a large number of representations from right hon. and hon. Members and leaseholders, particularly in London, about allegations that some landlords have been behaving unreasonably. The allegations are that a number of landlords have been buying up freeholds of blocks of flats and then presenting the leaseholders with very large maintenance and service charge bills. The amounts demanded appear to be excessive in relation to the work required, and the landlords can make a substantial profit by employing associated surveyors, contractors and managing agents, and earning commission. Any leaseholders who challenge the service charges are met with aggression and intimidation from the landlord and threatened with forfeiture of the lease.

There is already a considerable body of legislation offering safeguards to leaseholders. After careful consideration of these recent developments, however, I have decided that further action should now be taken to strengthen leaseholders' rights.

I therefore propose the following legislative amendments. First, I propose a number of changes to the right of first refusal contained in part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 to help ensure that tenants are given the opportunity to exercise this right if their landlord wishes to dispose of his interest. Secondly, I shall amend the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993, so that qualifying leaseholders will have a right to enfranchise where their block of flats has more than one freehold interest. Thirdly, I intend to give a recognised residents' association a right to challenge major works proposed by its landlord before the work has commenced. Fourthly, I shall amend the law of forfeiture so that forfeiture proceedings are separated from disputes over service charges. Fifthly, I shall strengthen the grounds available to leaseholders seeking to require the court to appoint a manager of their block of flats where the landlord is failing to carry out his obligations in a reasonable manner.

Finally, I am concerned about the cost which leaseholders can face in pursuing their rights through the courts and I am considering the possibility of transferring disputes over service charges to leasehold valuation tribunals.

I will bring forward amendments to the Housing Bill, which is being introduced today, to give effect to these proposals.

I have today placed a note in the Library of the House which outlines these proposals in more detail.

Home Safety

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has to provide specific funding for local authorities to provide home safety initiatives; [9682]

(2) what plans he has to make the provision of home safety initiatives a mandatory function of local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [9683]

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

None. Local authorities all over the country are already engaged in productive crime prevention/community safety initiatives with the police, local businesses and the voluntary sector. This has been achieved without central funding and without the burden of a new statutory responsibility. I see no need to change arrangements which have worked so well.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what analysis he has made of the consequences in Scotland of the changes to the budget of the home energy efficiency scheme; and if he will make a statement. [9382]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply. There will be no impact on low-income households in Scotland. The reduction in the budget will be met by requiring better-off householders who qualify for HEES grants because of their age to make a contribution of 75 per cent. towards the cost of the work.

TRANSPORT

Marine Safety Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of staffing levels within the Marine Safety Agency to cope with a marine accident on the scale of the Estonia accident. [8231]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 18 January 1996:

I am responding to your question to the Secretary of State for Transport asking what assessment has been made of the adequacy of staffing levels within the Marine Safety Agency (MSA) to cope with a marine accident on the scale of the ESTONIA accident.

The MSA is currently operating to a complement of some 175 professional and 190 administrative staff. Approximately half of these are based in our Southampton HQ, and the remainder are spread throughout the UK. I am satisfied that staffing levels are sufficient to undertake the tasks agreed in our Business and Corporate Plans. If another incident of the magnitude of the ESTONIA were to occur, then priorities would be reassessed.

Executive Agencies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if answers sent to hon. Members in reply to parliamentary questions by the head of executive agencies in his Department are (a) seen, (b) approved and (c) amended by him before they are sent; and if he will identify any letters to which amendments by him have been made in 1994–95. [7827]

Sir George Young: When my Department's agency chief executives are invited by Ministers to write to hon. Members to provide information sought in parliamentary questions, their replies are subject to ministerial approval. Letters that were amended in draft by Ministers could be identified only at disproportionate cost.

Port of Fishguard

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with the Rail Franchising Director the introduction of a minimum passenger service requirement covering the port of Fishguard; and if he will make a statement. [8970]

Mr. Watts: No. The detailed specification of passenger service requirements is a matter for the Franchising Director. Services to Fishguard will be covered by the PSR for the South Wales and West Railway on which the Franchising Director will be consulting in due course. The new franchisee for Great Western train services—Great Western Holdings—has specifically committed to maintain the overall number of services in the 1995–96 timetable between London Paddington and Fishguard, until the timetable for 1999–2000 and subject to connecting ferry services continuing to operate during that period.

Rail Fares

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the Consumers Association regarding the quotation of rail ticket prices; what assessment he has made; if he will make it his policy to require rail staff to quote the lowest possible fare available; and if he will make a statement. [8732]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has been sent a copy of the Which? survey into British Rail's ticketing and information services.

The survey is based on a small and selective sample of routes and does not provide a representative picture of BR's performance. Nevertheless, passengers have a right to expect accurate travel information and it has been recognised for some time that the present arrangements need improvement. A national train information system is being developed for the new railway, and rail privatisation, by introducing sector energy and know-how, should help address the shortcomings of the current systems.

Operators are already required to provided impartial and comprehensive information about rail fares.

MV Derbyshire

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had with the MV Derbyshire family association regarding the proposed inquiry into the loss of the MV Derbyshire; and if he will make a statement. [9582]

Mr. Norris: We are currently consulting the Derbyshire family association on the arrangements for the return expedition to the wreck of the Derbyshire. We will take account of its views in defining the objectives and priorities of the expedition to ensure that this final re-examination is meticulously planned in the hope that we can gather as much information as possible about the cause of the loss, with resulting benefits to ship safety.

Rail Services (Adverse Weather)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct Railtrack to seek advice from

Austrian Railways on maintaining services in adverse weather conditions. [9826]

Mr. Watts: No. Railtrack maintains the infrastructure for which it is responsible in accordance with its contractual obligations to train operators and to rigorous safety standards which are overseen by the Health and Safety Executive.

Road Tax Evasion

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to reduce road tax evasion. [9894]

Mr. Norris: A number of initiatives are planned. A scheme to wheel clamp vehicles for excise duty offences will be introduced in London shortly. Measures to improve the quality of the national vehicle record to make it more difficult for motorists to drop out of the licensing system are being developed. Use of camera technology to automate the detection of offence is also being taken forward.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve the procedures for road tax evasion reporting by police and traffic wardens. [9895]

Mr. Norris: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency receives more than 1.5 million excise offence reports annually for enforcement action from the police and traffic wardens and other sources.

The recent study by the National Audit Office on vehicle excise duty on evasion and enforcement reported that some offence reports received were of poor quality and could not be successfully pursued. The exact number of these is unclear since precise figures are not available and other categories of cases not pursued are included in the calculation. If further work identifies this as an area of concern, it will be taken up with those who provide the agency with offence reports.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to support the confiscation of unregistered and unlicensed HGVs. [9830]

Mr. Norris: Powers to wheel clamp and impound all types of unlicensed vehicles parked on the public road will be introduced shortly. A pilot wheel clamping scheme starting in London in February will enable us to assess the effectiveness of these powers in combating vehicle excise duty evasion.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to strengthen the enforcement of the maximum driving hours laws on foreign HGV drivers. [9831]

Mr. Norris: The European directive which lays down minimum targets for drivers' hours checks requires that roadside checks must be carried out without discriminating as to nationality. The UK exceeds the requirements for checks on drivers' hours. Funding for investigative work on all aspects of enforcement was increased this financial year by £350,000 and a significant proportion of this additional funding will be spent on drivers' hours checking and enforcement.

Road Markings (Schools)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to make it a statutory offence to park within the road markings outside school gates. [9829]

Mr. Norris: We have no plans to change the existing legislation, which provides for markings outside school entrances to be either advisory or enforceable. It is the responsibility of individual traffic authorities to decide what is appropriate in the light of local circumstances.

Freight Facilities Grants

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sums have been invested by the Government under the Railways Act section 36 freight facilities grants system since 1993; and if he will make a statement. [9897]

Mr. Watts: The sum of £415,000 in November 1993 to the Huntsman Chemical Company Ltd. These environmental grants are awarded under section 140 of the Railways Act 1993 to help defray the capital costs of inland waterway freight facilities. In this instance, grant will enable the company to carry styrene monomer by water from Baglan bay, south Wales to its processing plant at Carrington near Manchester for the next 10 years, thereby removing some 6,000 lorry journeys a year from the roads.

Driving Tests

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how long on average those waiting to take a driving test have to wait in Portsmouth. [9919]

Mr. Norris: Waiting times at Portsmouth are currently six weeks for car tests and two weeks for motorcycle tests—both well within our service standards.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assurances were offered by Her Majesty's Government in respect of the funding of the channel tunnel. [10115]

Mr. Watts: I am not aware that any assurances have been offered by the UK Government. From the start it was always envisaged that the channel tunnel would be an entirely private sector project, and that the concessionaires would have no recourse to Government funds or guarantees of a financial or commercial nature. That remains the position.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from Eurotunnel in respect of the refinancing of the channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement. [10113]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend has received representations from Eurotunnel on a number of issues, including the company's current financial difficulties. It has been made clear to the company that any financial restructuring of Eurotunnel is a matter for the company to resolve in discussion with its bankers, and without Government intervention.

Road Network (Management and Maintenance)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he intends to proceed with the Highways Agency proposals for new agency arrangements for the management and maintenance of the motorway and trunk road network which were the subject of consultation last year. [10663]

Mr. Watts: We intend to proceed on the lines proposed in the consultation. In general, we aim to establish new agencies whose size and coverage will be based on considerations of effective management and to enlarge competition by involving the public and private sectors with both tendering against a single common agreement. We are re-examining the proposed areas and timing of implementation in the light of the decision to increase the number of design, build, finance and operate schemes announced on 29 November. We have already announced our decision on the way forward in London. It was stated in the consultation document that we would continue putting in place new agency agreements for April 1996 where current agents were ceasing to exist, as in Avon and Humberside, or current private sector agencies were due for retendering, such as the term contracts in south and west London and consultancies for the midland links and Greater Manchester agencies. These are all proceeding to plan.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many mobile telephones have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each year how many different suppliers were involved. [9127]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Headquarters—and associated officers—currently have 61 live contracts for mobile telephones with British Telecom, Cellcom and Talkland.

The telephones were supplied in each of the following years as follows:

	Supplier	Number
April 1990 to April 1991	British Telecom	3
	Cellcom	5
April 1991 to April 1992	Cellcom	3
April 1992 to April 1993	British Telecom	6
	Cellcom	9
April 1993 to April 1994	Talkland	11
	British Telecom	4
April 1994 to April 1995	Talkland	1
	Cellcom	1
Since April 1995	Talkland	10
	Carphone Warehouse	8
	Dictating Machine Co. Ltd	8

Information prior to 1990 is unavailable.

I have asked the chief executives of the Court Service and the Public Trust Office to reply separately.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. William Ross, dated 18 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to the above Question about the number of mobile telephones supplied to the Court Service and the number of suppliers used.

Not all Circuit offices keep central figures of the mobile telephones in use in their region and a number are supplied under local arrangements. To obtain more detailed information in the timescale allowed would incur a disproportionate cost. Nevertheless, I can confirm that in April 1995, the date on which the Court Service was established, approximately 411 mobile phones were in use throughout the Court Service. This figure now stands at approximately 502. Some 22 suppliers are involved.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. William Ross, dated 18 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to your as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 10 January 1996, regarding the number of mobile phones purchased in each of the last eight years and the number of different suppliers involved.

The Public Trust Office has not supplied any mobile phones to its staff during the last eight years.

Land Transfers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to extend section 123 of the Land Registration Act 1925 to conveyances which do not accompany a transfer of the beneficial interest in the land; and if he will make a statement. [9107]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: A joint working group comprising representatives of the Law Commission, Land Registry and Lord Chancellor's Department has recommended that section 123 of the Land Registration Act 1925 should be extended to cover assents, vesting deeds, conveyances by way of gift, conveyances pursuant to a court order and first legal mortgages, and that there should be a power to extend to other dispositions after appropriate consultation. That recommendation, together with others in the working groups's report, published as Law Com. 235, has been accepted by the Government and legislation to give effect to the recommendations will be introduced as soon as there is a suitable opportunity.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies; and if he will make a statement. [9143]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor has responsibility for four agencies: The Court Service, HM Land Registry, The Public Record Office and The Public Trust Office. As the question concerns a specific operational matter, the chief executives of the Land Registry, the Public Record Office and the Public Trust Office have been asked to reply direct. This answer is, however, given on behalf of the Court Service as the Lord Chancellor's Department welfare service provides pre-retirement courses for the Court Service. Courses are provided to meet demand and there are no plans to discontinue this practice.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 18 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to respond to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 10 January 1996, regarding the action each Agency is taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of such Agencies seeking to make economies.

The Public Trust Office does not run in-house pre-retirement courses due to the relatively small number of staff retiring each year. We do, however, offer external courses to such staff and there are no plans to discontinue this practice.

Letter from Sarah Tyacke to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 18 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about the safeguarding of the provision of pre-retirement courses in the executive agencies for which he is responsible.

Although the Public Record Office is making economies, it has safeguarded its provision of pre-retirement courses by maintaining the resources devoted to them at existing levels, and it plans to continue to do so.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 18 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question concerning the provision of pre-retirement courses. It has long been the practice within HM Land Registry to offer all staff approaching retirement age the opportunity of attending a pre-retirement course and there are no plans to restrict this facility. These courses may be run either in-house on a regional basis or by the purchase of places on courses run by other departments or organisations.

I do hope that this answers the point raised with the Parliamentary Secretary but please contact me if I can be of any further assistance.

TREASURY

Tax (Self-assessment)

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information and advice has been given to persons likely to be affected by self-assessment; and what is expected to be given before the tax forms are sent out. [8315]

Mr. Jack: A substantial programme of publicity and education for those taxpayers who will be affected by self-assessment is under way. A major publicity programme aimed directly at the 9 million who get tax returns, using TV and national press, was launched in June 1995 with a second phase in the autumn. Further phases are planned until well after self-assessment has been introduced.

The Inland Revenue recognises that self-assessment will also affect agents and employers. A major initiative has been undertaken to provide them with the information they need. Information packs were sent to 85,000 agents and 1.15 million employers last summer, which have included invitations to seminars provided by local tax offices. Over 50,000 people have attended seminars so far. Further mailshots and seminars are planned for this three-year education programme.

An insert on self-assessment will accompany the tax return that people receive in April 1996—the last of the old-style forms. This will explain what the new system will mean for them and what steps they should take to prepare for it.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates of compliance costs for employers have been made concerning tax self-assessment in each of the last three years. [8316]

Mr. Jack: A single compliance cost assessment has been made to cover the overall impact of self-assessment, on employers and others, for example, the self-employed. This was published on 28 November 1994 and a copy is available in the House Library. It shows that there will be recurrent costs for employers who provide benefits to their employees—currently about a third of all employers—estimated at £20 to £30 million a year. This extra work has been kept to a minimum following extensive consultation. Those employers who are self-employed will find this to be at least partially offset by the net recurrent savings to self-employed people. The net savings to business after taking account of these and other costs are estimated at between £125 and £250 million a year.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response he has made to representations from the Institute of Taxation in respect of the impact of tax self-assessment; and when he responded to the institute. [8318]

Mr. Jack: Representatives of the Chartered Institute of Taxation sit on, and play a full part in, the Self Assessment Consultative Committee. This was set up as a forum for the Inland Revenue to meet representatives of business and the professions to discuss issues relevant to self assessment. Reports are made to Ministers on major issues arising from such discussions, and Treasury Ministers have met the committee on a number of occasions.

The CIOT submitted its budget representations on 29 June 1995, and aspects of these, including self-assessment, were discussed at a meeting with the Deputy Chairman of the Inland Revenue on 7 July. Further meetings both by Ministers and the Inland Revenue have since been held at which CIOT representations on self-assessment have been discussed.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of the overall impact on business of the introduction of tax self-assessment, disaggregated into (a) estimated extra costs and (b) estimated savings. [8210]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 11 January 1996]: Self-assessment is a major modernisation of the system of tax administration which will provide a permanent reduction for taxpayers in the costs of complying with their obligations. The changes will particularly benefit self-employed people. A compliance cost assessment detailing the estimates leading to this conclusion was published on 28 November 1994. A copy is available in the House Library.

It contains the following summary figures:

Self-assessment generates a recurrent compliance net saving for businesses, mainly the self-employed, of some £125 to £250 million a year.

This figure takes account of recurrent costs to employers who provide benefits to employees are estimated at £20 to £30 million a year; some but not all of these employers will benefit from compliance savings by being self-employed.

Initial costs of adapting to the new system are estimated at £100 to £200 million.

The typical small self-employed business which does not provide benefits in kind to employees could expect recurrent savings of £30 to £60 a year, more than offsetting the non-recurrent cost in a single year.

The overall annual savings are net of the costs quoted by the Opposition in the press recently.

Tax Inspectors

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax inspectors have been employed by the Inland Revenue in each of the last five years. [8312]

Mr. Jack: Excluding staff employed on central administration, in other supportive roles and those in certain specialist offices, the table sets out the number of tax inspectors employed at the end of each of the last five years in December, for the current year:

Inspectors

1991–92: 6,737

1992–93: 6,808

1993–94: 6,582

1994–95: 6,423

1995–96: 6,202

The number of tax inspectors deployed on investigation work has remained broadly constant.

Finance Bill

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he has taken in the drafting of the current Finance Bill to ensure its complexities do not inhibit those seeking to understand the rules for the purposes of self-assessment of tax. [8320]

Mr. Jack: Reducing complexity in the run-up to self-assessment was an important factor in deciding which measures formed part of this year's Finance Bill. Those working on the drafting of the Bill have certainly avoided where they can add to the complexity of the tax system. Indeed where possible the opportunity has been taken to simplify the rules, to make it easier for taxpayers. An example is in clause 138 on the abolition of relief for class 4 national insurance contributions.

The most effective way to help people understand their obligations under self-assessment is through the Inland Revenue's extensive education and public information campaign which is currently under way, through clear and informative guidance and leaflets, and through proper support and assistance available through tax offices and tax inquiry centres.

Labour Statistics (Peterlee and Seaham)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in the areas covered by the Peterlee and Seaham area offices are estimated to be economically inactive. [9499]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information available, from the Labour Force Survey, shows that in Durham, the county covering the Peterlee and Seaham area offices, there were 194,000 economically inactive people in summer, June to August, 1995.

Petrol and Diesel Fuel Duty

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual total tax collected from, and on account of, Wales by way of duty on petrol and diesel fuels; and what proportion this represents of the total such duty raised in the same year for the United Kingdom. [9310]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is estimated that in 1994–95 around £600 million was raised from petrol, diesel and other hydrocarbon oils duties in Wales, accounting for approximately 4 per cent. of the United Kingdom total.

Domestic Credit

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the levels of domestic credit for each year since 1966. [9782]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Statistics covering M4 and its counterparts—including bank and building society lending—are published by the Bank of England in "Monetary Statistics"; a longer run of data is contained in the Bank of England "Statistical Abstract", part 2.

Arts

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are employed in the arts and related cultural activities; and what changes in these figures have occurred in each year since 1993–94 in (a) these fields and (b) overall; and if she will make a statement. [9701]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Latest available information is held in table 1.4 of the January 1996 edition of "Labour Market Trends", copies of which are available in the Library.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the rate of return in United Kingdom manufacturing industry in 1994 as a percentage of the rate on other commercial and industrial enterprises less North sea oil. [9787]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information on rates of return by industrial and commercial companies are published in the CSO "First Release (95)136—Profitability of UK Companies". This is available from the Library of the House.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance he intends to issue to (a) departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies at arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9222]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People on 16 January 1996, Official Report, column 417.

The Departments and other bodies responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Newarthill

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reports the Bank of England has received from its representative in the Cayman Islands about losses suffered by local subsidiaries of the company Newarthill; what action the bank has taken in respect of these; and if he will make a statement. [7805]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 11 January 1996]: None. The Bank of England has no representative in the Cayman Islands. Neither Newarthill plc nor any of its subsidiaries is subject to Bank of England supervision.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Chancellor of the Exchequer under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9588]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 16 January 1996]: No primary legislation enacted since 1979 has empowered the Chancellor of the Exchequer as such to make statutory instruments. Information concerning the procedure applicable to the power to make instruments given to HM Treasury, HM Customs and Excise and the Inland Revenue by primary legislation enacted since 1979 is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Tiger Products

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all tiger products seized in 1995 by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise. [8909]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 17 January 1996]: HM Customs and Excise have yet to finalise their statistics for 1995. I can say, however, that in the first three quarters of the year to 30 September 1995 the following tiger products were seized as having been imported in breach of convention on international trade in endangered species requirements:

1 bottle of tiger bone pills
1 bottle of tiger bone tincture
10 packets of tiger bone pills
10 packets of tiger bone plasters
5 bottles of tiger liniment
5 sheets of musk and tiger bone plasters.

Iraqi Assets

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total sum of Iraqi assets held frozen by United Kingdom banks; and what interest has accrued since the order freezing them. [9568]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The Bank of England advises that the value of Iraqi assets frozen in the United Kingdom was $769,000,000 as at 30 September 1995. This figure includes private as well as Iraqi Government assets. No figures are available for interest which has accrued, since banks are not required to and do not report them.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid Budget

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much and what percentage of official United Kingdom aid was spent on (a) basic needs and (b) direct poverty reduction between 1990 and the latest year for which figures are available. [9115]

Mr. Hanley: (a) The following table gives the requested breakdown of bilateral ODA programme expenditure on basic needs[1] both including and excluding bilateral emergency aid.

	Including emergency aid		Excluding emergency aid
	£ million	Share of total bilateral aid Percentage	£ million	Share of total bilateral aid[2] Percentage
1990–91	133.9	12.8	73.8	7.5
1991–92	218.5	20.3	80.1	8.6
1992–93	230.3	20.5	87.5	8.9
1993–94	279.1	24.2	99.5	10.2
1994–95	303.3	27.1	94.4	10.4

[1] Comprises basic education, primary health care, mother/child health, family planning, nutrition, water and sanitation, and block grants to NGOs.
[2] Total bilateral aid excluding emergency aid.

Expenditure on UK aid for direct poverty reduction can be identified only for that part of ODA expenditure which is covered by the ODA policy information marker system[1] —PIMS. The following table gives a breakdown of ODA expenditure which has a direct assistance to poor people marker on the PIMS system along with emergency aid which is counted as direct assistance to poor people although it is not PIMS marked.

	Principal expenditure £ million	Significant expenditure £ million	Emergency aid £ million	Total £ million	Share of total PIMS marked expenditure[2] Percentage
1990–91	n/a	n/a	60.2	n/a	n/a
1991–92	30.3	51.1	138.5	219.9	30
1992–93	30.8	54.3	142.8	227.9	30
1993–94	51.2	39.4	179.6	270.2	33
1994–95	51.8	65.0	208.9	325.7	39

[1] Details of PIMS are available in the 1995 edition of "British Aid Statistics", a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.
[2] Including emergency aid.

Dominica

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much overseas aid has been granted by Her Majesty's Government to Dominica in each year since 1990; and how much will be awarded in 1996. [9321]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 16 January 1996, Official Report, column 507 regarding past aid disbursements to Dominica.

The aid figure for 1995–96 is not yet known. It is likely to be somewhat higher than in 1994–95 but will depend on how quickly the problem of Dominica's repayment arrears is resolved, and our capital aid programme resumed.

Aid and Trade (Biwater Group)

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the financial years since 1986 in which assistance under the aid and trade provision has been paid in respect of projects involving the Biwater group of companies. [10171]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given by my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to the hon. Member on 17 February 1994, Official Report, column 937 and the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on 14 February 1994, Official Report, column 568. No new ATP commitments involving Biwaters have been entered into since 1988. Expenditure on previous ATP commitments ended in 1991–92.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9230]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer to the answer given by the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People, on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 417. I shall ensure that my Department, and any bodies for which it is responsible, will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Champagne

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many litres of champagne were imported from France in each year since 1992. [10635]

Mr. Boswell: Imports of champagne from France, as recorded in the overseas trade statistics, are as follows:

1992: 11

1993: 14

1994: 18

1995 to September: 9.

Figures given in million litres.

The 1995 figures are provisional and may be subject to amendment.

Bovine Offals

Sir Jim Spicer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the state veterinary service's surveillance of the handling of specified bovine offals in November and December 1995; and if he will make a statement. [10858]

Mrs. Browning: The state veterinary service, SVS, continued to make unannounced visits to slaughterhouses, hunt kennels and knackeries in November and December 1995 to monitor their handling of specified bovine offals, SBOs. The results of these visits were:

	November 1995			December 1995
	Number visits	Number unsatisfactory visits	Percentage unsatisfactory	Number visits	Number unsatisfactory visits	Percentage unsatisfactory
Slaughterhouses	365	44	12	272	17	6
Hunt kennels and knackeries	234	38	19	193	14	7

Many of the failings found were of a comparatively mild nature, for example problems with staining SBOs or with record keeping. There were, however, some more serious cases, including incidents in which small pieces of spinal cord were left attached to carcases after dressing in slaughterhouses. Eight such instances were detected in November and two in December, the most recent on 14 December. There have been none so far in January 1996. A total of 21 instances in which spinal cord was left attached to carcases have now been detected since the SVS surveillance programme of slaughterhouses began in the summer.

The results of similar surveillance visits to rendering and incineration plants handling SBOs will be announced shortly.

I welcome these significant improvements in the handling of SBOs by slaughterhouses, hunt kennels and knackeries. I expect those that have attained a satisfactory level of performance to maintain the standards they are now achieving, and would expect that those plants which have failed to do so will work harder to ensure they do fully comply with the controls. The SVS will continue its unannounced surveillance visits to plants handling SBOs.

Intervention Beef

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he expects beef to be taken into intervention in the United Kingdom this year. [9466]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 17 January 1996]: No beef has been taken into intervention anywhere in the EU since November 1993. I do not expect any beef to be taken in 1996.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much beef was taken into intervention in the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years. [9465]

Mr. Hogg [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The quantity of beef taken into intervention in the UK in each of the last 10 years was:

1986: 46,355 tonnes
1987: 44,322 tonnes
1988: 38,504 tonnes
1989: 6,967 tonnes
1990: 77,345 tonnes
1991: 95,939 tonnes
1992: 68,857 tonnes
1993: 16,650 tonnes
1994: Nil
1995: Nil.

Butterflies and Moths

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to increase the contribution that set-aside land makes to butterfly and moth conservation. [9296]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The management rules for set-aside land, which have been drawn up in close consultation with environmental organisations, allow farmers considerable scope to manage their land in ways which safeguard the environment and provide benefits to wildlife. We offer free conservation advice to individual farmers on the management of set-aside, including ways of improving the habitat for butterflies and moths. We are currently sponsoring two Agricultural Development Advisory Service projects in which, among other things, the populations of butterflies on set-aside land are being studied. These projects aim to demonstrate how set-aside can be managed for the benefit of plants and wildlife, including butterflies and moths.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the powers to make statutory instruments exercisable by the Minister under primary legislation enacted since 1979 are subject to (a) the negative and (b) the affirmative resolution procedure. [9596]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 16 January 1996]: This is a matter of public record and the Ministry does not hold statistics for this information. There are, however, affirmative resolution powers in part I of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1958, in the Agriculture Act 1986 and in the Agriculture Act 1993. Negative resolution powers are contained in those Acts of Parliament and in the Animal Health Act 1981, the Animal Health and Welfare Act 1984, the Food Safety Act 1990, the Radioactive Substances Act 1993, the Water Resources Act 1991, the Fisheries Act 1981 and the Environment Act 1995, the Import of Live Fish (England and Wales) Act 1980, the Diseases of Fish Act 1983, the Fisheries Act 1981 and the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9738]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The Ministry awarded a contract for the supply of mobile and car phones to supply both the department and its executive agencies through a sealed bid competitive tender exercise.

The following companies were invited to tender for the Contract:

Motorola Ltd.
Hutchison Telecom (UK) Ltd.
Talkland International (UK) Ltd.
BT Mobile Communications
Vodac Ltd.
Mercury Communications Ltd.

Hutchison Telecom (UK) Ltd did not submit a tender.

This answer includes all of the agencies with the exception of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, which has answered directly.

Letter from Mr. J. F. FitzGerald to Mr. Brian H. Donohoe, dated 16 January 1996:

In my Chief Executive's absence, the Minister has asked me to reply to your question about the supply of mobile and car phones to the Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD). This is an operational matter for which my Chief Executive is responsible.

The VMD has very few requirements for mobile and car phones and we have, therefore, not awarded a contract for this supply. On the rare occasion that we need to hire a mobile phone we are able to use the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's call off contract or if this does not meet our specific need we make ad hoc arrangements for hire.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to the public funds of each agreement. [9737]

Mr. Hogg [holding answer 17 January 1996]: At present, the Ministry and its executive agencies have one agreement in place for the provision of mobile and car telephones.

This is currently with Mercury Communications Ltd.

The duration of the agreement is three years.

Mercury has supplied 651 telephones under the current agreement.

The costs to public funds for this agreement are £310,574. These figures exclude VAT and any call charges.

This answer includes all of the agencies with the exception of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, which has answered directly.

Letter from Mr. J. F. FitzGerald to Mr. Brian H. Donohoe, dated 16 January 1996:

In my Chief Executive's absence, the Minister has asked me to reply to your question asking for details of contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to the Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD). This is an operational matter for which my Chief Executive is responsible.

The VMD does not have any contracts with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9739]

Mr. Hogg [holding answer 17 January 1996]: From information held centrally, no costs have been incurred in withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided.

This answer includes all of the agencies with the exception of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, which has answered directly.

Letter from Mr. J. F. FitzGerald to Mr. Brian H. Donohoe, dated 16 January 1996:

In my Chief Executive's absence, the Minister has asked me to reply to your question about the cost of withdrawing from contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to the Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD). This is an operational matter for which my Chief Executive is responsible. The VMD has not had any contracts with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones and so has not incurred any costs as a result of withdrawing from such contracts.

Fishing Fleet

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the age and efficiency of the British fishing fleet; how he proposes to modernise it; what comparative statistics he has in respect of the figures for the (a) Dutch, (b) Spanish and (c) Danish fleets; and if he will make a statement. [8371]

Mr. Baldry: The table gives details of the ages of fishing vessels in the UK, Dutch, Spanish and Danish fleets as at the end of 1991, the latest year for which such comparative data are available.

Selected member states of the European Union fishing fleets as at 31 December 1991

Eurostat FISHERIES—yearly statistics 1994.

There is no generally recognised measure of the efficiency of fishing fleets, which depends on a range of variable factors, including the skills of the fishermen involved.

The question of modernisation is primarily a matter for the commercial judgment of those in the industry. Any use of taxpayers money should concentrate on the need to reduce capacity to bring the fleet into better balance with what stocks will bear.

Fish Quotas

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what estimate he has made of fish stocks, by species, which have been discarded dead at sea because of quota restrictions for each year since the advent of the common fisheries policy; and if he will make a statement; [8363]

(2) what proposals he expects to put to his EU counterparts in the next three months for removing the need for fishermen to discard above quota fish at sea; and if he will make a statement. [8392]

Mr. Baldry: No such estimates exist within the Ministry but there is a clear need to reduce the number of discards. This will be one of the issues discussed by the fisheries conservation group which I am setting up, and I hope to be able to put proposals to the European Commission in April.

Fish Conservation

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to abolish the quota system for fisheries management and replace it with technical measures to assist conservation; and if he will make a statement. [8394]

Mr. Baldry: Quotas and technical conservation measures are both intended to protect fish stocks and to safeguard the future livelihoods of fishermen. The two approaches are complementary and I have no plans to advocate one of them to the exclusion of the other. However, I am setting up a fisheries conservation group to consider whether more can be achieved by technical conservation measures.

HEALTH

"Nursing in a Multi-ethnic NHS"

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the findings of the Policy Studies Institute report entitled, "Nursing in a Multi-ethnic NHS"; what plans he has to implement its recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [9039]

Mr. Horam: The national health service is strongly committed to equal opportunities and funds a number of innovative schemes which support the practice as well as the principle of equal opportunity.

A series of regional conferences has been organised to encourage NHS employers to share good practice and promote positive action for ethnic minority staff as a result of the findings of the Policy Studies Institute report.

The report showed that ethnic minorities are better represented within the NHS nursing and midwifery work force than in the population as a whole, but nevertheless suggested areas where improvements might be made.

Appointments (Carers and Disabled People)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to ensure that carers are represented on the health boards and health councils which he is responsible for appointing; and if he will make a statement; [9360]

(2) what plans he has to ensure that disabled people are represented on the health boards and health councils which he is responsible for appointing; and if he will make a statement. [9362]

Mr. Malone: People representing all sections and interests of the community are encouraged, through open advertisement, to apply for non-executive appointment to national health service trusts and health authorities and to become members of community health councils. An equal opportunities policy in the selection process is adopted for all appointments.

Mrs. Daphne Banks

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the circumstances in which Mrs. Daphne Banks was mistakenly pronounced dead on 5 January 1996. [9323]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for Cambridge and Huntingdon health commission. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mrs. Margaret Scott, chairman of the commission, for details.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into (a) the incidence of multiple sclerosis and (b) the incidence of clusters of multiple sclerosis, with particular reference to West Craven. [9692]

Mr. Bowis: The Government are funding research designed to investigate the causes of multiple sclerosis and the effectiveness of new treatments. My Department has no current proposals for research in the areas suggested. However, the main agency through which the Government supports biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade. The MRC is always willing to consider high quality research proposals.

GP Lists

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the procedures for the protection of the interests of (i) the patient, (ii) the general practitioner concerned and (iii) the public in cases where a general practitioner seeks to remove a patient from their NHS list. [9838]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink) on 18 October 1995, Official Report, column 355.

Living Wills

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to grant legal status to living wills; and if he will make a statement. [9197]

Mr. Bowis: Advance statements—living wills—are already legally binding under common law, if clearly established and applicable in the circumstances.

The Law Commission, in its report on mental incapacity, made recommendations for legislation in a number of areas including advance statements. My noble Friend the Lord Chancellor announced on 16 January that there is to be a public consultation on the proposals in due course.

We remain wholly opposed to the legalisation of euthanasia.

Child Care

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to issue guidance to social services departments on child care following the House of Lords judgment in the H (minors) (child abuse threshold conditions) case. [9930]

Mr. Bowis: The implications of the judgment are being considered, but preliminary indications are that existing guidance on good practice is not affected by the judgment.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of carbon monoxide poisoning annually resulting in deaths and injury are (a) in rented property and (b) in owner-occupied property. [9707]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

Statistics are not available on the relative numbers of cases of carbon monoxide poisoning in rented property and in owner-occupier property. The risk of CO poisoning owing to faulty heating appliances is equally likely with any heating appliance which is not properly installed or maintained, and there are reported fatalities and injuries in the press of incidents in both types of accommodation.

PRIME MINISTER

Liverpool Dockworkers (Petition)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the recent petition presented to 10 Downing street by Liverpool dockworkers' wives. [10250]

The Prime Minister: The abolition of the dock labour scheme has enabled United Kingdom ports to take full advantage of the commercial opportunities available to them. The Mersey Docks and Harbour Company has grasped these opportunities to make the port of Liverpool one of the most successful ports in the country. Supporting this unofficial action would serve only to threaten the growing success of the port of Liverpool.

Libya

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had since 1 December 1995 with the United States Government about making approaches to Libya, with a view to ending the imposition of sanctions. [8169]

The Prime Minister: None, although we remain in close contact with the United States on this issue. Libya knows what it has to do to secure the lifting of sanctions.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Prime Minister what is the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons both in the Prime Ministers' Office and in the Cabinet Office employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any connection in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10219]

The Prime Minister: There are no officials employed on Scott inquiry related matters on a full-time or part-time basis within the Prime Minister's Office. The direct salary cost of officials within the Cabinet Office wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry from December 1992 to December 1995 is approximately £486,000. Other officials within the Prime Minister's Office and the Cabinet Office are inevitably involved from time to time; their direct salary cost is unquantifiable.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Prime Minister if he has (a) read or received and (b) authorised civil servants, Ministers or any other persons to collate or receive copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated by Sir Richard Scott to Government Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10221]

The Prime Minister: The handling of extracts of Sir Richard Scott's draft report, subject to guidance received from the inquiry, is for those to whom they are sent. The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Prime Minister if (a) staff employed by the Cabinet Office on a part-time or full-time basis and (b) David Gould, during his period of employment in the civil service have read, collated or received copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated to Government Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10220]

The Prime Minister: The question of whether Cabinet Office staff should see extracts of Sir Richard Scott's draft report is at the discretion of those to whom the inquiry has sent them.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what assurances were given by his predecessor regarding the financing of the channel tunnel; and what information he has about assurances offered by the French Government. [10116]

The Prime Minister: I am not aware that any assurances were given by my predecessor or by the French Government. From the start it was always envisaged that the channel tunnel would be an entirely private sector project, and that the concessionaires would have no recourse to Government funds or guarantees of a financial or commercial nature. That remains the position of both Governments.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Union

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to publish as a Command Paper the current treaty provisions and inter-institutional agreements governing the United Kingdom's membership of the European Union. [9839]

Mr. David Davis: A Command Paper containing the current provisions of the European Community treaty and the treaty on European Union is in preparation and will be published shortly.

Inter-institutional agreements are published in the Official Journal of the European Communities, which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the items from endangered species seized by the Hong Kong authorities in each of the last three years. [8764]

Mr. Hanley: In the last three years, most of the seizures involved (a) tourists arriving in Hong Kong or residents returning from neighbouring countries bringing stuffed specimens, tonic cuisine, pets and controlled medicines; and (b) local shops offering for sale medicines claimed to contain rhino or tiger ingredients.

Ceremonial Dress

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the cost of ceremonial dress for Her Majesty's representatives abroad in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 to date; and which countries were involved. [8767]

Mr. Hanley: Diplomatic uniform is provided to HM representatives where required by local custom and tradition.

Expenditure on diplomatic uniform in the years specified was as follows:

1993–94: £14,775
1994–95: £8,935
1995–96: £19,879 to date

The countries and dependent territories involved were Anguilla, Cayman Islands, Falkland Islands, Japan, Luxembourg, Montserrat, the Netherlands, Spain, Swaziland, Thailand and Turks and Caicos.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what items of ceremonial dress are required for Her Majesty's representative at the Holy See; and what are the itemised costs. [9176]

Mr. Hanley: Local custom requires HM representatives to the Holy See to wear full diplomatic uniform on frequent occasions.

At present, HM ambassador to the Holy See is a woman and is not required to wear uniform. Accordingly, current costs for this uniform are not available.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any connection whatsoever in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10214]

Mr. Hanley: The direct salary cost of officials within the Foreign and Commonwealth Office wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry since 1992 is approximately £197,627.00. Other officials will inevitably be involved from time to time; their direct salary cost is unquantifiable.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has (a) read, collated or received and (b) authorised civil servants or any other persons to read, collate or receive copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated by Sir Richard Scott to Government Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10216]

Mr. Hanley: The handling of extracts of Sir Richard's draft report, subject to the wishes of the inquiry, is at the discretion of those to whom they are sent. The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry; and how much has been spent on legal advice and for whom. [10215]

Mr. Hanley: The amount so far spent by my Department on external advice in relation to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry is £318,165.46. The names of the individuals and their legal advisers are confidential to them.

Marshal of the Diplomatic Corps

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give an itemised breakdown of the costs relating to the marshal of the diplomatic corps in 1994–95. [8910]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 17 January 1996]: These costs are shared between the FCO and Buckingham palace. The costs of the marshal, his staff and office borne by the FCO in 1994–95 were:

Salaries, national insurance contributions	51,110.00
Transport, travel and entertainment	14,148.13
Office equipment, supplies and sundries	4,731.22
Total	69,989.35

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidance he intends to issue to (a) departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9220]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 17 January 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Minister for Social Security and Disabled people on Monday 15 January, Official Report, column 417.

I will ensure that this Department and any bodies for which it is responsible will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Pre-school Provision

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the number and percentage of four-year-olds in (a) maintained nursery schools and nursery classes, (b) reception classes in primary schools, (c) private or voluntary sector provision and (c) pre-school provision overall. [9059]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows the breakdown between schools for four-year-olds born between 1 January 1990 and 31 August 1990. It excludes both those children who were three years old on 31 August 1994 but who were four years old on 1 January 1995, and those who were four years old on the 31 August 1994 but who were five years old on 1 January 1995—the rising fives.

A separate estimate of all children who were four years old on 1 January 1995 suggests that at that time 517,000 four-year-olds—78 per cent. of all children aged four—were attending maintained schools. We estimate that approximately 125,000 more—19 per cent. of all children aged four—were in some form of private or voluntary provision.

Pupils aged four years of age in schools in England: January 1995

School type	Pupils	Percentage of population[1]
Maintained nursery schools and nursery classes	46,058	10
Infant classes in primary schools[2]	342,395	78
Independent schools[3]	18,893	4
All schools[4]	409,451	93

[1] Full-time and part-time pupils aged four years of age at 31 August 1994 excluding pupils of compulsory school age in January 1995—the rising fives—expressed as a percentage of the relevant portion of the population aged four at 31 August 1994.
[2] Includes reception and other classes.
[3] Incudes pupils in direct grant nursery schools.
[4] Includes pupils in maintained nursery, primary and special schools, non-maintained special schools and independent schools.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance she intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which she has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if she will make a statement. [9232]

Mr. Paice: A brief guide to the Disability Discrimination Act was issued in November 1995 and further information material on the provisions of the Act will follow. We are currently consulting on a draft code of practice relating to the employment provisions in the Act and statutory guidance related to the definition of disability. Consultation on proposals for regulations under the education, employment and definition provisions of the Act is also currently underway.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security will be asking the National Disability Council, when it first meets, to produce and consult on a code of practice relating to the rights of access to goods and services. At the same time he will consult on associated regulations. All these items will be published in plenty of time to allow those with duties under the Act to prepare themselves for the introduction of the new rights. I shall ensure that the Department and any bodies for which it is responsible will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

School Transport (Disabled Children)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures are in place to ensure that the inaccessibility of school transport is not a restricting factor in integrating disabled children into mainstream schools; and if he will make a statement. [9258]

Mr. Forth: Parents of a child with a statement of special educational needs have a right to express a preference for any maintained school, mainstream or special; the local education authority must comply with that preference subject to certain conditions. One of these is that placement at the school would be compatible with the efficient use of resources, which could in some cases include the cost of transport.

The Government have recently introduced the school access initiative, which should mean that parents of disabled children have a wider choice of accessible mainstream schools. The initiative will help to reduce the need for long home-to-school journeys since one of the key criteria for demonstrating eligibility for funding is the reduction in disabled pupils' travelling times.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what sums have been spent, by grade, on staff costs for the jobseeker's allowance project in Lytham St. Annes. [9788]

Mr. Forth: The grade of staff undertaking work on the jobseeker's allowance project at Lytham St. Annes has varied depending on the work in hand. It would therefore involve disproportionate costs to provide the detailed information requested.

Around 110 staff from the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service between the grades of grade 6 to administrative assistant—or agency grade equivalents—have been involved at any one time. The salary costs since October 1994 have been £2,063,871.

There is also a contract with Information Technology Services Agency for work mainly on the JSA computer system. Staffing levels fluctuate, but about 135 people are involved. It is not possible to give the salary cost of ITSA staff since the departmental information technology/information systems financial regime means that salaries make up only part of the total paid to ITSA and are not identified separately.

Graduate Unemployment

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the level of graduate unemployment in each of the last five years. [9599]

Mr. Forth: Information on the level of unemployment amongst newly qualified graduates and among all graduates in the labour force is given in the following table:

Unemployment rates for newly qualified graduates (Great Britain)

Non-teaching Days

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will estimate the cost to the Education Service of the five non-teaching days for which teachers are contracted. [9923]

Mr. Robin Squire: Full-time teachers are employed throughout the year, although their conditions of employment provide that they must be available for work for 195 days in any school year, of which 190 days shall be days on which they may be required to teach pupils. Consequently there is no specific cost associated with the five non-teaching days.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is for each local education authority in England the total (a) number of pupils, (b) education standard spending assessment for 1995–96 and 1996–97, (c) education budget set for 1995–96 and (d) delegated schools budget for 1995–96. [8688]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows for each local education authority (a) the latest available full-time equivalent pupil numbers in LEA-maintained schools; (b) standard spending assessment allocations for 1995–96 and provisionally for 1996–97; (c) education budget set for 1995–96; and (d) the delegated schools budget for 1995–96. Pupil numbers in column (A) and delegated schools budgets in column (D) exclude pupils and funding for the grant-maintained sector, but standard spending assessments in column (B) and education budget in column (C) include provision for grant-maintained schools which are funded by recoupment from the relevant LEA.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average cost to a local education authority of employing one teacher in London for one year. [9460]

Mr. Robin Squire: The estimated average annual cost to a local education authority of employing a full-time classroom teacher in London, as at 31 March 1994, was around £24,800. This is based on the average salary for classroom teachers in LEA-maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in the Greater London area on 31 March 1994 of around £21,500 and "on costs" at 15.55 per cent. in respect of employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions. Later figures are not yet available.

Employment Service Dispute

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the dispute within the Employment Service which began on 30 November 1995; and what action she plans to take to negotiate a settlement. [9911]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Frank Field, dated 17 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the current trade dispute within the Employment Service; responsibility for pay bargaining was delegated to the Agency in January 1994.

The Agency is in dispute with the Civil and Public Services Association (CPSA) over the 1995/96 pay award to those of our employees in grades represented by that union. These ES people have been paid increases, with effect from April 1995, of between 2.8% and 5.5%, depending upon their individual performance in the year ending March 1995. The majority of them received pay rises of more than 3.7%.

These pay awards were in addition to a 2.3% increase, also paid in April, for this group of employees as a consequence of CPSA agreement to a new pay structure for the grades in question.

Whilst we regret the decision taken by the CPSA to call for industrial action amongst some of its members working in the Agency, we have been clear from the outset that the pay award for 1995/96 will not be improved. The pay award is fair, and is set at a level that is all the Agncy can afford.

We have made very real efforts to reach a settlement with the CPSA, both before the dispute started and since. This included my agreement that talks should take place under the auspices of ACAS. Those talks were called off when the CPSA decided not to adhere to the agreement we had reached that it would order its striking members back to work before the talks started.

The Employment Service remains committed to finding an early resolution to the idspute to enable us to resume our normal level of service to the job seekers who use the 47 offices currently affected by strike action. Communication channels with the union, therefore, remain open. But that does not mean we are in a position to improve upon a pay award which is both competitive and at the limits of what we can afford.

I hope this is helpful.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the (a) categories and (b) names of (i) statutory bodies, (ii) voluntary organisations or (iii) commercial contractors she has chosen, or is considering, to administer the production, distribution, and use of vouchers for financing (1) nursery education, (2) some infants in reception classes of primary schools and (3) an associated system of registration. [9964]

Mr. Robin Squire: Capita Managed Services Ltd. will administer the issue and redemption of nursery education vouchers in phase 1. Parents will be able to exchange their vouchers in maintained, private and voluntary providers participating in the scheme. It is proposed that Ofsted will inspect registered providers.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers; [6404]

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6403]

Mr. Lang: The total running cost of the DTI ministerial organisation, including Ministers' offices, parliamentary branch and the office of the permanent secretary, is as follows. Figures for the office of the President of the Board of Trade are also shown.

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
President's office	565,000	735,000	874,000	883,000	829,000
Total cost of ministerial organisation	1,840,000	2,354,000	3,225,000	3,849,000	3,898,000

[1] Costs based on current estimates.

Expenditure is not classified under all the headings specified and figures could be calculated only at disproportionate cost. Equivalent headings are shown as follows. Office refurbishment and press office are not disaggregated to the ministerial organisation: these are costed centrally.

Estimated costs for 1995–96—ministerial organisation, including parliamentary branch and the office of the permanent secretary

	Total cost of ministerial organisation	President's Office
Total running costs	3,898,000	829,000
Travel and subsistence (including ministerial car service, domestic and foreign travel)	875,000	149,000
Entertainment (includes alcoholic/non-alcoholic drinks)	52,000	10,000
Stationery	85,000	19,000
Staff costs (includes ministerial salaries)	2,377,000	582,000
Other	509,000	69,000

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cubic metres of Brazilian mahogany were imported into the United Kingdom in 1995 from Brazil. [8538]

Mr. Oppenheim: There are no official sources on imports of Brazilian mahogany into the United Kingdom. The information has not been available since 1992, when the United Kingdom trade classification no longer separately identified mahogany from other non-coniferous woods.

China

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the latest available figures for the balance of trade with China. [9028]

Mr. Oppenheim: In the 12 months ended November 1995, UK exports to China were worth £0.8 billion while imports were worth £1.9 billion, resulting in a crude trade deficit of £1.1 billion.

Post Offices

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Crown post offices there were (a) in 1990 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [9112]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand from the Post Office that the numbers of Crown post offices in the United Kingdom as at 1 April 1990 and 31 December 1995 are as indicated in the table. The number of main post offices, which offer customers the full range of post office services, are also indicated.

	Main post offices crown and agency offices	Crown post offices
1 April 1990	1,492	1,339
31 December 1995	1,518	677

Manufactures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table showing unit values for United Kingdom exports and imports of manufactures for each quarter since 1990, based on 1985=100. [9781]

Mr. Oppenheim: Information based on 1985=100 is not available. Information based on 1990=100 is published by the Central Statistical Office in the monthly review of external trade statistics, which is available in the Library of the House. It is also available on the central shared database, which may be accessed from the Library.

Manufacturing Output

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table, based on 1985=100, showing the volume of manufacturing output less fuel, food, drink and tobacco for each year since 1970. [9780]

Mr. Oppenheim: Information based on 1985=100 is not available. Information based on the standard industrial classification 1992 and 1990=100 is available from 1986 and is given in the table.

Index of production for manufacturing less fuel[1] food, drink and tobacco

Year
1986	83.7
1987	88.3
1988	95.4
1989	100.4
1990	100.0
1991	93.4
1992	92.4
1993	93.7
1994	98.2

[1] For fuel the standard industrial classification 1992 subsection DF has been used.

Trade (United States)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the likely effect on the United Kingdom balance of visible trade with the United States resulting from measures taken to eliminate the United States visible deficit. [9795]

Mr. Oppenheim: Any estimate of the likely effect on the UK balance of visible trade with the US resulting from as yet unspecified measures to eliminate the US visibles deficit is complex and dependant on a number of factors including movements in exchange rates, levels of demand in the two countries and price and income elasticities. Assessing the interaction of these and/or other factors could not be reliably undertaken except at disproportionate cost.

Competitions (Telephone Premium Rates)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make the running of pseudo-competitions using telephone premium rate lines illegal. [9899]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Premium rate telephone services are regulated by the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Information Services, ICSTIS. The ICSTIS code of practice contains a number of detailed regulations regarding these competitions and their promotion. In the light of current concerns, ICSTIS has instigated a review of competitions; the findings are expected by the end of March 1996. In the event of breaches of its code, ICSTIS has a number of sanctions—including fines and barring service providers from providing premium rate services—which are regularly invoked. I understand that a copy of the current ICSTIS code is already available in the Library of the House.

Brewing Industry

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the review by the European Commission of the block exemption of British brewers with regard to the tied house system; what steps are being taken to safeguard the interests of brewers and licensees; what assessment he has made of level of support in the European Union for the proposal to continue the exemption after 1997; and what plans Her Majesty's Government have to secure alternative provision for British brewers. [9924]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The block exemption which deals with the tie between brewer and landlord will first be considered as part of a wider debate on the treatment of distribution agreements under EC competition law. The Commission will publish a green paper on this issue later this year. Consideration of specific types of agreement such as the tie will follow on from the green paper, at which time my Department will consider the specific interests of the UK's brewing industry.

Whatever the outcome of the wider review, my Department will oppose any changes to the block exemption dealing with the tie which would result in the UK's brewers finding themselves in an unfair position compared with brewers in other member states.

Industrial Death and Retirement Scheme

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will distinguish, in each year since 1990, the amount of interest earned by payments into the industrial death and retirement fund by members and interest earned by the whole fund; [10092]

(2) what was the difference between the sum paid out as benefit from the industrial death and retirement fund in the 12 months up to its closure and the amount earned in interest by the fund in the period between 7 June 1995 and 21 October 1995; [10090]

(3) if the industrial death and retirement fund will be accepting new claims for industrial injury or disablement arising before 1 June; [10093]

(4) if actuarial reports on the industrial death and retirement fund reported on the level of contributions paid in and the amount of benefit paid out from the fund. [10091]

Mr. Page: These are matters for British Coal. I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received on the winding-up of the industrial death and retirement fund by British Coal; and if he will make a statement. [8686]

Mr. Page: The industrial death and retirement scheme—there was no fund as such—was closed by British Coal on 6 January 1995 with the agreement of the Department, due notice having been given to the trades unions involved. All representations received since then have been referred to British Coal.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what legal costs, arising from the Scott inquiry, have been incurred by the Department on behalf of current and past (a) civil servants and (b) advisers and secondees; [8747]

(2) what legal costs, arising from the Scott inquiry, have been incurred by his Department on behalf of Ministers and ex-Ministers; and if he will name the individuals concerned. [8754]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The value of legal services charged by the Treasury Solicitor's Department, with accounts settled to date from public funds for the provision of external legal services incurred on behalf of Ministers, ex-Ministers and civil servants of my Department in connection with the Scott inquiry is £293,870. No legal costs have been incurred on behalf of other advisors or secondees. The cost of any advice in connection with the Scott inquiry given by Government's lawyers as part of their normal duties cannot be quantified. It is not the Government's policy to identify the individuals who have received legal advice, either directly or indirectly.

Trade Figures

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the European countries with which the United Kingdom has (a) a trade surplus and (b) a deficit between the second quarter of 1979 and the present day. [7023]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The most recent figures for visible trade show that, between the second quarter of 1979 and the third quarter of 1995, the UK had a crude trade surplus with the Irish Republic, Spain and Greece and a crude trade deficit with Germany, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium/Luxembourg, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Austria, Portugal, Norway and Switzerland. The smaller western European countries and those of eastern Europe have been excluded because to provide the relevant figures for them would involve disproportionate cost.

Information on UK trade in invisibles prior to 1988 is not available for individual countries. Between 1988 and 1994, the UK has had an invisible surplus with Denmark, the Republic of Ireland, Italy, Iceland, Norway, Sweden and Finland and a deficit with the other countries of the EC and the European Free Trade Association.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Attorney-General if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry; and how much has been spent on legal advice and for whom. [10229]

The Attorney-General: The amount so far spent for the legal secretariat to the Law Officers and Treasury Solicitor's Department on external advice in relation to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry is £34,463. The names of the individuals and their legal advisers are confidential to them.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Attorney-General what is the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any connection in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10228]

The Attorney-General: A number of staff in my Departments work on matters related to the Scott inquiry from time to time as part of their duties and it is not possible to estimate the overall cost.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Attorney-General if he has (a) read, collated or received and (b) authorised civil servants or any other persons to read, collate or receive copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated by Sir Richard Scott to Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10230]

The Attorney-General: The handling of extracts of Sir Richard's draft report, subject to guidance received from the inquiry, is for those to whom they are sent. The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses.

Jane Dixon

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Attorney-General what was the total cost to public funds of the legal proceedings recently taken against Jane Dixon at Plymouth Crown court. [10172]

The Solicitor-General: Legal proceedings against Jane Tucker involved a number of hearings on separate occasions in the magistrates court and the Crown court. The first trial in the Crown court had to be abandoned after three days when jurors were discharged. The retrial was held over four days.

The cost to the Crown Prosecution Service in instructing counsel to appear in the Crown court was £3,388.99 and I understand that the approximate cost to the Court Service of a day's hearing in the Crown court, including judge time, is £2,040. However, in assessing the total cost to public funds of all the proceedings it is also necessary to take account of (1) the cost of proceedings in the magistrates court and the administrative prosecution costs involved in processing the case, which are not available; and (2) defence costs, which I understand have not yet been submitted for taxation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Violent Crime

14. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the increase in violent crime since 1979 (a) in London and (b) in the United Kingdom. [7861]

Mr. Howard: Since 1979, there has been an increase of 203 per cent. in the Metropolitan police district, compared with 138 per cent. in England and Wales; for the City of London police force area, recorded violent crime fell by 33 per cent. Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the respective Secretaries of State.

21. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the change in the rate of crimes of violence against the person since 1979 in (a) London and (b) England and Wales. [7869]

Mr. Howard: Since 1979, there has been an increase of 168 per cent. in the rate of crimes of violence against the person in the Metropolitan police district compared with 128 per cent. in England and Wales. But in the City of London police area, recorded crimes of violence against the person fell by 29 per cent. over the same period. The category of crime about which the hon. Gentleman has asked is different from the category in the question from his hon. Friend, the Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Gapes) which I have just answered.

Security (Lichfield)

15. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will visit Lichfield to review city centre security; and if he will make a statement. [7862]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has no immediate plans to visit Lichfield. As my hon. Friend will know, however, Lichfield was a successful bidder in last year's closed circuit television challenge competition, receiving a grant of more than £93,000. I understand that the CCTV system is due on-line in the spring. I am sure that this will provide an enhanced level of security in the city centre.

Ministerial Visits

16. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Ministers visited the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man in 1995; and what subjects were discussed. [7863]

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. and noble Friend Baroness Blatch visited the Channel Islands on 18–21 April 1995. She discussed a wide range of issues, including the islands' relationship with the European Union and fisheries.

Boot Camps

17. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the establishment of boot camps in the United Kingdom. [7864]

Miss Widdecombe: Twenty-four written or oral representations have been made by hon. Members. In addition, 113 letters are recorded as having been received from individuals and organisations expressing views both for and against the introduction of boot camps.

Obscenity and Pornography

18. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further measures he is taking to combat obscenity and pornography. [7866]

Mr. Sackville: The Government will continue to monitor the adequacy and effectiveness of our controls on obscene and pornographic material. To this end, the interdepartmental group on obscenity is currently looking at the dissemination of, and ways of controlling access to, pornography on computer networks.

Wheel Clamping

19. Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on current policy regarding wheel clamping on private land; and what proposals he has in this regard. [7867]

Mr. Maclean: The Government believe that wheelclamping can be a sensible and effective means of controlling parking on private land if it is carried out responsibly, taking proper account of the legitimate rights and interests of motorists. In other circumstances it can given rise to problems.

The Government are considering what action, if any, should be taken to deal with these problems.

Metropolitan Police

20. Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the size of the Metropolitan police service and the resources available to it. [7868]

Mr. Howard: The Government are making available £1.65 billion to the Metropolitan police in 1996–97—£20.5 million more than last year. In addition, the 2 per cent. ceiling on the amount the Metropolitan police can carry forward from one year to the next has been removed. This is likely to be worth an extra £25 million on top of the existing maximum of £34 million. I have not yet received the Commissioner's detailed expenditure proposals for 1996–97, but I expect to see even more officers deployed on the streets of London during 1996–97.

Crime (Women's Fears)

22. Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated of the fear of crime among women. [7870]

Mr. Maclean: There are 11 publications on this subject and I have arranged for a list of these, together with copies of the actual studies to be lodged in the House of Commons Library.

25. Ms Church: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to combat the fear of crime among women. [7874]

Mr. Maclean: We are aware that women are generally more fearful of becoming victimes of crime, and for that reason women can be seen as the primary interest group in our crime prevention activities.

The best way to tackle fear of crime is to tackle crime itself. We continue to pursue a comprehensive strategy to combat crime, through the second phase of the partnership campaign which was launched this month; through the provision of practical advice on measures which people can take to help keep themselves safe; and through the use of technology, such as closed circuit television. The Home Secretary recently announced a new competition which will inject another £15 million into CCTV schemes up and down the country.

We are also aware of the need to tackle domestic violence; and we have established inter-departmental groups at official and ministerial level to promote a co-ordinated response to the problem at a national and local level. And the recent public awareness campaign placed the issue firmly on the public agenda.

Last year the Government published an interagency circular on domestic violence which set out the Government's approach to the issue and encouraged a more co-ordinated response to the problem by local agencies.

Police Station Closures

23. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of the numbers of police station closures and downgradings since 1987; and if he will make a statement. [7872]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not collected centrally.

Holloway Prison

24. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of conditions at (a) Holloway prison and (b) other prisons at which women prisoners are being held. [7873]

Miss Widdecombe: The current conditions at Holloway have been brought to the attention of my right hon. and learned Friend by the Chief Inspector of Prisons. He expressed grave concern over a restricted regime, poor hygiene and cleanliness, poor standards of health care, low staff morale and the general management of the establishment.

I have asked the temporary Director General of the Prison Service to add to steps already taken before the chief inspector's visit to bring the establishment up to an acceptable operational standard.

Livestock Rustling

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had about the incidence of livestock rustling; and how many such offences have been reported to the police in recent years. [9714]

Mr. Maclean: One hon. Friend has written, and one hon. Member has asked a previous question about the theft of livestock.

Statistics on the theft of livestock are not held centrally.

Anti-crime Measures

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the contribution to combating crime arising from the introduction of (a) the national DNA database and (b) closed circuit television; and what plans he has to expand the scope of each. [9690]

Mr. Maclean: The national DNA database was launched in April 1995. On 17 January 1996, the database held over 23,000 DNA profiles and 284 matches had been made between suspects and scenes of crime, or between one scene of crime and another. Of these matches, 15 were across police force boundaries.

The Government welcome the developing use of closed circuit television in the fight against crime. The experience of CCTV operators and the police is that CCTV can make a significant contribution to the prevention and detection of crime and to reduction of the fear of crime.

In order to help further expand the use of CCTV, my right hon. and learned Friend recently announced that £15 million had been made available for another CCTV challenge competition. Our aim is to place 10,000 more CCTV cameras on the streets of Britain over the next three years.

Parish Special Constables

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many parish special constables are now in place, and in which counties or police areas; how many he expects to be in place by 30 June 1996; and if he will make a statement. [9710]

Mr. Maclean: The parish special constable initiative has been extended to include urban areas and the volunteers involved are now known nationally as neighbourhood special constables. Neighbourhood special constables spend the majority of their time on duty on foot patrol either alone or as part of a policing team within an agreed neighbourhood or geographic area more limited than that in which other special constabulary colleagues are deployed. According to police force returns 1,595 special constables in England and Wales are neighbourhood specials. A breakdown of the numbers by police force areas is recorded in the table.

It is for chief officers to recruit or designate volunteers as neighbourhood special constables, and a forecast for 30 June 1996 cannot be provided. Our initial target for forces of 1,000 neighbourhood special constables by the end of 1995 has been met and we believe that the target of 3,000 by the end of 1996 will also be achieved.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what difficulties (a) he has experienced or (b) have been reported to him, regarding the development of a network of parish special constables; and if he will make a statement. [9711]

Mr. Maclean: Last September, the Home Office published the results of research into the parish constables initiative, with particular attention given to four schemes at Ironville, Derbyshire; Pembury in Kent; Sleights in North Yorkshire; and Yetminster in Dorset. A copy of the report entitled "The Parish Special Constables Scheme" has been placed in the Library. This was a close look at the initiative in its early days and the study identified a number of important issues; such as the importance of selecting the right person for the job, consultation with local people, and good links with the regular police.

When the initiative was subsumed by that of the neighbourhood special constable in autumn 1994, a proportion of the public mistakenly believed that neighbourhood constables were to be regular officers. This has been addressed by the inclusion of "special" in their title and recent advertising. In addition, some police forces have been slow to identify any of their specials as neighbourhood special constables even though they may perform the neighbourhood special role. This has caused some difficulty in recording accurately the number of specials who undertake neighbourhood specials' duties.

Internet

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on any proposed meeting with Internet service providers to discuss current laws and regulations concerning the use of the Internet. [9680]

Mr. Sackville: The interdepartmental group on obscenity is currently considering the issue of pornographic material disseminated via computer networks, such as the Internet, and it has arranged a meeting with the Internet service providers in the United Kingdom to discuss the possible measures which can be taken to control access to such material.

The general issue of regulation of the Internet and other computer networks is a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Police Houses

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police houses have been sold since 1990; what is his estimate of (a) the number and (b) the proportion of these sales in rural areas and villages; and if he will make a statement on future plans and expected trends in sales; [9712]

(2) what representations he has had about the sale of police houses in rural areas and the consequences of such sales for the number of resident police constables; and if he will make a statement. [9713]

Mr. Maclean: Information about sales over the period specified is not readily available. Figures published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy indicate that the number of police houses in England and Wales fell by 3,282 between 1 April 1990 and 1 April 1995. Estimates of numbers and proportions of sales in rural areas and villages could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by making inquiries of each police force. We will continue to encourage the police to dispose of surplus housing in the interests of efficiency and value for money, but these are budgetary and operational matters for local decision.

We receive from time to time representations, most recently from my hon. Friend, about the operational implications of the sale of police houses in rural areas. The deployment of officers within forces is a matter for chief constables but the most effective use of resources within a particular area can often be achieved by deploying officers from a central command point.

Police Response Times

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) recommendations and (b) requirements exist for police response times in rural areas; and what percentage of calls do not meet these response times. [9715]

Mr. Maclean: One of the Audit Commission's citizens charter police performance indicators requires the setting of target times for incidents which require an immediate response. The setting of these targets is a local matter, and some forces choose to set separate targets for rural areas. The latest targets, and performance against them, are published in the report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary 1994–95, a copy of which is in the Library.

Car Dealers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans she has to increase the penalties for car dealers who repeatedly sell cars in a dangerous condition. [9867]

Mr. Maclean: The maximum penalty for an offence of selling or offering to sell an unroadworthy vehicle is a fine of £5,000. We have no plans to increase this penalty at present.

Libya (Extradition)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to initiate an extradition treaty with Libya. [8168]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Government have no plans to do so.

Football Clubs (Arrests)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made inside London Premiership and Football League clubs in each of the last three complete seasons and season 1995–96 to date. [8915]

Mr. Maclean: According to records held by the National Criminal Intelligence Service football unit, the numbers of arrests inside London Premiership and League clubs in the relevant seasons are as follows:

1992–93: 245

1993–94: 244

1994–95: 334

1995–96: 155 (to date).

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has (a) read or received and (b) authorised civil servants or any other persons to collate or receive copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated by Sir Richard Scott to Government Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10209]

Mr. Howard: No.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any connection in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10210]

Mr. Howard: There are no officials in my Department wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry. Some officials are involved on an occasional basis as part of their normal duties; the direct salary cost is unquantifiable.

Thames Valley Police

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the budget set by the Thames Valley police both in cash and in real terms, and the number of police officers and civilians employed by the Thames Valley police in each of the last 16 years. [9293]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The information requested is in the tables:

Year	Number of police officers employed by Thames Valley police	Number of civilians employed by Thames Valley police
31 March 1980	2,802	984
31 March 1981	3,093	1,016
31 March 1982	3,098	1,023

Until 1993–94 the authority's original budgets were prepared at a November price base (i.e. November 1992 for the 1993–94 estimates). From 1994–95 onwards the authority's original budgets were produced at outturn prices.

Charges by Bailiffs

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what regulations apply on the levying of charges by bailiffs against individuals from whom they are charged to collect fines. [9113]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I have been asked to reply. Where a magistrates' court seeks to enforce payment of a fine by issuing a distress warrant and directing it to a bailiff, the levying of charges by the bailiff for the execution of the distress warrant is governed by section 78 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, as amended by section 46 of the Criminal Justice Act 1982, and by rule 54 of the Magistrates' Courts Rules 1981.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5856]

Sir John Wheeler: The information available is as follows:

1991–92: £367,000[1]

1992–93: £420,000[1]

1993–94: £1,406,000

1994–95: £1,543,000[1]

1995–96: £653,000 to date.

[1] Includes purchase of new vehicles.

The 1991–92 and 1992–93 figures are not available for cars used by the Northern Ireland Office, London or for the Northern Ireland Office, Belfast contract cars.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is her estimate of the total cost for herself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. [6390]

Sir John Wheeler: The information could be supplied in the format requested only at disproportionate cost. However, the overall cost of ministerial travel including the cost of escort cars and of ministerial support staff is as follows.

1991–92: £1,340,000

1992–93: £1,315,000

1993–94: £1,363,000[1]

1994–95: £1,460,000[1]

1995–96: £1,432,000[1]

[1] Figures for 1993–94—1995–96 include accommodation costs for the Secretary of State in London.

Action for Community Employment

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to reduce funding for ACE projects; what is the estimated saving to public funds; if there is still recruitment to ACE schemes; how the proposals will be implemented; what representations on ACE funding he has received in the past two months; and if he will make a statement. [8972]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for this subject has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 16 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency to reply to your questions about the Action for Community Employment (ACE) programme.

As you know, on Monday 11 December 1995 the Secretary of State announced details of the Public Expenditure Plans for Northern Ireland for 1996/97 and the following two years. The announcement referred to the very encouraging performance of the Northern Ireland economy with unemployment now at its lowest level for 14 years and employment at record levels. He mentioned also the promise of substantial jobs from recently announced investments by major companies.

Against that background the Secretary of State indicated a reduction in the funding for the ACE programme (which amounts to £12.5 million in 1996/97) to meet pressures in top priority programmes aimed at promoting self-sustaining economic growth. The targeting of available resources in this way will best meet the needs of the unemployed in the longer term.

This Agency has recently written to the Chairpersons of ACE schemes to indicate the level of reduction required in each scheme to ensure that the programme operates within the resources available to it in 1996/97. Following consultations with a variety of sponsors and others with an interest in ACE, the Agency has agreed to allow ACE sponsors to determine how best they might achieve the reduction either individually or collectively. The Agency has also lifted the freeze on further recruitment into the programme which was imposed temporarily to facilitate an orderly contraction of the programme.

With regard to representations, I met before Christmas several voluntary and community organisations which operate ACE schemes to discuss how the reduction could be best achieved. On 10 January I met a delegation from Belfast City Council. There has been a flurry of correspondence also with Baroness Denton and myself. The Minister plans to meet public representatives later this month.

I hope that you find this reply useful. I will of course be pleased to provide further information if you would find it helpful.

Gun Licences

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what grounds a gun licence may be refused. [8689]

Sir John Wheeler: Under the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981, a firearm certificate shall not be granted unless the Chief Constable is satisfied that:

the firearm could be held without danger to public safety or to the peace; or the applicant is fitted to hold a firearm; or the applicant has 'good reason' for the firearm; or the applicant is not prohibited from holding a firearm by virtue of article 22 of the order;

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications for gun licences have been made in each of the last five years; and how many have been refused and for what reasons. [8644]

Sir John Wheeler: Applications for firearm certificates in the last five years are as follows:

	Applications	Refusals
1991	2,857	343
1992	2,975	561
1993	3,496	474
1994	3,799	615
1995 (to 30 November)	2,985	510

Firearm certificates are refused in accordance with the criteria specified in article 28 of the Firearms (NI) Order 1981. A breakdown to show the reason for each refusal would incur disproportionate cost.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many gun licences are currently in existence; for how many guns; and what is the breakdown (a) of these weapons by (i) type and (ii) declared purpose and (b) of the licence holders by (1) background and (2) location. [8643]

Sir John Wheeler: At 30 November 1995 there were 88,092 firearm certificates in Northern Ireland on which 133,869 weapons were held.

	Number
Shotguns	85,204
Pistols and revolvers	13,044
Rifles	13,777
Air weapons	21,004
Miscellaneous[1]	840

[1] Includes humane killers, signal pistols, starting pistols, collectors items and spear guns.

Information regarding the declared purposes for which the firearms were sought and the background and location of certificate holders, is not held separately and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Grant

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Housing Executive expects to complete its next review of the costings it employs in determining the amount of grant aid to be paid under its housing grant schemes; when the last review was completed; and when the present level of costings was applied to the determination of these schemes. [9122]

Mr. Moss: It is assumed that the costings in question refer to the schedule of rates which the Northern Ireland Housing Executive uses to draw up an estimate of the cost of grant-aided works. This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive whose chief executive has advised me that costings are monitored and adjusted if necessary, on an ongoing basis, and are reviewed annually. The next annual review is due in April 1996. The last review was completed in, and implemented from, April 1995 and forms the basis of the present costings.

Education Administration

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which political parties and other bodies he has met to discuss reforms of educational administration; and when he intends to announce his proposals. [8638]

Mr. Ancram: The present round of consultation on educational administration which I announced in my statement of 7 September has been limited to the main political parties in Northern Ireland. Meetings have been held with the following:

The Alliance Party of Northern Ireland

The Social Democratic and Labour Party

Mr. R. McCartney QC MP—United Kingdom Unionist

The Conservative Party

Sinn Fein

Democratic Left

The Workers' Party

The Ulster Democratic Party

Labour in Northern Ireland

Meetings are also planned to take place with the Ulster Unionist party, the Democratic Unionist party and the Progressive Unionist party.

Decisions will be announced only after I have given full consideration to all the views put to me; it is therefore not possible at this time to be specific as to the date of such an announcement.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement. [9141]

Sir John Wheeler: Staff in agencies of the Northern Ireland Departments have access to the pre-retirement courses provided by the management development centre—MDC—of the Department of Finance and Personnel, which are supported by the chief executives and which are planned to continue for the foreseeable future.

Agencies of the Northern Ireland Office attend pre-retirement courses provided by its training and development branch; these courses are, and will continue to be, demand-led. Staff also have access to the pre-retirement courses provided by MDC.

Wind Farms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a map showing all present and projected wind farms in Northern Ireland and all 33 kV electricity supply lines which are planned for construction within three miles of such sites over the next three years or as much information and for such periods as is available to him. [9124]

Mr. Ancram: A map showing the detailed information requested is not available. A drawing indicating the general location of present and projected wind farms and associated 33 kV lines has been placed in the Library. Northern Ireland Electricity plc has no firm plans to construct additional 33 kV lines within three miles of known wind farm sites.

Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what review he has carried out into the boundaries of areas of outstanding natural beauty in Northern Ireland; and when he expects to publish the results. [9123]

Mr. Moss: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has been reviewing the boundaries of areas of outstanding natural beauty since the introduction of the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Northern Ireland) Order 1985. This legislation gives AONBs a broader conservation objective than the Amenity Lands Act (Northern Ireland) 1965 under which nine AONBs were originally designated.

To date four AONBs have been reviewed and redesignated under the new legislation. In each case there has been extensive public consultation both on the boundaries and on Government policies and proposals for each area. Presently a review of the Strangford Lough AONB is underway and the Department has commissioned a landscape assessment prior to commencing a review of the Sperrin and North Derry AONBs.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated level of Government financial support for each local authority, and for Northern Ireland as a whole in constant prices for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97, indicating the percentage yearly change in each case and the overall cumulative change (i) net of community care and (ii) including community care. [8888]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 17 January 1996]: It is not possible to provide the information exactly in the form requested, as the provision of community care in Northern Ireland is the responsibility of health and social services boards rather than local authorities. The chart shows the estimated level of the financial support paid by the Department of the Enviornment for Northern Ireland, by means of general Exchequer grant, to each of the 26 district councils in Northern Ireland. Other Northern Ireland Departments also make specific grants to district councils to assist both capital and revenue programmes relating to such matters as the arts, sports and tourism.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider making a substantial increase in the additional state retirement pension paid to pensioners over 80 years of age; and if he will make a statement. [9152]

Mr. Heald: We have no plans to uprate the 25p addition which is paid to all pensioners from the age of 80. The income support scheme also provides from that age a higher pensioner premium which is increased regularly.

This premium, we believe, is of far more help to pensioners on low incomes, and a more effective use of resources, than increasing the existing 25p age addition for all pensioners aged 80 and over regardless of individual need.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employees have been dismissed from each Child Support Agency centre since its creation. [8119]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 16 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about staff dismissed from Child Support Agency Centres.

Staff can be dismissed for a variety of reasons ranging from failure to meet the required performance standards during probation, through inefficiency and up to misconduct.

The figures for staff dismissed in each Child Support Agency Centre (CSAC) since its creation in April 1993 are as follows:

CSAC	Number of dismissals
Plymouth	16
Hastings	9
Birkenhead	5
Dudley	23
Falkirk	23

The figures do not include any information on staff dismissed within the Belfast CSAC. This is because staffing issues at this CSAC are the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the effect on maintenance collected to be set against public funds of taking on the Child Support Agency cases deferred in December 1994. [8140]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 16 January 1996:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the effect on maintenance collected to be set against public funds of taking on the Child Support Agency cases deferred in December 1994.

As you are aware at that time the Agency deferred taking on an estimated 340,000 cases. The Secretary of State set the Agency a milestone target to commence the take on of these cases by the end of 1995. We started taking on the remaining cases in November last year, but in practice had already started to deal with many of them where the parent with care had asked us to do so.

Until the absent parent's circumstances are known it would be impossible to produce a meaningful estimate of the effect of taking on these cases on public funds. We could only do this by examining every deferred case that has subsequently been assessed. These would be impossible to identify.

In practice we do not believe the effect on public funds will be very great because a significant number of the deferred cases will be those in which the parent with care had no incentive to pursue their application because the absent parent was on income support.

Deferring the take on of these cases enabled us to concentrate on new cases and those that were more likely to result in a positive outcome for the parent with care and the general taxpayer. We believe that this approach will have been of overall benefit to public funds.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many complaints have been made to the Child Support Agency since its inception; how many complaints have been upheld; in how many cases financial compensation has been paid and on what grounds; and what have been the amounts paid in each case and in total. [7817]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Dr. Tony Wright, dated 16 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about complaints made to the Child Support Agency.

Since the inception of the Agency in April 1993 up to the end of November 1995, the Agency has recorded 60,826 complaints. A significant proportion of those complaints concern general child support policy or the legal powers of the Agency. Many of the complaints are from persons who are opposed to the legislation but not actually affected by it. The number of complaints specifically about the Agency's administrative performance is not separately identified, but it is considerably less than the global figure shown above. All complaints on agency administration are investigated although specific information on the number subsequently upheld is not collected.

Only a small proportion of complaints include a query about or request for financial compensation. Under our Departmental scheme a special payment will be considered where a clear unambiguous error by the Agency has resulted in an actual financial loss to the client. The attached table shows the categories under which special payments have been made, the number of payments made and the total cost of those payments.

I hope this is helpful.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what considerations he has given to replacing cold weather payments with an increase in income support; and if he will make a statement. [8448]

Mr. Roger Evans: Income support provides for all normal day-to-day living needs including heating. The amount of benefit is based on personal allowances paid according to age and family status and flat rate premiums for groups recognised as having special needs, such as disabled and elderly people and families. Benefit rates are reviewed each year and account is taken of all relevant factors, including any increase in the cost of fuel.

Social fund cold weather payments give extra help to vulnerable people towards heating costs from a sustained period of very cold weather. There are no plans to change the current arrangements.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a cold weather payment to everyone receiving benefit every winter, irrespective of temperature; and if he will make a statement. [8418]

Mr. Evans: The purpose of cold weather payments is to help vulnerable income support recipients with higher heating costs resulting from a sustained period of very cold weather not normally expected to occur in the majority of British winters. A reasonable indication of this is when the average temperature is, or is forecast to be 0 deg. C—freezing point—or below over seven consecutive days. To pay all people receiving benefits, many of whom may not have experienced a sustained cold spell, would not be an effective way of focusing the available resources on those most in need.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reassess the appropriateness of the system for triggering cold weather payments, with particular reference to the distance between the weather stations and the areas in which payments are made; and if he will make a statement. [8417]

Mr. Evans: After the end of March each year, the Department reviews the effectiveness of the weather station links used during the winter, through liaison and consultation with the Meteorological Office and changes are made if necessary. Weather stations are chosen by the Meteorological Office which are considered representative of the areas they cover, and are sophisticated and reliable enough to provide the quality of data required for the scheme. We are content that the current network of 55 weather stations provides straightforward and effective national coverage which at the same time takes reasonable and practicable account of local conditions.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider appointing local committees to determine the payment of cold weather payments on basis of need. [8419]

Mr. Evans: No. Our aim for the social fund cold weather payment scheme is to have a simple network of weather stations that covers the whole country and allows automatic payments to be made quickly to those most in need. We achieve this by using weather stations chosen by the Meteorological Office which are considered representative of the postcode areas they cover, and are sophisticated and reliable enough to provide the quality of data required for the scheme. The current network of 55 weather stations provides straightforward and effective national coverage which at the same time takes reasonable and practicable account of local conditions. Local committees would bring inequities into a national scheme which is administered efficiently and effectively.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the suitability of Mumbles for assessing temperatures for cold weather payments so far as the upper areas of the Aberavon constituency are concerned. [10117]

Mr. Evans: We are content that the current network of 55 weather stations used for the cold weather payment scheme, including Mumbles, provides straightforward and effective national coverage which at the same time takes reasonable and practicable account of local conditions. The effectiveness of all the weather station links used during the winter is reviewed by the Department, through liaison and consultation with the Meteorological Office, after the end of March each year when the scheme ends. If changes to the station links are considered necessary, they are put in place in time for when the scheme operates again in November.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which stations used for assessing temperatures for the triggering of cold weather payments did not register sufficiently cold weather since 1 January 1996. [10118]

Mr. Evans: The temperatures recorded at the following weather stations used in the cold weather payment scheme have not triggered cold weather payments for a period including 1 January 1996 or later:

Pensioners' Incomes

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of pensioners are identified as receiving income from an occupational pension; and what is the mean and median amount received for the latest year for which figures are available. [10199]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to table 4 of "The Pensioners' Income Series 1993", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was (a) the mean and (b) the median income of (i) single pensioners and (ii) pensioner couples before and after housing costs in the latest year for which figures are available. [10201]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to table 1 of "The Pensioners' Income Series 1993", a copy of which is available in the Library.

War Pensions Agency

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what specific diseases or illnesses the War Pensions Agency recognises as being caused by exposure to the nerve agent Tabun during the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment when it awards pensions. [9046]

Mr. Heald: The war pensions scheme does not involve the recognition or prescription of specific diseases or illnesses.

A war pension may be awarded for any disablement which is attributable to or aggravated by service in the armed forces, including voluntary participation in any test programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down.

Benefits (Non-dependent Deductions)

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the savings from changes to non-dependent deduction rates since April 1994, indicating the figures on an annual cumulative basis (a) for 1994–95 and projected figures for (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97. [9390]

Mr. Roger Evans: The savings from changes to the non-dependent deduction rates in income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit since April 1994 are estimated as (a) £60 million in 1994–95, (b) £110 million in 1995–96, and (c) £155 million in 1996–97 on an annual cumulative basis.

Notes:

1. Results have been estimated using data drawn from the family expenditure survey, uprated to the prices and benefit levels of each relevant policy year.
2. Expenditure is rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Housing Benefit (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many council, private and housing association tenants in the area covered by Easington district council are in receipt of housing benefit. [9501]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Number of housing benefit recipients for Easington district council: May 1995

	Total	Local authority tenants	Private tenants	Housing association tenants
Number of recipients	12,310	10,190	960	1,170

Source:

Housing Benefit Management Information System, quarterly case load count taken at the end of May 1995.

Notes:

1. The figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.
2. The figures refer to the number of benefit units which may be a single person or a couple.
3. The total figure does not sum due to rounding.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Concessionary Television Licenses

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has in place to review concessions on television licences for people who are housebound due to disability; and if she will make a statement. [9367]

Mr. Sproat: The concessionary television licence is available to retirement pensioners and disabled people living in nursing or residential homes, or certain sheltered accommodation, provided that it meets a number of qualifying criteria and is directly comparable with a residential home. The Government have no plans to extend the circumstances in which concessionary television licences are available.

National Lottery

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what advice her Department provided to the Director General of the National Lottery relating to his appearance before the Public Accounts Committee. [9561]

Mr. Sproat: Officials gave general advice to the director general before his appearance before the PAC on a number of occasions. For the avoidance of doubt, this advice did not include anything about the matter of G-Tech flights.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when Ministers first learned of the use of G-Tech aircraft by the Director General of the National Lottery. [9560]

Mr. Sproat: On 11 December 1995.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions were held between the Director General of the National Lottery and (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department on the use of G-Tech aircraft by the director general in the period 4 to 11 December 1995; and what advice the director general was given about the declaration of these flights to (a) the National Audit Office and (b) the Public Accounts Committee. [9583]

Mr. Sproat: None.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what was the cash limit on voted provision for the Office of the National Lottery in 1995–96; and what was the outturn expenditure; [8616]

(2) on what dates section 6 licences for the lottery were granted; how many applied for each licence; and what was the Director General of the National Lottery's role in the granting of these licences; [8610]

(3) in what circumstances the Director General of the National Lottery may discuss with applicants ways in which they might have restructured their applications to facilitate achieving his objectives. [8613]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: This is an operational matter for the Office of the National Lottery. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the right hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the process of selection for the Director General of the National Lottery; from how many applicants the appointment was made; on what date; and by whom. [8617]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: The director general was appointed in accordance with recruitment arrangements which met the guidance set out in the civil service management code. An open advertisement was placed in the press. A shortlist of five candidates were interviewed following advice from a personnel search company and the First Civil Service Commissioner. Mr. Peter Davis was formally appointed as director general on 25 October 1993 by the then Secretary of State for National Heritage.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she cleared all briefings related to Oflot provided by her press office to journalists in December 1995. [8681]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: There have been no briefings to journalists provided by my press office related to Oflot outside normal contact with the media.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what rules governing conduct have been laid down for the Director General of the National Lottery; and by whom and when. [8679]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: Rules governing the conduct of the Director General of the National Lottery were set out in his appointment letter and attachments signed by the then Secretary of State for National Heritage, and dated 25 October 1993.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if an estimate has been made of the cost of chartering an aircraft and crew similar to that provided by G-Tech's aircraft for a period during which that was at the service of the Director General of the National Lottery. [8615]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: No.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what date the Department asked the Director General of the National Lottery to attend a meeting with senior officials at the Department on Monday 18 December. [8881]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: On Friday 15 December 1995.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what date, in what form, by whom and to whom the Department was first informed that G-Tech had offered use of its private aircraft to the Director General of the National Lottery. [8880]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer he received on 10 January 1996, Official Report, column 253.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage in what circumstances she can dismiss the Director General of the National Lottery (a) with minimum contractual notice and (b) summarily; and what is the minimum contracted notice. [8680]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: Paragraph 1(4) of schedule 2 to the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 provides that the Director General of the National Lottery may be removed from office on the grounds of incapacity or misbehaviour. In the absence of grounds for summary dismissal, the director general's contract may be terminated on six months' notice.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what date, by whom and in what way the Director General of the National Lottery was informed of her Department's advice that his flight and accommodation costs should not be borne by his hosts; and on how many occasions such advice was given. [8678]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: An internal note of an informal liaison meeting on 4 August 1994 records that the grade 3 head of the arts, sports and lottery group said that, for the proposed US trip, all due propriety should be observed and that the cost of flights and accommodation should be borne by Oflot and not its hosts. This is the only record of such advice. The note was not sent to Oflot.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her oral answer of 20 December, Official Report, column 1535, what estimate has been made, and by whom, of the saving to the taxpayer resulting from the Director General of the National Lottery's use of G-Tech aircraft; and how the sum is made up. [8614]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: I have made no estimate of the savings to public funds from use of the G-Tech aircraft by the Director General of the National Lottery.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what have been the total costs of (a) setting up and (b) running Oflot since its inception. [8911]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 17 January 1996]: This is an operational matter for the Office of the National Lottery. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Arts Council

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) when she last met the chairman or officials of the Arts Council of England to discuss the reduction in its grant in aid for 1996–97; and if she will make a statement; [9699]

(2) if she will publish figures for the cumulative change in the Arts Council for England grant in aid on an actual or estimated basis for each year from 1993–94 to 1998–99, in both cash and real terms; [9696]

(3) what representations she has received about the impact of the reduction of the Arts Council of England grant for 1996–97 on (a) reopened theatres, (b) small and medium-scale touring theatres, (c) regional ballet and opera companies, (d) regional orchestras, (e) dance training, (f) small-scale publishing and (g) the network of art galleries subsidised through the Arts Council and regional arts boards; [9700]

(4) if she will publish figures for the grant in aid to the Arts Council for 1993–94 to 1996–97 and estimates for 1997–98 to 1998–99, in cash terms, the annual change for each year in cash and real terms and the relative percentage changes. [9697]

Mr. Sproat: The figures requested are as follows:

Arts Council of England grant in aid

£ million

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Cash	[1]189.15	185.99	191.13	186.13	182.93	182.93
Annual cash change	—	(3.16) (1.7 per cent.)	5.14 2.8 per cent.	(5.00) (2.6 per cent.)	(3.20) (1.7 per cent.)	0.00 (0 per cent.)
1994–95 prices	192.70	185.99	186.02	176.30	169.05	165.33
Annual real terms change	—	(6.71) (3.5 per cent.)	0.03 (0 per cent.)	(9.70) (5.2 per cent.)	(7.25) (4.1 per cent.)	(3.72) (2.2 per cent.)
Cash change from 1993–94	—	(3.16) (1.7 per cent.)	1.98 1.0 per cent.	(3.02) (1.6 per cent.)	(6.22) (3.3 per cent.)	(6.22) (3.3 per cent.)
Real terms change from 1993–94	—	(6.71) (3.5 per cent.)	(6.68) (3.5 per cent.)	(16.4) 8.5 per cent.)	(23.65) (12.3 per cent.)	(27.37) (14.2 per cent.)

[1] The Arts Council of England came into being in April 1995. The sum shown for 1993–94 is that attributable to England from the grant-in-aid to the Arts Council of Great Britain.

The Secretary of State and I have received a number of representations from arts organisations and individuals about the allocation of grant in aid for the Arts Council of England which was announced last November. The Arts Council will not allocate its grant in aid to its client bodies until the council meets on 24 January. The Secretary of State has discussed these matters with the chairman of the Arts Council on a number of occasions since November.

BBC (Transmission Services)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the present running costs of transmission services operated (a) by the BBC and (b) by companies in the private sector currently serving ITV, Channel 4 and commercial radio. [9865]

Mr. Sproat: Our consultants, led by Hill Samuel, assessed the cost of transmission to both the BBC and the commercial broadcasters.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the effect on the charges to the BBC for its transmission services of the privatisation of those services. [9866]

Mr. Sproat: Our consultants, led by Hill Samuel, assessed the effect of privatisation on the cost to the BBC of transmission services. We have determined that the Office of Telecommunications will regulate the costs of any private sector supplier with which the BBC subsequently contracts to provide transmission services, to ensure that the cost to the corporation of its current transmission services does not increase in real terms.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if the privatisation of BBC transmission facilities will lead to separation of World Service transmitter operations from domestic operations. [9863]

Mr. Sproat: That is a matter to be determined in preparing for the privatisation.

BBC Digital Terrestrial Services

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the BBC's development of digital terrestrial radio and television. [9864]

Mr. Sproat: The BBC is playing a crucial role in the development of digital terrestrial radio and television. It began to broadcast its five national radio services in digital form on 27 September 1995. It is working with the Independent Television Commission on detailed frequency planning for the launch of digital terrestrial television, and is an active member of the Digital Television Group, an industry body seeking to co-ordinate the technical and commercial development of digital terrestrial television.

We have offered the BBC exclusive use of the digital television multiplex which will provide the greatest geographical coverage in the UK. This gives the BBC the opportunity to be at the forefront of digital technology, and to maintain and develop its public service remit into the 21st century. It enables them to make firm plans for that multiplex, and I understand that these may include widescreen versions of BBC1 and BBC2, complemented by new services, perhaps encompassing additional news, sport and parliamentary coverage and an enhanced Ceefax service.

Windsor Castle

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her latest estimate of the cost to public funds arising from the fire and restoration of Windsor castle. [8907]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The current estimated cost of the Windsor castle fire restoration is £36 million, of which £10.8 million will be met from public funds.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the secretary of State for National Heritage what costs her Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9748]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The Department of National Heritage and its executive agencies have not incurred any costs as a result of withdrawing from contracts for mobile phones.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what agreements her Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9746]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The Department of National Heritage and its executive agencies have agreements with Cruse Technical Services and AutoRentals for the provision of mobile phones. The Department currently has contracts with 11 air-time providers.

Provider	Number of mobiles on line
Mercury	4
Vodafone	25
Vodacom	9
Cellnet	14
Uniqueair	14
BT Mobile	13
Peoples Phone	2
Motorola	7
Hutchinson Telecommunications	3
Orange	1
TalkLand	4

All contracts are of one-year duration. There is no cost to public funds for any of the contracts that are currently held beyond standard rental and call charges.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what procedures were used by her Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to her Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9747]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 17 January 1996]: All contracts for the provision of mobile phones are let according to standard Government guidelines on procurement. Quotations have been sought from a range of companies, including but not limited to: Mercury, BT Mobile, Cellnet, Vodac, London Car Telephones, Uniqueair, Peoples Phone and Vodafone.

DEFENCE

Research and Development Projects

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many research and development projects in universities are currently being funded by his Department; how much these projects are worth; and in how many universities these projects are being funded. [9042]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In 1993–94, the last year for which research expenditure figures are available, it estimated that some £33 million was spent with universities and further education establishments—table 1.5, UK Defence Statistics 1995. Currently, we have research agreements with some 70 such institutions. It is not possible to provide a detailed breakdown of the number of projects covered by these agreements without incurring disproportionate cost. Expenditure on development is mainly with industry.

RAF Finningley

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what offers for the non-military use of RAF Finningley have been received. [9859]

Mr. Soames: To date, 38 recorded expressions of interest have been received ranging from interest to individual buildings and plots of land to interest in the whole site. The details of the persons and companies involved is commercially confidential. We hope to commence full marketing of the site within the next few months.

Ballistic Missiles

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the extent of the threat posed to the United Kingdom by the development over the next decade of ballistic missile capability by countries which currently have no such capability. [10267]

Mr. Soames: We consider it unlikely that any nation aspiring towards a ballistic missile capability will be able to develop systems capable of threatening the UK mainland within the next 10 years. However, there is no room for complacency and we will continue our efforts, with others, to halt the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery, and will keep the situation under careful review.

Gulf War (Costs)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the final cost of major equipment lost and munitions consumed in the Gulf war and in associated training. [8765]

Mr. Soames: The cost of major equipment lost and of munitions and minor items consumed in the Gulf conflict which were not replaced was £245 million. These costs are included in the current estimate of additional military costs of the Gulf conflict to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the total costs arising from British involvement in the Gulf war. [8766]

Mr. Soames: The current estimate of the additional military cost of the Gulf conflict is £2.494 billion, spread over several years. The Export Credits Guarantee Department estimates that total claims arising from the Gulf conflict, including those outstanding, amount to £637 million. Other Departments incurred minor costs in respect of the conflict.

The bulk of these costs have been offset by the generous cash contributions from other Governments totalling £2.049 billion.

Low Flying

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations have been made to him concerning correlations between military low altitude flying and permanent hearing damage to children between birth and one; and if he will make a statement. [9883]

Mr. Soames: I have received no such representations.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to introduce a new minimum height limit on flight training and a maximum speed over residential areas; and if he will make a statement. [9884]

Mr. Soames: There are no plans at present to alter height and speed restrictions for low-flying military aircraft. However, the regulations governing the use of the United Kingdom low flying system are kept under continuous review.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the impacts of military low altitude flights on the health and safety of residents of the areas overflown. [10233]

Mr. Soames: We closely monitor scientific research on noise and health. With the exception of hearing, the evidence has not established a causative link between environmental noise—including that from military low flying—and health. In the case of hearing, we believe that the restrictions that we place on the heights, speeds and operating procedures of military aircraft should ensure that the level of noise experienced on the ground is not harmful, given the brief exposure involved.

We have also commissioned our own study into the feasibility of carrying out meaningful epidemiological research. This work is being conducted in co-operation with the US and Canadian Governments and a report is expected later this year. In the meantime, we believe that our current low flying operating procedures reflect the best available medical and scientific advice.

Safety is of utmost importance at all stages of our flying training programme and there are strict regulations and operating procedures in place to safeguard the general public and our aircrews. These are kept under continuous review.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry; and how much has been spent on legal advice and for whom. [10226]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The amount so far spent by my Department on external advice in relation to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry is £215,862; this consists entirely of legal advice. This cost includes the provision of advice by the Treasury Solicitor's Department. The names of the individuals and their legal advisers are confidential to them.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has (a) read, collated or received and (b) authorised civil servants or any other persons to read, collate or receive copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated by Sir Richard Scott to Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10227]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The handling of extracts of Sir Richard Scott's draft report, subject to guidance received from the inquiry, is for those to whom they are sent. The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any connection in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10225]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The direct salary cost of officials within my Department wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry since 1992 is approximately £218,000. Other officials will inevitably be involved from time to time; their direct salary cost is unquantifiable.

Gulf War (Veterans' Children)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from doctors on the need for an independent inquiry into the incidence of birth deformities among the children of Gulf war veterans; and if he will make a statement. [9928]

Mr. Soames: My Department has no record of any representations having been received from doctors on the need for an independent inquiry into the incidence of birth deformities among children of Gulf war veterans.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will commission an independent inquiry into the incidence of birth deformities among children of Gulf war veterans; and if he will make a statement. [9929]

Mr. Soames: My Department is not aware of any established scientific or medical evidence to suggest that there is a higher incidence of birth abnormality among children of Gulf war veterans than exists in the general population. In the circumstances, there are no grounds for an independent inquiry. However, as part of its investigations into the health effects of Gulf war service, my Department is actively considering, in conjunction with civilian medical specialists recommended by the Royal College of Physicians, whether there is any further research that should be undertaken in this area.

Official Service Residences

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of official service residences. [10099]

Mr. Soames: Our policy is to implement the Cazalet report and we shall be making an announcement shortly.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sums have been authorised for expenditure on each of the official service residences since February 1995. [10100]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not yet held centrally. However, my Department gathers this information annually by financial year for internal reporting purposes and to provide information to the House of Commons Defence Committee. This information will be available later in the year.

SAS

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning manpower levels in the SAS. [10103]

Mr. Soames: Manning of the SAS is being maintained at a satisfactorily high level.

Royal Army Medical College

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the future of the Royal Army medical college at Millbank, London; what functions the college currently carries out; and which college will carry out these functions in the future. [9955]

Mr. Soames: The Royal Army Medical College at Millbank provides postgraduate training in military surgery, military medicine, Army pathology, military psychiatry, preventive medicine, military entomology, general practice and the dental sciences. The future of the college is being examined on a tri-service basis, although no specific recommendations have yet been made. There will be normal consultation when firm proposals emerge.

Missiles Contract

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will place a contract for his Department's conventially armed stand-off missiles. [9956]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We expect to be in a position to place a contract in late 1996.

Land Mines (Bosnia)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate his Department has made of the number of anti-personnel land mines in Bosnia. [9957]

Mr. Soames: IFOR estimates that up to 5 million land mines, including anti-personnel mines, may have been laid in Bosnia.

Partnership for Peace

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost per annum to his Department of NATO's partnership for peace process. [9977]

Mr. Soames: The UK's direct contribution to the commonly funded NATO costs of the partnership for peace programme is estimated to amount to some £790,000 in 1996; the costs of UK military personnel seconded to the partnership co-ordination cell at supreme headquarters allied powers in Europe in Mons are some £200,000 annually. In addition, the UK's outreach programme of bilateral co-operation with central and eastern European countries contains many activities which are linked to, or conducted within the spirit of partnership for peace.

Ammunitions Procurement

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries from which Britain procures ammunition. [10101]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Apart from the United Kingdom, companies from the following countries are current suppliers of ammunition to my Department as main contactors:

France
Germany
Holland
Italy
Spain
Portugal
Greece
United States of America
Canada
Israel

RAF Coltishall

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much is being spent to replace (a) showers, (b) baths and (c) kitchens at RAF Coltishall; when the decision was taken to replace these items; when they were last replaced; and if he will make a statement. [9967]

Mr. Soames: A programme is in hand for the improvement of bathrooms and kitchens in family quarters at RAF Coltishall. The cost of the work on kitchens is currently subject to tender action. The estimated cost of new showers, including necessary tiling, is £197,600 and for the replacement of baths, wash-basins, WCs, hot water cylinders and new floor covering, where such replacements are deemed necessary, £102,400. The requirement to install showers and to refurbish kitchens and bathrooms was set in January 1993. The families' quarters are of 1935 and 1955 vintage and original kitchens and bathrooms are being replaced, although some individual items have been replaced previously on a wear and tear basis.

Mr. David Hart

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 December, Official Report, column 774, what was the purpose of each of the visits made by Mr. David Hart to United Kingdom defence companies; and what further visits to British defence companies are currently arranged for Mr. Hart. [9968]

Mr. Portillo: Mr. Hart's visits were made in his capacity as my independent adviser. There are no further visits currently planned.

Type 23 Frigates

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total cost of each of the last 10 type 23 frigates built for his Department. [9954]

Mr. Arbuthnot: It is not our practice to publish unit production costs.

DBS Special Batteries

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts his Department currently has with DSB Special Batteries. [9958]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The central database maintained by the Ministry of Defence Procurement Executive shows that there are 17 contracts valued at approximately £2.4 million with DSB Special Batteries. It is possible that there may be some other work placed with the company by one of the agencies or local purchase units, but this information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Married Housing Stock

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been authorised for improvements to his Department's married housing stock since 28 November 1995. [9959]

Mr. Soames: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The department continues to maintain, and improve as necessary, all the housing stock for which it has a longer-term requirement.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of the married quarters discounted sales scheme. [10033]

Mr. Soames: The Government are committed to ensuring that service personnel get a fair deal in housing terms and the MOD has a number of initiatives to encourage home ownership. Surplus married quarters are sold to service personnel at a 30 per cent. discount on the market value of the property. At the inception of the scheme, it was based on local authority right to buy schemes. Successful applicants are selected by length of service. The scheme is very popular with as many as 60 to 100 applications being received for many of the properties offered for sale. The future of the scheme is being evaluated in the context of the proposals to transfer the married quarters estate to the private sector.

Munitions Dumping

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make payments of compensation to those individuals and companies which have suffered injury and damage as a result of munitions dumped in the Irish channel found outside the sanctioned munition dumping grounds. [9927]

Mr. Soames: Any claim for compensation to my Department would be carefully considered on the basis of the facts pertaining to each case. If compensation were to be due, it would be paid in accordance with our liabilities.

Territorial Army

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for further reductions in the strength of the Territorial Army. [10104]

Mr. Soames: There are no plans to restructure the Territorial Army beyond those announced to the House on 14 July 1994, Official Report, columns 759-60, and 6 December 1994, Official Report, columns 204-06.

Advisers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all of his independent advisers who have made visits to British defence companies in the last 12 months. [9969]

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer to him on 14 December 1995, Official Report, column 774. I am not aware of any visit to British defence companies by the other three independent advisers to my predecessor.

Gulf War (Chemical Weapons)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what reports he has received that British units serving the Gulf war were subject to chemical weapons attack; and if he will make a statement; [9965]

(2) if he will now carry out an investigation as to whether any British unit serving in the Gulf war was subject to chemical weapon attack. [9966]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 16 January 1996, Official Report, column 535.

Aircraft Crashes

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates and types of aircraft his Department has lost through crashes in each of the last five years; what were the causes of these accidents; and what was the cost of replacement of these aircraft. [9953]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is given in the table. No replacement costs arise since there is an attrition reserve from which aircraft are taken to replace those lost.

Vehicle Procurement

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his plans for the procurement of new utility vehicles and ambulances for the British Army; and if he will make a statement. [10825]

Mr. Arbuthnot: There is a pressing need to replace about half the current fleet of Land Rover utility vehicles, many of which have reached the end of their operational lives. Subject to the satisfactory completion of contractual negotiations, we propose to place an order with Land Rover for about 8,000 new vehicles, known commercially as "Defender XD", to meet the Army's light and medium utility truck requirement. We also intend to place an order for 65 additional Pinzgauer vehicles, supplied by Steyr Daimler Puch, to enhance the fleet of these vehicles which is already successfully in service to meet the Army's heavy duty medium truck requirement.

The Army and Royal Marines also need to replace their aging battlefield ambulances with vehicles providing better conditions for casualties, improved medical facilities and greater reliability. The competition for this programme has been particularly close, with vehicles offered by Land Rover and Steyr Daimler Puch both meeting the operational requirement. Both vehicles demonstrated excellent technical qualities. The Land Rover however, provides, in particular, excellent working conditions for the medical crew and commonality both with the new utility vehicles and the in-service Land Rover fleet. Also its acquisition cost is lower than the Steyr. We have, therefore, decided to award the contract for the supply of about 800 ambulances to Land Rover, subject to the satisfactory conclusion of contract negotiations.

These decisions are good news for the armed forces. Both of the new Land Rover vehicles will enter service this summer and will be available for operational deployment in support of IFOR.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of state for Defence if he will make a statement about the procurement of military ambulances. [10484]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave this afternoon to my hon. Friend the Member for South-West Cambridgeshire (Sir A. Grant).

Mr. Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when a decision will be taken on the winner of the contract for the provision of non-operational B vehicles to the British forces in Germany. [10735]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We have decided to award the contract for the provision of non-operational B-vehicles to the British Forces in Germany to Ryder plc with its sub-contractor PHH plc, subject to a successful conclusion of contractual negotiations.

The award of this contract follows a rigorous competition involving a number of German companies as well as Ryder plc. The competition was run under European Union restricted procedures for public contracts. We decided that the Ryder plc bid offered a high standard of technical and commercial confidence and the best value for money to the British forces in Germany and to the taxpayer.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he has (a) read or received and (b) authorised civil servants or any other persons to collate or receive copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated by Sir Richard Scott to Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10218]

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister today.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in the Deputy Prime Minister's Office and the Office of Public Service employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any connection in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10217]

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary on 8 November 1995, Official Report, column 861.

Civil Servants (Industry Links)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many serving civil servants are involved in the scheme to improve links with industry; [8761]

(2) how many serving civil servants involved in the scheme to improve links with industry are acting as non-executive directors; which companies are involved; and to what extent civil servants acting as non-executive directors receive payments from the companies concerned. [8762]

Mr. Willetts: There are several different interchange schemes with industry and commerce, including secondments, short-term attachments, non-executive opportunities and joint training programmes. In 1995, over 600 civil servants participated in these schemes.

In 1995, 57 civil servants held non-executive appointments within private sector companies. The companies involved are as follows:

AEA Technology
Albert Fisher
Amec
Anglian Water
Avery
British Approvals Board for Telecoms
BOC, UK Gases Ltd.
BTR Industries Ltd.
Cadbury
Coats Viyella
Dalgety

In no cases do individuals receive payment, although some companies pay a small amount to the employing Department.

Deregulation

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those European capitals he has (a) visited and (b) plans to visit to discuss deregulation and give the total estimated cost to public funds of these visits. [5877]

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 14 December 1995, c. 749]: I regret that the figure quoted as the estimated travel costs associated with the visits already undertaken is incorrect. The correct information is:

"The travel costs associated with the visits already undertaken is estimated to be £12,898."

WALES

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6574]

Mr. Hague: The information is not collected in the format requested. Expenditure on press advertising for my Department and its executive agency, Cadw, since 1990 is set out in the following table. Figures are not held centrally for NDPBs.

£ thousands

Year	Welsh Office	CADW[1]
1990–91	251	n/a
1991–92	341	[2]n/a
1992–93	350	34
1993–94	269	58
1994–95	247	35
1995–96	394	26

[1] Cadw was set up as an executive agency in April 1991.
[2] Figures are not readily available and can be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

School Milk

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide figures for the consumption of milk under the European Union school milk scheme for each of the last five years in both primary and secondary schools in Wales; and if he will make a statement on the projected effect on school milk consumption in Wales of the Government's planned cut in subsidy for the provision of milk in schools, and its net effect on the Welsh Office budget after taking into account any loss of European Union subsidy. [8464]

Mr. Hague: The total milk consumption in primary and secondary schools in Wales—including for catering—funded by the scheme was as follows:

Academic year	Litres (millions)
1990–91	3.7
1991–92	3.9
1992–93	4.0
1993–94	3.2
1994–95	2.9

As the funds to local authorities are provided by the intervention board executive agency, there will be no effect on the Welsh Office budget.

Play Groups

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many pre-school play groups there are in each of the counties of Wales. [9331]

Mr. Richards: The latest available figures provided by Wales PPA are for 1994–95. They are taken from the annual report 1994–95, and are as follows:

	Number
Clwyd	81
Dyfed	45
Mid Glamorgan	83
South Glamorgan	93
West Glamorgan	25
Gwent	74
Gwynedd	27
Powys	38
Wales	466

These do not include combined parent and toddler play groups.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the amount of part-time and full-time employment generated by the play group movement. [9328]

Mr. Richards: This information is not held centrally.

Long-stay Hospitals

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people suffering from (a) mental handicap and (b) mental illness, are currently being cared for in long-stay hospitals in Wales; what is Welsh Office policy for providing aid in the community for the residents of each of the long-stay hospitals; and what is the target date for each hospital for ending the current mode of care for patients. [9337]

Mr. Hague: Numbers of residents in (a) mental handicap and (b) mental illness long stay hospitals at 31 March 1994—latest available validated statistical data—are given in the following table. These figures exclude those hospitals that were open as at 31 March 1994 but have subsequently closed.

The mental illness strategy aims to promote the development of a multi-agency approach to the delivery of services, with a range of mental health care within community settings supported by appropriate hospital and residential care. The mental handicap strategy promotes care within the community with additional help and support as appropriate. The resettlement of individuals should take place only after a full multi-agency assessment. Hospitals will be closed only when appropriate alternative provision is in place and when local approval has been reached.

Local approval has been agreed for the closure of Talgarth, Powys (1997), Hensol, Mid Glamorgan (1999) and Llanfrechfa Grange, Gwent (1997). The remaining hospitals do not yet have an agreed closure date.

Other hospitals	1,145
Wales total[1]	2,427

[1] Excluding residents in hospitals that have closed since 31 March 1994.

[2] Figures for St. Cadoc's include old age psychiatry beds at St. Woolos.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people with learning difficulties there are in long-stay hospitals in each of the health authority areas in Wales at the latest date for which information is available; what were the corresponding figures five and 10 years ago; and what he forecasts the figure will be in 12 months and two years time. [9960]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is as follows.

Patients resident in hospitals for people with learning disabilities

	[1]1985	[1]1989	[2]1994
Clwyd	74	52	15
Dyfed	83	45	49

West Glamorgan	106	55	32
Wales	1,945	1,555	927

[1] At 5 April.

[2] At 31 March.

No forecasts of the number of residents in hospitals have been made by the Welsh Office.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what policies he has to assist special needs children into pre-school education. [9330]

Mr. Richards: Local education authorities have the responsibility of making appropriate provision for a child under five who has been identified as having special educational needs. The code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs gives guidance on special education provision for the under fives. Our proposed voucher scheme will apply to all four-year-olds, including those with special needs.

Autism

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the services available to (a) children and (b) adults with autism; and what plans he has to enhance these services. [9255]

Mr. Richards: Health and local authorities are responsible for identifying individuals with autism and for the provision of appropriate services.

As part of a project to promote the development of services to people with autism in Wales, the National Autistic Society has recently completed an audit of autism-focused services in Wales. This project is supported by the Welsh Office, through the Welsh mental handicap strategy. We have considered the society's findings and have suggested that they be made available to health and unitary authorities.

Ofsted Inspectors

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Ofsted inspectors have (a) early years teaching qualifications and (b) early years teaching experience; and if he will make a statement. [9553]

Mr. Richards: Operational issues relating to the work and organisation of the Office for Standards in Education are matters for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in England. By agreement with the hon. Member these questions have been referred to Mr. Woodhead.

Housing

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what grants are currently available for the conversion into dwelling houses of shops which are no longer financially viable; and if he will make a statement. [9870]

Mr. Hague: District councils may give discretionary home renovation grants to convert buildings, including shops, into dwellings. Over the past five years we have made available £20.5 million which has created more than 1,300 such dwellings. For 1996–97 councils can support such grants from the £179.6 million I have made available to them for home renovation.

Llangollen International Eisteddfod

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will support the nomination of the Llangollen international eisteddfod for the Nobel peace prize in its jubilee year; and if he will make a statement. [9871]

Mr. Hague: The Nobel committee does not reveal the identities of candidates for the peace prize. These only become known if nominators make their proposals known and I am not aware that the Llangollen international Eisteddfod has been nominated. The Nobel committee has made it clear that supporting candidates serves no purpose and could even be interpreted as an attempt unfairly to influence the committee.

Chester-Holyhead Rail Line (Electrification)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) by what date the electrification of the railway line between (1) Chester and Holyhead is planned to be completed; and if he will make a statement; [9872]

(2) if he will make a statement concerning plans for the electrification of the railway between Chester and Holyhead. [9873]

Mr. Hague: The need, timing and method of improving the rail infrastructure is primarily a matter for Railtrack plc and its customers, the train operators. However, I understand there are currently no plans for the electrification of the railway line between Chester and Holyhead, but that other forms of upgrading the line are under review.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what European Community funding is available to assist the electrification of the Chester to Holyhead railway line; and if he will make a statement. [9885]

Mr. Hague: Should they decide to electrify the line Railtrack would be eligible to apply for assistance towards capital expenditure from the trans European network fund and the European Investment Bank. Loan guarantees might also be available from the European investment fund.

Teachers (Employment Costs)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the total employment costs of teachers in each local education authority from 1990–91 to 1995–96 and the average cost of employing a teacher in (i) cash and (ii) real terms in each of these years. [10279]

Mr. Richards: Total expenditure on teachers' salaries in maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools in each local education authority from 1990–91 to 1993–94 is given in the following table. This includes home teaching and individual teaching at other establishments, for example, hospitals and special units offered by social services. Information is not yet available for 1994–95 or 1995–96.

Training

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was in (a) cash and (b) real terms the training budget each year since it became a Welsh Office responsibility; how much in each year in (i) cash and (ii) real terms was directed to the training of young people; and what percentage of this budget is allocated to the training and enterprise councils. Business Rate

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the impact of the uniform business rate on the occupancy of commercial premises in Llanfair Caereinion. [9879]

Mr. Hague: Business rate is only one of a number of factors which may affect the occupancy of commercial premises. Since the introduction of the 1995 rating list, numbers of empty properties, as indicated by empty property rate relief, have remained stable in Llanfair Caereinion.

Bryn-y-Neuadd Long-stay Hospital

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current annual cost of running Bryn-y-Neuadd long-stay hospital at Llanfairfechan; and what was the corresponding cost, in 1996 prices, five and 10 years ago. [9961]

Mr. Hague: Details of individual hospital expenditure has not been available centrally since 1990–91. The annual cost of running Bryn-y-Neuadd long-stay hospital for 1990–91 and 1985–86 at 1996–97 prices was £6.653 million and £5.840 million respectively.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many residents there are at present in the Bryn-y-Neuadd long-stay hospital at Llanfairfechan; what was the corresponding number five and 10 years ago; and what he forecasts the number will be in 12 months and two years time. [9962]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is as follows:

Patients resident in Bryn-y-Neuadd hospital

	Learning disability	Mental illness
1985[1]	234	0
1989[1]	223	0
1994[2]	159	23

[1] At 5 April.
[2] At 31 March.

No forecasts of the number of residents in hospitals have been made by the Welsh Office.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what date it was planned, in the context of the all-Wales strategy for mentally handicapped adults and children of 1983, that Bryn-y-Neuadd hospital at Llanfairfechan, would be phased out of its role as a long-stay hospital for people with learning difficulties; what plans he has to continue to pursue that objective; and what is the new revised target date for achieving their objective. [9963]

Mr. Hague: No date for closure has been agreed and no formal consultation has taken place. Additional Welsh Office funds have been agreed for 1997–98 and 1998–99 which will provide support for a phased process of resettlement which will enable over 500 people to move from long-stay institutions into more appropriate forms of alternative care. Resettlement from Bryn-y-Neuadd will commence when resources become available. The possibility of providing additional funding will be reviewed in three years time.

Tai Cymru

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the amount of money made available for Tai Cymru in each year from 1990–91 to 1996–97 and the number of houses which (i) his Department estimated would be built and (ii) were built in each year up to 1994–95. [10042]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The available information on the capital programme is as follows:

Local Government Finance

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the level of total standard spending in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97 excluding amounts made available to police authorities. [10034]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The amount of total standard spending in Wales, excluding that made available to the police authorities, is £2,466,247,000 in 1995–96 and £2,535,937,000 in the provisional 1996–97 settlement.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the revenue support grant for local authorities in each of the years from 1990–91 to 1996–97. [10036]

Mr. Jones: The information requested is given in the following table.

Revenue support grant for Welsh local authorities (including police authorities)

all amounts in £ million

Year	Cash	at 1990–91 prices
1990–91	1,139.9	1,139.9

1994–95	1,738.9	1,500.0
1995–96	1,717.0	1,441.5
1996–97[1]	1,790.4	1,462.9

[1] Provisional.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of (a) the maximum council tax increase each local authority will be able to make in 1996–97 while respecting his capping criteria and (b) the levels of local authority spending in (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 1996–97 allowing for statutory increases. [10040]

Mr. Jones: Council tax increases consistent with my right hon. Friend's proposed capping principles will depend on his final settlement proposals. These will be announced at the end of this month. The latest available estimate of local authority net revenue spending for 1995–96 is £2,883.9 million. Local authorities have yet to set their budgets for 1996–97.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the (a) level of additional funding for education in Wales provided by the revenue support grant for 1996–97 and (b) the additional funding made available for education in England. [10278]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement on 28 November allowed for planned public spending on schools in England in 1996–97 to rise by £878 million, of which £774 million is being channelled through the local government revenue settlement. Comparable resources for Wales were included in the £85 million increase in total standard spending announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales on 28 November.

With the agreement of the Welsh local authority associations, and with the exception of community care resources, the Government do not identify funding for local government in Wales in respect of particular services.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the amount made available for local authority capital provision for housing in each year from 1990–91 to 1996–97. [10041]

Mr. Jones: The information requested is given in the following table.

Local authority housing capital provision[1]

[1] Government provision announced prior to the start of each financial year.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) cash and (b) real terms the amounts made available to local authorities for housing renovation grants in each year from 1990–91 to 1996–97, the estimates made at the time of the number of grants which would be awarded and the number which were so awarded in each year from 1990–91 to 1996–97. [10043]

Mr. Jones: The information is given in the following tables:

Table 1: Government finance made available

1995–96	16,400	[1]16,300
1996–97	17,000	n/a

[1] Estimated.

n/a = not available.

The numbers of grants completed in 1990–91 and 1991–92 include a significant number approved under the Housing Act 1985. Different grant arrangements were brought into effect from 1 July 1990 under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. All figures include disabled facilities grants.

Figures given for plans made assumptions about the mix of types of grant to be awarded and the associated average costs: no targets by type were set for authorities.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he made of the cost of the teachers' pay award for (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97 when calculating the revenue support grant; and what are those costs for 1995–96. [10284]

Mr. Richards: We expect pay awards in the public sector, including those subject to the recommendations of the School Teachers' Review Body, to be met through increased efficiency and other economies. The local government revenue settlements for 1995–96 and 1996–97 reflect that policy.

During the 1996–97 settlement discussion, the Welsh local authority associations estimated the cost of the 1995–96 pay award at £19 million.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of local government spending was made up by the revenue support grant in each year since 1990–91. [10035]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The following table shows, from 1990–91 to 1995–96, revenue support grant as a percentage of the total expenditure on services to which revenue support grant may apply. The expenditure figures used were obtained from local authorities' outturn information for years up to 1993–94 and from information on budgets for 1994–95 and 1995–95.

Revenue support grant as a percentage of spending

	Per cent.
1990–91	51
1991–92	50
1992–93	61

1995–96	58

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms (i) the total amounts and (ii) the amounts per pupil that each local education authority was permitted to borrow for capital work on schools in each local government financial settlement from 1990–91 to 1996–97. [10037]

Mr. Richards: Most of the borrowing by local education authorities to fund capital work on schools since 1990–91 has been covered by unhypothecated basic credit approvals. Accordingly each authority decides how much of its approved borrowing is allocated to schools.

Public Bodies (Funding)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the revenue provision in each year from 1990–91 to 1996–97 for (a) the National Museum of Wales, (b) the National Library of Wales, (c) CADW, (d) the Arts Council of Wales, (e) the Sports Council for Wales, (f) the Countryside Council for Wales and (g) the Wales tourist board. SCOTLAND

Powered Wheelchairs

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what consultations he has had with health authorities concerning the funding of indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs in Scotland; [8626]

(2) what consultations he has had with user groups concerning the funding of indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs in Scotland over the last 12 months. [8627]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The national services division of the Common Services Agency which is responsible for centrally purchased services set up a working group in early 1995 to look at the future provision of artificial limb and appliance services, which includes the wheelchair service. The working group was made up of representatives from trusts, health boards and all artificial limb and appliance centres; from training, therapy, supplies and primary care interests; a consumer sub-group and a consultation network. It concluded that funding for ALAC services should be devolved to health boards, a recommendation I have approved.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the criteria for qualifying for a publicly funded indoor/outdoor powered wheelchair in Scotland. [8628]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Patients must meet the following criteria:

1. for medical reasons, be severely and permanently restricted in mobility;
2. be unable to walk;
3. be unable to propel a manual wheelchair;
4. have no problems with visual, cognitive, visuo-spatial or other higher cortical functions or other medical conditions, which would make them a danger to themselves, pedestrians or other road users;
5. have the ability to comply with the DVLC requirements for motor vehicle drivers concerning epilepsy and other causes of loss of consciousness;
6. have visual acuity of at least 6/24 (can read a car number plate at 40 ft) and have a field of vision of 120° in a horizontal plane and 20° above and below this plane (equivalent to class 3 vehicle visual standards);
7. have demonstrated in a driving test and by other means that they have the insight, intellectual capacity and dexterity to operate an electrically powered indoor/outdoor chair (EPIOC) safely and responsibly on their own and without assistance;
8. have a residential environment which is compatible with the use of an EPIOC, and which includes a storage area with a power supply for a battery charger;
9. have a local outside environment which is accessible by an EPIOC and compatible with its use;
10. be able to ensure that an EPIOC will be maintained adequately either personally or by a carer;
11. have the capacity to derive significant improvement in their independence and quality of life through use of an EPIOC.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs provided by health authorities in Scotland. [8630]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the overall number of powered chairs issued in the last five years is not held centrally. Details of the number of indoor/outdoor powered chairs and indoor powered chairs purchases since the provision of special funding in 1992 are as follows:

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Indoor/Outdoor	313	267	286	[1]93
Indoor	—	[2]497	409	[1]87

[1] For 6 months 1 April 1995-30 September 1995.
[2] For the 24 month period 1 April 1992-31 March 1994.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what funding arrangements exist for indoor/outdoor powered wheelchair provision in Scotland; [8631]

(2) what plans he has to continue to honour the Government's obligation to maintain the funding of indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs in Scotland. [8629]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It was announced in February 1992 that special funding of £2.5 million would be made available in Scotland over the following three years for the provision of indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs.

Funding has since been renewed and will be included in the funding of artificial limb and appliance centres which is being returned to health boards in 1996–97 through the weighted capitation formula. Notification of the notional allocation for each board was included in the financial allocations for 1996–97.

Fatal Accident Inquiry

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure the early publication of the fatal accident inquiry report, arising from the hearing in Dingwall, Ross-shire from 20 to 24 March 1995 over the death of Dr. Katherine Margaret Herd; and if he will make a statement. [8642]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Responsibility for this report rests with the sheriff principal of Grampian, Highland and Islands. I understand that his findings will be published on Thursday 18 January 1996.

House Standards

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many houses were classified as below the tolerable standard in (i) Scotland and (ii) each of the district council areas in the last year for which figures are available. [9857]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: This information is published in the Scottish Office housing statistical bulletin HSG/1994/8, "Dwellings below the Tolerable Standard in Scotland: Estimates by Local Authorities for March 1994 and details of action on such dwellings". A copy of the bulletin has been placed in the Library.

Housing Action Areas

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each district and islands council area each year from 1987–88 to 1994–95, how many (a) housing action areas for improvement and (b) housing action areas for improvement and demolition have been declared. [10107]

Housing Association Grant

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what average levels of housing association grant he has assumed for Scottish Homes development programme for 1996–97 for (a) the total housing association and co-operative programme and (b) the housing association and co-operative programme for rent. [10108]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Scottish Homes is currently drawing up proposals for its development programme in 1996–97, based on its public expenditure settlement, and I expect to consider its proposals next month. The average level of housing association grants will be set in the light of the approved programme and the associated performance targets. I shall be looking to Scottish Homes to improve on the current year's target of 60 per cent. leverage across its programme as a whole.

Scottish Charities Office

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current staffing establishment of the Scottish Charities Office; and what assessment he has made as to whether the office has sufficient resources to enable it to investigate allegations of irregularities within a reasonable time. [10231]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Charities Office, which is a division of the Crown Office, is permanently staffed by two solicitors, two investigators and one administrative officer. It has access to the services of a chartered accountant on a consultative basis and to general support services within the Crown Office. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate is satisfied that it has sufficient resources to deal with its current workload.

Right to Buy

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year since 1980–81 the total value of discounts to public sector tenants in Scotland exercising their right to buy. [10109]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The total value of the discounts, being the difference between the assessed market value and the purchase price paid, is set out in the table.

Value of discounts to public sector tenants in Scotland exercising their right to buy

1980–81: £37.6 million
1981–82: £73.3 million
1982–83: £104.5 million
1983–84: £130.8 million
1984–85: £137.9 million
1985–86: £130.7 million

1986–87: £147.5 million
1987–88: £262.9 million
1988–89: £430.7 million
1989–90: £521.6 million
1990–91: £428.4 million
1991–92: £379.0 million
1992–93: £382.7 million
1993–94: £365.5 million
1994–95: £364.0 million

Local Government Finance

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each district and islands council in each year from 1989–90 to 1995–96 (i) the planned and (ii) the outturn expenditure on (a) housing support grant, (b) non-housing revenue account capital allocation and (c) housing revenue account capital allocation. [10106]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: For housing support grant, the table sets out the amount of subsidy paid in each year after taking account of any variation orders made. For non-housing revenue account capital and housing revenue account capital, planned expenditure in the tables which follow represents the gross capital allocations issued to each authority taking account of any supplementary allocations or other changes made during the year. Forecast outturn expenditure is provided for 1995–96.

Cairngorms Partnership

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions have taken place between his Department and the chairman of the Cairngorms Partnership relating to the number of individuals on the organisation's board and the levels of remuneration which are currently being made to the members of the board. [9572]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The chairman of the Cairngorms Partnership and my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Scotland discussed the original composition of the board which was set up to reflect the widest possible range of interests in the area. My right hon. Friend determined that the rate of remuneration for the chairman should be assessed by comparison with members of Scottish Natural Heritage. Remuneration of members of the partnership board is similarly by comparison with members of the boards of non-departmental public bodies.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what safeguards his Department has put in place to prevent abuse of the remunerative arrangements pertaining to the board of the Cairngorms Partnership. [9573]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 January 1996]: A framework document has been prepared by officials from the Scottish Office, Scottish Natural Heritage and the Cairngorms Partnership. This sets out the framework for the administrative and financial arrangements of the partnership and includes provision for monitoring of all expenditure incurred by the partnership. This includes ensuring value for money and ensuring that adequate systems are in place to secure propriety and regularity of payments and prudent and economic administration.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct officials of his Department to investigate urgently the current remuneration levels of the board of the Cairngorms Partnership. [9574]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 January 1996]: No. The level of remuneration paid to the board is in line with that paid to members of boards of non-departmental public bodies.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the board of the Cairngorms Partnership to be in a position to provide a response to the report of the working party on the future of the Cairngorms; and if he will indicate the timetable stipulated by the Scottish Office at the time the partnership was established governing the publication of the group's response to the report of the working party. [9575]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The Cairngorms Partnership, which became operational in May 1995, was asked to produce a draft management strategy for the Cairngorms area within a year of its establishment. It is expected that a draft strategy document will be published before the end of May 1996.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the conduct of the board of the Cairngorms Partnership with particular reference to the levels of remuneration being paid to board members and the levels of expenditure being incurred in operating the organisation. [9576]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 January 1996]: No such representations have been received.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the current membership of the board of the Cairngorms partnership indicating in the case of those individuals currently on local authorities whether they are also now members of the new shadow unitary authorities; and if the membership of the board of the Cairngorms partnership will be reviewed as a result of local government reform. [9577]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

Mr. David Laird (Chairman)
Dr. Robert Aitken
Mr. Stuart Black
Mr. Richard Cooke
Mr. Roy Dennis
Mr. Robert Dunsmore
Ms Helen Geddes
Mr. John Grant
Mr. Stuart Housden
Mr. Simon Miller
Dr. Roger Owen
Mrs. Sheena Slimon
Mr. Hamish Swan
Dr. Adam Watson

Local authorities representatives

	Current local authority	Elected to new council
Councillor Mary Levie	Grampian Regional Council	—
Councillor Norman Donald	Gordon District Council	—
Councillor Tom Donoghue	Kincardine and Deeside District Council	Aberdeenshire
Councillor Ian Lawson	Moray District Council	—
Councillor Basil Dunlop	Highland Regional Council	Highland
Councillor Charles Haggerty	Badenoch and Strathspey District Council	—
Councillor Alex Shand	Tayside Regional Council	Angus
Councillor Andrew Thomson	Angus District Council	—
Councillor Alex Murray	Perth and Kinross District Council	Perth and Kinross

The nine local authority representatives serve on the board until 31 March 1996. The partnership will shortly be approaching the new shadow unitary authorities seeking their nominations for representation on the board.

Munitions Dumping

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) statutory controls and (b) other safeguards governed the dumping of munitions in Beaufort's dyke during the period since 1966. [9853]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 17 January 1996]: There were no statutory controls on dumping at sea prior to the Dumping at Sea Act 1974 which was replaced in 1985 by part II of the Food and Environment Protection Act. The dumping of munitions by the Ministry of Defence was governed by appropriate operational procedures.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will extend the scope of the investigations into the dumping of munitions in the Irish channel to include the firth of Clyde and the area of the sea bed around the natural gas pipeline constructed in 1993 from Scotland to the Irish Republic. [9854]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 17 January 1996]: Details of further survey work in the area will be announced in due course.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what investigation his Department commissioned into the washing up of munitions along the south-west coast of Scotland and on the Isle of Man in 1993; and what were the findings. [9868]

(2) what actions were taken by his Department in 1993 to respond to public concern about the washing up of munitions along the south-west coast of Scotland. [9869]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 17 January 1996]: There was no direct Scottish Office involvement in or investigation of this incident which was dealt with by the emergency services.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what investigations his Department carried out on the condition of munitions dumped at Beaufort's dyke prior to the recent study published by the marine laboratory at Aberdeen; and what studies have been undertaken by other Government Departments into this matter. [9851]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The Scottish Office has not carried out any such investigations nor is my right hon. Friend aware of other Government Departments having done so.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what occasions since 1966 the Scottish Office has been made aware of the washing up of munitions along the coast of the south-west of Scotland and the firth of Clyde. [9852]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 18 January 1996]: No consolidated record of such occurrences is held by the Scottish Office.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made to ensure the withdrawal from Bosnia-Herzegovina of Mujahedden fighters in accordance with the peace accord. [10287]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Under the terms of the Bosnia peace agreement, the deadline for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Bosnia expired on 13 January. NATO has reported general compliance, although some individuals remain in theatre. Efforts to ensure full compliance continue.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests he has made to the Croatian Government about the expulsion and harassment of ethnic Serbs in the Krajina; what the Croat response has been; and what further communication he has had with the Croatian Government about the situation in the Krajina. [10291]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Following the Croatian offensive in the Krajina in August 1995, we joined EU partners in condemning the action and calling for the refugees who fled to be allowed to return. The EU also suspended negotiations on a trade and co-operation agreement and the PHARE programme. Since then, we have supported the UN Security Council statement condemning continued Croatian human rights abuses in the area. We have made it clear to the Croatian Government that there is no prospect of their developing a close relationship with the EU while the treatment of minorities in Croatia continues to cause concern. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs made these points personally to President Tudjman during his visit in September.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by the UN war crimes tribunal to bring to justice Croats alleged to have committed war crimes in the Krajina. [10290]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The tribunal does not comment on operational aspects of its investigations. However, its mandate is to investigate those accused of war crimes in the former Yugoslavia, regardless of ethnic origin.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has in respect of relations between the Muslims and Croats in Bogojono in central Bosnia; and what problems IFOR forces have meet in implementing the peace accord in that area. [10292]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Bugojno is one of the towns included in a small programme agreed at Dayton for the return of a limited number of displaced persons to their places of origin. Two hundred Bosnian Croat families were to return to Bugojno. The majority have yet to do so.

IFOR has not reported encountering any serious problems in implementing the peace agreement in the area around Bugojno.

ENVIRONMENT

County Hall, London

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what property belonging to the London residuary body still remains in county hall, London SE1. [8775]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

Imported Animals and Birds

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he has made since 1990 to the controls over the import of species deemed by his Department to be unlikely to survive in captivity. [8778]

Mr. Clappison: EC regulations governing the import of endangered species into the Community fully superseded national legislation on completion of the single market in 1993. In June 1995, the Council of Ministers reached political agreement on a new EC wildlife trade regulation which would enable member states collectively to impose restrictions on the import of live specimens of species which have a high mortality rate during shipment or which are unlikely to survive in captivity. Subject to satisfactory completion of its remaining stages, the proposed regulation is expected to come into force on 1 January 1997.

Kent County Council (Interest Charges)

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what sum in debt interest was charged by Kent county council in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95. [10441]

Sir Paul Beresford: The debt interest paid by Kent county council from the general fund revenue account was £37,170.000 in 1993–94 and £38,492,000 in 1994–95.

Local Government Reform, Leicester

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to lay the order conferring unitary status on the city of Leicester. [10529]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Leicestershire (City of Leicester and District of Rutland) (Structural Change) Order 1996 was laid yesterday, Thursday 18 January 1996.

Social Rented Housing (Consultation)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has received to the consultation document "More Choice in the Social Rented Sector" issued on 13 July 1995; and if he will make a statement. [11312]

Mr. Curry: The consultation paper set out Government proposals to increase competition in the social rented sector by removing current restrictions on who should be able to compete for Housing Corporation grant or take on transferred local authority housing. It argued that new forms of non-profit landlord should be able to register with the corporation, and that a licensing system should be established to enable profit-making landlords to receive grant and transferred stock. A series of proposals regarding the monitoring and regulation of social housing were put forward, including rent controls and provisions to recoup excessive surpluses. The paper also proposed the establishment of a statutory ombudsman for the independent social rented sector, and sought views on the appropriate approach to determining the standards to which housing schemes must conform.

Two hundred and sixty responses were received. A list of respondents has been placed in the Library of the House. Copies of individual responses may be obtained through the Library. In addition, four responses were submitted on a confidential basis.

These replies have been considered carefully. The Government have decided to proceed at once with proposals to allow new forms of non-profit landlord, such as local housing companies, to register with the Housing Corporation, and to establish a statutorily independent ombudsman. The necessary provisions are contained in the Housing Bill which was published today. The Bill also provides new powers for the Housing Corporation to protect publicly funded stock and tenants' interests in the event of a landlord becoming insolvent.

In order to facilitate further transfers of local authority stock to these and other registered landlords, the Government will adopt a more flexible approach to the size limit for transfers. In future, transfers over the 5,000 dwellings limit will be eligible in exceptional circumstances. My Department intends to issue revised guidance on housing transfers incorporating advice on this and other policy changes.

The Government also intend to take forward its proposals to introduce profit-making landlords to the sector, with the associated controls over rents and surpluses. Because of the urgent need to deal with leasehold issues in a Bill of manageable size, legislation to effect this proposal will be deferred. My Department will consult on draft clauses for these provisions, with a view to including them in future legislation. Given the postponement of legislation on opening up competition on housing association grant to profit-making companies, the Government do not intend to abolish tax relief grant at this stage.

On scheme development standards, the Housing Corporation will retain the present approach for the time being. The Department of Environment and the Housing Corporation are commissioning a study into the feasibility of developing a series of housing quality indicators. A report is expected in May. A further statement on scheme development standards will be made at that time.

Housing Legislation

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to amend part I of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993. [11313]

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 18 January, in answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) a number of proposals to strengthen leaseholders' rights against unreasonable behaviour by their landlords. One of these proposals was to bring forward amendments to the Housing Bill, which is published today, to permit collective enfranchisement in properties where flying freeholds have been created.

In addition, the Housing Bill contains four provisions, all of a relatively technical nature, to amend the provisions of the 1993 Act relating to leasehold enfranchisement of flats and to the right to buy an extended lease. The provisions are:

(i) to clarify the valuation provisions in schedule 6—leasehold enfranchisement, and schedule 13—premium to be paid for lease extension, in cases where there are intermediate leasehold interests;

(ii) to provide explicit assumptions to be used in valuing the tenant's existing lease and new lease for the purpose of calculating marriage values under schedule 13 to the Act;

(iii) to disregard the effect for valuation purposes of certain transactions which might have the effect of reducing the price to be paid for an extended lease under Schedule 13. If the Bill is enacted in its current form, specified transactions after today—unless in pursuance of certain contracts entered into on or before today—will be disregarded; and

(iv) in cases where flats are owned by trustees, to allow residence by a beneficiary of the trust to satisfy the residence qualifications for enfranchisement and for lease extension.

The provisions amending schedule 13 on valuation will apply to all notices of claim given after today, except in cases where the premium has been agreed or determined before the day the Act is passed. I do not expect these provisions to alter the amount to be paid for acquiring a freehold or a lease extension in the great majority of cases.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Developing Countries (Investment)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of private flows from the UK to developing countries went to (a) the least developed third countries and (b) the poorest 50 countries, [8950]

Mr. Hanley: Private flows consist of direct investment, export credit and other flows.

The table gives details of direct investment and private export credit flows from the United Kingdom for the latest available years to the low income countries—56 countries whose GNP per capita was $675 or less in 1992—and to the least developed countries—48 countries defined by the UN as least developed, based on certain economic and social criteria. Some 26 per cent. of total UK direct investment went to low-income countries in 1993. Little of this was to the least-developed countries, a category which includes many francophone countries where British business has traditionally played only a small role.

Figures on export credits represented net flows—that is, disbursements less repayments. It is not possible to give proportions of the total in this case. Table 2 therefore shows individual country details only.

Country breakdowns of other private flows are not available.

Development Co-operation Policies

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by what mechanisms British development co-operation policies are co-ordinated at Government level with particular reference to (a) debt and (b) environmental matters. [8951]

Mr. Hanley: Regular consultations take place between Her Majesty's Treasury, the diplomatic and ODA wings of the FCO and the Export Credits Guarantee Department to ensure that the British Government's developmental objectives are fully reflected in its policies on developing country debt.

Similarly, interdepartmental groups, including representatives from the Overseas Development Administration and the Department of the Environment meet regularly to consider the important relationship between environment and development issues.

Humanitarian Relief

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much United Kingdom aid was spent on humanitarian relief and emergencies in the last year for which figures are available. [9114]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the information contained in table 10 of the 1995 edition of "British Aid Statistics", a copy of which is in the Libraries of the House.

Overseas Aid Budget

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the programmes within the overseas aid budget which will be affected by real expenditure reductions in 1996–97 and the following two years; and by how much each programme will be reduced. [10308]

Mr. Hanley: Planning figures for the period 1996–97 to 1998–99 are being finalised. As usual, the main details of our planned expenditure for this period will be published in the 1996 FCO departmental report in March.

UN Aid Target

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy in respect of reaching the agreed UN target for aid as a percentage of GNP. [10561]

Mr. Hanley: We have not set a timetable for reaching the 0.7 per cent. target. Progress towards the target will depend upon our economic circumstances and on other priorities for public expenditure.

In 1994, our aid to GNP ratio was 0.31 per cent. above the average for all OECD donors of 0.29 per cent.

Development Assistance

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 16 January 1996, Official Report, column 506, in respect of the ODA's fundamental expenditure review, if he will list those countries deemed to be in transition. [10764]

Mr. Hanley: Following are countries of central and eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union which are not also classified as developing countries:

Belarus, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldova, Poland, Romania, Russian Federation, Slovak Republic and Ukraine.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Overfishing (Irish Box)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the projected annual cost of patrolling the Irish box to prevent overfishing; and what estimate he has formed of the proportion of overfishing likely to be committed by each EU member state. [9268]

Mr. Baldry: Fisheries surveillance and enforcement at sea within British fishery limits, including that part of the Irish box falls within UK jurisdiction, is undertaken by the Royal Navy's fishery protection squadron and vessels from the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency and the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland at an annual operating cost of some £13 million. No separate estimate is made of the cost of patrolling that part of the Irish box falling within British fishery limits.

The measures for regulating fishing effort in western waters, including the Irish box, from 1 January this year, require each member state to monitor the uptake of fishing effort by its vessels over 18m overall length and to take action to prevent fishing activity once any effort allocation for a zone fishery has been exhausted.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cause of death of the sheep found dead at Dover harbour on 18 December on a truck carrying a consignment of sheep destined for export through Dover; what was done with the carcasses on discovery, and for what reason; what action was taken by his officials in respect of the surviving sheep; where the dead sheep started their journey and what was the final destination stated in the journey plan; if any prosecution is to be brought in respect of the dead animals; and if he will make a statement. [9270]

Mrs. Browning: The two carcasses were found during inspection of the consignment prior to loading on to the vessel at Dover. The driver was directed to proceed to a local premises: the live sheep were unloaded under supervision and behaved normally. Post mortem inspections were carried out on the two dead sheep, which revealed congestion of the lungs. The consignment had set out from Hereford at 09.45 and arrived at Dover at 15.10. The matter has been investigated by the State Veterinary Service and Kent county council but no evidence was found to link the death of the sheep to the conditions of transport. The live sheep were all rested until the following day, when they were re-inspected and allowed to proceed to their final destination in France.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out all the information as to the final destination provided in the journey plans submitted in respect of the export of sheep in May 1995 for field slaughter near Paris; what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the destination with the provisions of paragraph 1*(b)* of article 3 of EC directive 91/628 on the protection of animals during transport; and if he will make a statement. [9351]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 January 1996]: Sheep shown to have been slaughtered at a religious festival near Paris last May had been consigned in late April from a starting point near Dover to an address in Mitry Mory, Paris. There is no evidence to suggest that irregularities occurred in relation to the provisions of directive 91/628. The animals were slaughtered several days after being delivered to their declared destination: there is no reason why they should not have been moved on from that destination after a suitable period of rest, and provision of food and water.

European Union

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what statutory provisions prevent the United Kingdom from unilaterally withdrawing from the common agricultural and common fisheries policies without withdrawing from the European Commission. [9581]

Mr. Baldry: The principles and objectives of the common agricultural policy and common fisheries policy are to be found in articles 38 to 46 of the EC treaty. By virtue of article N of the treaty on European Union, amendments to the EC treaty can be made only by unanimity. This effectively prevents the UK unilaterally withdrawing from these policies even if it were in our interests to do so.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Department has taken to trace the previous owners of the herd of cattle containing confirmed BSE cases at Old Hall farm,

Gargrave, if he will list the names and addresses of the owners; and if he will indicate the date of birth and death of each cow. [10445]

Mrs. Browning: When a case of BSE is detected in an animal on a dealer's premises, MAFF makes every effort possible to trace the vendor of the animal and then confirms BSE on the vendor's premises. The detailed information requested would, however be available only at disproportionate cost.

Drift Nets

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to advocate a ban on the use of drift nets in European Union waters. [8769]

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) on 7 December 1995, Official Report, column 372.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the numbers and species of birds and sea mammals trapped and killed in drift nets used in British territorial waters in the last 12-month period for which details are available. [8770]

Mr. Baldry: Drift nets used in British territorial waters do not usually exceed 500 m in length. The Ministry has not made a recent assessment of the numbers and species of birds and sea mammals caught in them. However, some information about by-catches in the English north-east coast salmon drift net fishery was included in the Government's 1991 report on salmon net fisheries. This noted that:

- despite frequently being seen around nets, seals were very rarely caught;
- harbour porpoises occasionally became entangled in the drift nets but, because the fishermen have to remain with their salmon gear, they were normally able to release them;
- guillemots, razorbills and very occasionally puffins were caught but the netsmen endeavoured to remove them alive.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his current estimate of the number of dolphins killed as a result of tuna fishing off the western coasts of Britain during 1995. [8771]

Mr. Baldry: I placed in the Library on 20 December a copy of a report by the sea mammal research unit on cetacean by-catch by UK vessels in the 1995 north-east Atlantic tuna fishery. The report records an observed by-catch of 29 striped dolphins and 17 common dolphins, from which the research unit estimated that the total by-catch by the UK fleet was 104 striped and 61 common dolphins. These figures are a very small proportion of the estimated dolphin population size in the area. I do not have equivalent figures for the dolphins killed by the tuna fishing vessels of other countries.

Cattle Movements

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle have been moved from the mainland United Kingdom to Northern Ireland in each month since January 1994 to date. [8781]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The information requested is shown in the table. The figures are derived from the ANIMO system and show the number of cattle certified for export from Great Britain to Northern Ireland. They remain provisional and subject to amendment.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost-effectiveness of having Home Office controllers at Doncaster prison. [8054]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 19 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the cost-effectiveness of having Home Office Controllers at Doncaster.

The Criminal Justice Act (1991) requires every contracted out prison to have a Controller, who is a Crown servant appointed by the Secretary of State.

The Controllers at contracted-out prisons carry out a valuable function in helping to monitor the running and cost effectiveness of those prisons. They offer an independent and objective view of these processes to the Secretary of State and others. Such an objective view might not be provided by the companies themselves. In this respect, the Controllers fulfil a function which is distinct from the day to day management of the prison, and their vital role is provided cost effectively.

Prisons (Mechanical Restraints)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since January 1990 inmates in HMP Holloway have been kept in bodybelts for more than 12 hours. [8420]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 17 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking on how many occasions since January 1990 inmates in Holloway prison have been kept in bodybelts for more than 12 hours.

There are no occasions where a prisoner has been kept in a bodybelt in Holloway prison for more than 12 hours since 1990.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans Her Majesty's Government have to deal with repeat sex offenders; and if he will make a statement; [9678]

(2) what plans Her Majesty's Government have for the co-ordination on a national level of efforts to apprehend paedophile, child pornographers and those who use child pornography; [9676]

3) what plans Her Majesty's Government have for the adoption of a national register of paedophiles; and if he will make a statement; [9679]

(4) what percentage of people previously convicted of sex offences against children have since November 1993 reoffended after release; and what plans Her Majesty's Government have for monitoring the rate of repeat sex offences against children. [9677]

Mr. Maclean: The Government are considering a range of proposals to deal more effectively with sex offenders. I have already proposed that anyone convicted for the second time of a serious sexual or violent offence should receive an automatic life sentence. They would then only be released when they no longer presented a threat to the public. Full details for these proposals will be set out in a White Paper in the spring.

A national police intelligence network on paedophiles already exists and a dedicated paedophile unit within the National Criminal Intelligence Service maintains a database of those who are actively involved in paedophilia. The unit is responsible for developing and disseminating intelligence on those involved in offences of paedophilia both nationally and internationally. Phoenix, the new criminal records database on the police national computer, will give the police instant access to full details of persons convicted of all serious offences, including paedophile and other sex offences.

Statistics on the convictions and the reconvictions of sex offenders do not separately identify offences against children. The special information requested is not therefore available.

Murder Charges

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to abolish the year and a day rule in respect of murder. [9834]

Mr. Maclean: A Bill to abolish the rule is now before Parliament, having been introduced by the hon. Member for Warrington, North (Mr. Hoyle) on 13 December 1995.

Ticket Touts

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made in the Metropolitan police area of ticket touts under provisions in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994; and how many prosecutions were subsequently entered into. [8773]

Mr. Maclean: Section 166 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 makes it an offence for an unauthorised person to sell a ticket for a designated football match in a public place or a place to which the public has access or otherwise by way of a trade or business. The offence came into force on 3 November 1994 and since then there have been 189 arrests for this offence in the Metropolitan police area.

The number of prosecutions in the latter part of 1994 cannot be separately identified from other summary offences. Information on 1995 court proceedings data will be available this autumn.

Football Supporters

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions travelling football supporters have been stopped and searched under provisions contained in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. [8774]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available centrally.

Departmental Costs (Computers)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost of the computer or computers being purchased for his office's C6 division (probation); and what was the original budget for the acquisition of this equipment. [10144]

Mr. Howard: Some 63 personal computers are to be installed in C6 division as part of my Department's programme to provide networked office systems to 2,750 staff in the central areas. The total capital costs for this programme, known as POISE—planned office information systems environment—were estimated in the business case to be £7.6 million over a period of seven years. This estimate remains valid and the capital costs of the C6 division installation may be taken to be proportionate at around £174,000.

Currently there are 72 personal computers in C6 division which were purchased piecemeal or as part of an earlier version of POISE over several years. The estimated cost is £95,000 in total and the purchases were made from a centralised budget set aside for ad hoc information technology support.

In addition, IT equipment is being purchased by the probation services as part of the National Probation Service information systems strategy which covers the needs of the 55 probation services in England and Wales. The estimated capital cost of the national strategy is £31.9 million over five years from 1994–95 to 1998–99. This was the original budget and remains the estimated costs.

Homelessness

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on links between homelessness and offending in the last five years; and what conclusions were reached. [10447]

Mr. Maclean: No such studies have been commissioned to my Department, although a study of young people and crime contains limited data on young runaways. It found that 7 per cent. of a total sample of 1,721 young people in England and Wales aged 14 to 25 reported staying away from home for at least one night without their parents' knowledge prior to the age of 16 and that of these nearly half the females and nearly three quarters of the males had committed at least three offences or one serious offence at some time in their lives.

Prisoners (Housing Benefit)

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funds have been transferred from the Department of Social Security to his office as a result of the changes in the regulations relating to housing benefit for prisoners. [10454]

Mr. Howard: The information is as follows:

1995–96: £324,000

1996–97: £298,000

1997–98: £305,000

1998–99: £312,000 and beyond

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Plant and Machinery

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was, in the constant prices, investment in new plant and machinery per manufacturing employee in each year since 1973; and what is his estimate of the proportion invested in (a) replacing labour and (b) increased capacity. [9796]

Mr. Oppenheim: The level of investment in plant and machinery per employee in constant prices for manufacturing industry are shown in the table. Consistent figures for manufacturing employment are not available before 1978. The data do not distinguish the reason for the investment.

Manufacturing Statistics

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the figures for (a) manufacturing employment and (b) manufacturing output in (i) 1974, (ii) 1979, (iii) 1984, (iv) 1989 and (v) 1994; and what are the latest figures available for 1995. [9399]

Mr. Oppenheim: Figures for manufacturing employees and output are shown in the table.

Consistent figures for employees are not available for 1974.

ICL Technical Plastics

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what amount of regional development grants ICL Technical Plastics received since 1988; at what cost; and for what purpose. [10194]

Mr. Oppenheim: For reasons of commercial confidentiality, we do not disclose details of payments of grants to individual companies. Information on individual accepted offers of regional selective assistance over £75,000 is given in the Employment Gazette.

Miners' Working Shifts

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information is currently collected by his Department in respect of the (a) shortest, (b) longest and (c) average length of a miner's working shift in each of the privatised coal companies since 1993. [9950]

Mr. Page: This information is not collected by the Department.

Carbon Monoxide Detectors

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 497, if he will ensure that information on the new British Standard for carbon monoxide detectors is included in the gas safety leaflets to be circulated to the public in April. [10554]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Details of the planned British Standard on carbon monoxide detectors will be incorporated in the safety leaflets on the dangers of carbon monoxide to be circulated to the public in April, unless the Department receives information that the publication date of this standard will be significantly delayed.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of Board of Trade if he will list for each existing Business Link the members of its board, indicating which firm they work for and how many people that firm employs. [10416]

Mr. Page: The information requested is not available. It could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Shipbuilding Intervention Fund

Mr. Congdon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the level of grants under the shipbuilding intervention fund. [11219]

Mr. Eggar: As I announced to the House on 20 December, the EC shipbuilding regime laid down by the seventh directive will continue until the OECD shipbuilding agreement enters into force, or until 30 September 1996 at the latest.

Following a decision of the European Commission, I have decided that the maximum level of support for this period from the shipbuilding intervention fund shall continue to be 9 per cent. for large ships. This is inclusive of the shipbuilders' tax relief of 2 per cent.

I have similarly decided that the maximum level for small ships from 1 January for this period shall continue to be 4.5 per cent. This is inclusive of shipbuilders' tax relief. These levels are the maximum permitted by the EC shipbuilding regime.

The OECD agreement is due to come into force by 15 July 1996. When it comes into force, support from the shipbuilding intervention fund and equivalent support in other signatory countries, will be terminated. Shipbuilders' tax relief in respect of merchant ships will be terminated at the same time.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Youth Work Funding

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what will be the level of funding of youth work in Northern Ireland next year; what was the expenditure in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [8640]

Mr. Ancram: Funding figures for 1996–97 allocations to the youth service in Northern Ireland are subject to parliamentary approval. It is anticipated that there will be a rise in the budget of the Youth Council for Northern Ireland of 2.5 per cent. on the planning figure of £2,161,000 for 1995–96.

Funding for the youth service in Northern Ireland is also included within the block grant allocations of the local education and library boards. The determination of the levels of funding and allocation of these funds rests with the individual boards.

The Government have also agreed to provide additional funding for youth organisations under the European Union special initiative for peace and reconciliation. A sum in the region of 5 million ECU for the intermediary funding body for the youth sector has been included in the operational programme. The Government will provide additional funds to meet up to 25 per cent. of the total cost of projects funded under this initiative.

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for capital expenditure on further education in Belfast. [8641]

Mr. Ancram: Further education projects such as that planned at the Belfast Institute of Further and Higher Education compete with projects in other sectors for a place in the annual capital new starts programme. The 1996–97 programme, which will be announced shortly, will be constructed from schemes with a high priority which are sufficiently advanced in planning within the total education estate.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what will be the level of the funding of higher education in Northern Ireland in 1996–97; what was the expenditure in 1995–96; and if he will make a statement on the impact of the settlement on the unit of resource in higher education. [8639]

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Education for Northern Ireland is advised on the funding of the two Northern Ireland universities by the Higher Education Funding Council for England. It will be some weeks yet before HEFCE is in a position to advise the Department on the levels of funding for the 1996–97 academic year. Until the funding allocations are known, it is not possible to assess the impact on the unit of resource.

Total recurrent and capital funding to the Northern Ireland universities in the 1995–96 academic year will amount to some £117 million.

Union Flag

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the Royal Ulster Constabulary divisional station in the city of Armagh has been provided with a Union flag; what advice has been issued to the Royal Ulster Constabulary of the days on which the Union flag should be flown; for what reasons the Union flag is not flown on such days at Armagh Royal Ulster Constabulary station; and if arrangements will be made to fly the Union flag at this Royal Ulster Constabulary station. [9208]

Sir John Wheeler: The Union flag is flown over all RUC buildings, including Armagh RUC station, in accordance with RUC instructions. These instructions require that the flag be flown from 8 am to sunset on 19 specified occasions throughout the year. Armagh RUC station has been provided with a flag for this purpose.

Grant-maintained Integrated Schools

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the target numbers for enrolment at each grant-maintained integrated school in Northern Ireland; and which of these schools have reached their target number. [9306]

Mr. Ancram: Development proposals for new grant-maintained integrated schools are expected to demonstrate the potential for minimum enrolments of 100 pupils in primary schools after about seven years of operation and 300 pupils in secondary schools after about five years of operation. All new schools that have been in existence for these periods have in fact exceeded these minimum figures.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the present religious composition of pupils in the enrolment at each grant-maintained integrated school in Northern Ireland; [9307]

(2) on what basis pupils enrolled at grant-maintained integrated schools in Northern Ireland are defined as Protestant or Roman Catholic. [9308]

Mr. Ancram: Parents of pupils attending grant-maintained integrated schools are required to declare the religion of their children to schools. This information is included in the annual school census return.

The present religious composition of pupils in the enrolment of each grant maintained integrated school is as follows:

School	Protestant pupils	Roman catholic pupils	Other pupils	Total
Primary
Acorn	45	33	2	80
Braidside	40	31	78	149
Bridge	111	138	8	257

Lagan College	417	403	97	917
Oakgrove	87	174	19	280
Shimna College	13	45	2	60

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish details of the total public expenditure to date allocated to grant-maintained integrated schools in Northern Ireland. [9209]

Mr. Ancram: Allocations from 1991–92 to date total £11.8 million for capital expenditure and £36.4 million for recurrent expenditure.

Hospices (National Lottery)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the impact of the national lottery on raising funds to support the development and operation of the hospice movement and hospices; what plans he has to ensure the financial security of hospices; and if he will make a statement. [9283]

Mr. Moss: We have not made any assessment of the impact of the national lottery on the fund-raising activities of the hospices in Northern Ireland. We understand that the National Council for Hospice and Palliative Care Services is keeping this matter under review. To help ensure the financial security of hospices, health and social services boards have been asked to enter into contracts for the purchase of hospice services.

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the electricity needs of Northern Ireland it is expected will be provided by the interconnector with Scotland if it is fully operational. [9374]

Mr. Ancram: Under the terms of the agreement entered into between Northern Ireland Electricity plc and Scottish Power plc approximately 20 per cent. of the demand on the Northern Ireland electricity system will be met by the interconnector, when fully operational.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations have been received about the threat to the proposed electricity interconnector from munitions dumped around Beaufort's dyke. [9375]

Mr. Ancram: None. The Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Departments published on 8 January 1996 an interim report on the recent survey of the Beaufort's dyke munitions disposal site and surrounding areas. Further survey work will be carried out.

Disability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement; [9229]

(2) what guidance he intends to issue to local authorities about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement; [9247]

(3) what guidance he intends to issue to health authorities and trusts about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9243]

Mr. Moss: In Northern Ireland, the Training and Employment Agency is currently consulting on a draft code of practice relating to the employment provisions in the Act and statutory guidance related to the definition of disability. Consultation on proposals for regulations under the employment and definition provisions of the Act is also currently underway. The Department of Health and Social Services will be asking the Northern Ireland Disability Council, when it first meets, to produce and consult a code of practice relating to the rights of access to goods and services. The Department of Health and Social Services will also be consulting on associated regulations. All these items will be published in plenty of time to allow employers and service providers in Northern Ireland to prepare themselves for the introduction of the new rights and duties. I will ensure that Northern Ireland Departments and any bodies for which they are responsible will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are in place to ensure that the inaccessibility of school transport is not a restricting factor in integrating disabled children into mainstream schools; and if he will make a statement. [9249]

Mr. Ancram: Where an education and library board maintains a statement of special educational needs in respect of a pupil, the board has the statutory duty under article 31 of the Education and Libraries (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 to arrange for the special educational provision specified in the statement to be made. Where a board considered that it was necessary to make arrangements for home-to-school transport to enable a pupil to benefit from special educational provision, it would specify these in the statement also. If ordinary bus services were not accessible to the child concerned, alternative suitable arrangements would be made, for example by using taxi services or by securing a place on a specially adapted bus. These arrangements would apply whether the special educational provision were being provided at a special school or a mainstream school.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in relation to the development of sports for disabled people. [9290]

Mr. Ancram: My Department's policy in this regard is based on the 1989 publication, "Building on Ability". The principles of this publication have been enshrined in a policy framework document prepared by the NI Sports Council in 1993 on sport for people with disability.

SCOTLAND

Tuberculosis Vaccination

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the number of BCG vaccinations delivered to school children will, on current trends, reach the level recorded in (a) 1985 and (b) 1980; and if he will make a statement. [7367]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Current practice is to provide tuberculin testing for school children aged around 12. Where the test is negative, BCG vaccination is offered. Figures published by the Registrar General for Scotland show that the number of 12-year-olds declined substantially over the period between 1980 and 1994. In consequence, the number of vaccinations has also decreased and, on current trends, the number of children vaccinated is unlikely, in the foreseeable future, to reach the levels recorded in these earlier years. The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, which advises Health Ministers on vaccination issues, is reviewing the current arrangements for BCG testing and vaccination in schools and its recommendations, when available, will be carefully considered. Data on population, testing and vaccination in the years 1980, 1985 and 1994 are given in the following table.

	Estimated population of 12 year olds	Number of shcoolchildren[1] tested	Number of schoolchildren testing negative[2]	Number of schoolchildren[3] vaccinated	Percentage of schoolchildren[3] vaccinated
1980	87,067	83,165	74,147	72,422	97.7
1985	71,924	79,001	71,377	69,562	97.5
1994	65,054	57,725	53,754	51,785	96.3

[1] Figures may include children other than aged 12 where, for instance, testing focuses on school classes rather than age specifically.
[2] i.e. without natural immunity.
[3] Only children testing negative are vaccinated. Figure therefore excludes those who tested positive and who for any other reason, such as parental request, were not vaccinated.

Clinical Outcomes

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what work his Department is currently undertaking on health service clinical outcomes; and what plans he has to publish comparative data on clinical outcomes in each NHS trust and health board area in Scotland. [9202]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A report updating and refining the outcome indicators published in December 1994 will be published next month. A further report containing new indicators is planed for publication later in the year.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of state for Scotland if he will publish the target figure in monetary terms for the return on capital for each NHS trust annually since their inception and the actual return as capital annually; and how much of the actual surplus was (a) retained by the NHS trusts and (b) returned to the Government. [7366]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table and was taken from NHS trust accounts for financial years 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement. [9140]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The heads of the Scottish Office executive agencies recognise the importance of providing effective support for staff about to retire. The method used to provide that support can vary from agency to agency and is a matter for each chief executive, but many of them use facilities provided through the Scottish Office.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which capital projects are currently being considered under the private finance initiative; and what is the cost of each project. [9031]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The following projects are the subject of negotiation or are expected to be put out to tender soon:

Project	Estimated capital value (£ million)
Highland Regional Council: Fort William/Inverness sewage treatment scheme	45.0
Edinburgh Healthcare NHS Trust: Ferryfield house: elderly beds	2.0
Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health Services Trust: Stobhill Hospital: acute mental health beds	7.4
Hairmyres and Stonehouse NHS Trust: new hospital	70.0
Law Hospital NHS Trust: health information system	2.5
Perth and Kinross Healthcare NHS Trust: health information system	2.5
Dundee District Council: Baldovie waste to energy facility	40.0
Grampian Health Board: Stonehaven health services	3.8
Law Hospital NHS Trust: new hospital	120.0
M6 completion	[1]10.0
Ayrshire and Arran Community Health Trust: East Ayrshire health services	8.0
Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS Trust: new hospital	140.0
Western General Hospital NHS Trust (Edinburgh): new hospital	95.0

[1] Estimated value of remaining Scottish section.

Six projects are currently in progress, contracts have been let. These are all in the health sector and have a total estimated capital value of £22.9 million.

Scottish Homes (Transfers)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the scope of his announcement that local authorities will now be able to bid for Scottish Homes properties which were earmarked for transfer. [9252]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Convention of Scottish Local Authorities proposal that local authorities should be able to bid more widely for Scottish Homes stock was included in the consultation paper, "Devolution of Power to Councils", which was issued on 29 December and is currently the subject of consultation. Until a decision is taken following the responses to the consultation exercise, the current policy will continue to be applied.

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representation he has received concerning the need for an inquiry into the undersea section of the proposed electricity interconnector with Northern Ireland; what response he has given; and if he will make a statement. [9320]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received one such representation. This was passed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport in view of his responsibilities under section 34 of the Coast Protection Act 1949.

Disability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest assessment of the impact of local government reorganisation on the provision of services for disabled people; what guidelines he (a) has issued and (b) intends to issue to unitary authorities on the provision of services for and to disabled people; what arrangements he intends to put in place to ensure the continuation of services which are currently provided across the new local government authority boundaries; and if he will make a statement. [9236]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The new local government arrangements will allow authorities the flexibility to establish procedures and structures to secure the efficient and effective delivery of social work services for people with disabilities in response to local needs and circumstances.

The Government have been determined to ensure a smooth transition to the new arrangements. As part of the community care planning process for 1995–98, local authorities were asked to identify both current and planned services within the new local authorities' boundaries. This will ensure that the new authorities have an informed insight on current strategic thinking and the pattern of services in their areas. The recently produced booklet "Managing Social Work Services in the Future", was distributed widely to both old and new authorities to ensure that elected members were fully aware of their authorities' responsibilities for the provision of social work services. The new authorities are also being provided with a complete package of up-dated guidance and directions on the community care arrangements.

With regard to the provision of services across the new local authority boundaries, authorities will continue to be able to contract with independent sector providers in other areas. Section 58 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1994 clarified authorities's powers with regard to purchasing services from other authorities.

Authorities also already have available procedures to allow them to enter joint arrangements with other authorities or independent sector organisations in consortia to develop specialist services.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures are in place to ensure that the inaccessibility of school transport is not a restricting factor in integrating disabled children into mainstream schools; and if he will make a statement. [9257]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The provision of school transport is a matter for education authorities who have certain statutory duties, in addition to wide powers, to make appropriate arrangements in respect of disabled children who are attending mainstream schools.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure that disabled people are represented on the health boards and health councils which he is responsible for appointing; and if he will make a statement. [9361]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A number of disabled people already serve in a non-executive capacity on health boards and NHS trusts and their contribution brings a necessary and important perspective to the boards to which they are appointed. Invitations to serve as non-executives are sought from a wide range of community, voluntary and health groups together with press advertisements to ensure the broadest range of community membership is available for health boards and NHS trusts.

Responsibility for appointments to health councils rests with local health boards, who are encouraged to seek a broad representation of members appointed to serve on health councils.

Scots Language

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has made representations to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys concerning a question on the Scots language being included in the 2001 census; and if he will make a statement. [9383]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Registrar General for Scotland is currently canvassing the views of a number of individuals and organisations with an interest in the Scots language. It will be some time before a decision will be taken on the merits and practicality of including a question on Scots in the census.

Incontinence Pads

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on the supply of incontinence pads to those who require them because of disability; what plans he has to review these arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [9213]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In Scotland, general practitioners are able to prescribe incontinence pads. A range of incontinence pads is included in the Scottish drug tariff. There are no current plans to review these arrangements.

Autism

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the services available to (a) children and (b) adults with autism; and what plans he has to enhance these services. [9253]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: Local social work, education and health authorities are responsible for determining and responding to the social, educational and health care needs of children with autism. The Scottish Office has commissioned a research project on the incidence of autism among children in Scotland and the current education provision for autistic pupils. The project will draw on experience through the UK in considering which types of educational approaches are most appropriate for children with autism. With regard to adults with autism, under the community care arrangements, local authority social work departments, in conjunction with health and housing authorities, are responsible for assessing the requirement for care services to meet the needs of vulnerable adults living in the community. Local authorities are well funded to meet these responsibilities and must establish their priorities for service development and resource allocation in response to local circumstances.

Carers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure that carers are represented on the health boards and health councils which he is responsible for appointing; and if he will make a statement. [9365]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Invitations to serve as non-executives on health boards and NHS trusts are sought from a wide range of community, voluntary and health groups, a number of whom will represent the interests of carers. Invitations are also made by press advertisements to ensure that the broadest range of community membership of health boards and NHS trusts is available.

Responsibility for appointments to health councils rests with local health boards, who are similarly encouraged to ensure that a broad representation of community interests is available through the appointment of members.

National Lottery

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact of the national lottery on raising funds to support the development and operation of the hospice movement and hospices; what plans he has to ensure the financial security of hospices; and if he will make a statement. [9280]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is as yet no conclusive evidence about the impact of the national lottery on the fund-raising activities of the adult voluntary hospices in Scotland. The Scottish Office will keep in close contact with the Scottish Partnership Agency for Palliative and Cancer Care, which will continue to keep this matter under review. Two hospices have already benefited from the national lottery fund, and we have given an assurance that such funding can be treated independently of the hospices' income from their contracts with health boards.

When my right hon. Friend met representatives of the hospice movement on 21 December 1995 to discuss a number of issues, including finance, he reaffirmed his view that hospices should be able to expect to receive around half of their running cost income through their contracts with health boards; and he recognised the benefits of longer contracts in increasing their financial security.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of the national lottery upon the fund-raising efforts of charities and voluntary organisations in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [9286]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is, as yet, no conclusive evidence concerning the impact of the national lottery on the fund-raising activities of charities and voluntary organisations. However, the Government have given a commitment to monitor charitable income, and The Scottish Office is associated with a Home Office research project which will analyse and monitor changes in charitable income, following the introduction of the national lottery.

Gateside School for the Deaf

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future of the services provided by Gateside school for the deaf to (a) children in the new Renfrewshire council's area and (b) other unitary authorities. [9371]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: It will be for the new Renfrewshire council and for the two other councils whose areas are currently served by staff based at Gateside school to determine how to discharge their statutory duties in respect of children belonging to their areas who have special educational needs arising from hearing impairment.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the rate of medical accidents and hospital acquired infections, injuries and fatalities in the Greater Glasgow health board area in each year since 1979. [9543]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: With the exception of 1979, for which year comparable figures are not available centrally, (i) the number of discharges after medical accidents and (ii) the number of deaths after medical accidents are shown in the tables.

(i) Greater Glasgow Health Board: Discharges after Medical Accidents, 1980–1995[1]

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987

Total	1	—	3	3	4	10	3

[1] These figures include: (a) hospital acquired infections but exclude: (b) accidental overdoses of drugs and cases where the wrong drug was given in error (c) surgical and medical procedures as the cause of abnormal reactions by the patient, without mention of misadventure at the time of the procedure.

[2] These figures include: (a) correct drug properly administered in therapeutic or prophylactics dosage, as the cause of any adverse effect but exclude: (b) accidental overdose of drug and cases where the wrong drug was given in error (c) administration with suicidal or homicidal intent.

Over the same period the number of in-patients and day cases in the Greater Glasgow health board area rose by 35 per cent. from 183,178 to 248,129.

Scottish Office Pensions Agency

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the privatisation of the Scottish Office Pensions Agency; and if he will make a statement. [10105]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 18 January 1996]: I have no plans to privatise the agency.

TRANSPORT

Goods and Public Service Vehicle Drivers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in how many instances in the last five years an applicant for goods vehicle and public service vehicle licence has received a licence despite having a criminal record. [10192]

Mr. Norris: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that schools and local education authorities check school bus drivers' credentials, including any criminal convictions, with the police; [10190]

(2) what steps he is taking to improve liaison between the police, schools and local education authorities concerning checking applications for school bus drivers and similar positions. [10191]

Mr. Norris: Individual schools and local education authorities are responsible for checking the credentials of all those who work with children in their charge and for appropriate liaison with police forces.

Road Rage

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to introduce psychological counselling for road rage; and if he will make a statement; [9917]

(2) what proposals he has to combat road rage by psychological counselling. [9918]

Mr. Norris: The courts may impose a probation or combination order on an offender, who is supervised by a probation officer required to assess the offender's motivations, pattern of offending and relevant problems and devise a supervision programme designed to address them. This can include mandatory or voluntary counselling and treatment where the offender has reacted inappropriately to a situation on the road. Consideration is being given to whether anything further needs to be done.

MOTs

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to review the need to issue annual reminders to motorists to have MOTs as part of his policy to reduce pollution from cars; and if he will make a statement. [10412]

Mr. Norris: We have no plans to review the need for mandatory annual MOT reminders. I believe that the benefits would be minimal: motorists already receive an annual vehicle excise duty reminder and cannot at that stage relicense their vehicles without a current MOT test certificate.

We are, however, exploring in the context of MOT computerisation the matter of garages being able voluntarily to issue MOT reminders.

TREASURY

Profit-related Pay Schemes

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer that proposals he has for (a) reviewing and (b) improving profit-related pay schemes. [8310]

Mr. Jack: The operation of this tax relief is kept under regular review. Action is taken when necessary to ensure that the relief continues to meet its policy objectives.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the amount per week a married couple with two children on average male earnings is estimated to have paid in VAT, at today's prices, in the year 1978–79; and what he estimates a similar family will pay in 1995–96. [8530]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A married couple with two children on average earnings paid VAT of £7.36 per week in 1978–79, in 1995–96 prices, and an estimated £21.40 in 1995–96. Since 1978–79, the real take-home pay of such a family has risen by £80 per week.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list and give full details of all applications for capital schemes from the west midlands region seeking PFI approval for 1994–95 and 1995–96; and in each case (a) which have been approved, (b) which are still awaiting approval and (c) which were originally the subject of bids for full funding from Treasury. [9205]

Mr. Jack: Full details of applications for capital schemes from the west midlands region could be provided only at disproportionate cost, due to the diverse numbers of organisations involved with PFI throughout the public sector.

Live Creatures and Plants (Customs Seizures)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the seizure of live animals and birds by HM Customs and Excise in each of the last three years. [8779]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The numbers of live animals and birds seized by HM Customs and Excise in the last three years for breach of the endangered species controls are as follows:

	1993	1994	1995[1]
Animals	313	1,036	2,034
Birds	2,503	120	53

[1] To end September.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many prosecutions were entered into as a result of seizure of live creatures and plants by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in each of the last three years. [8780]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There have been five prosecutions in the last three years, all of them successful.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has (a) read, collated or received and (b) authorised civil servants or any other person to read, collate or receive copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated by Sir Richard Scott to Government Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10213]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 18 January 1996]: The handling of extracts of Sir Richard Scott's draft report, subject to guidance from the inquiry, is for those to whom they are sent. The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in Her Majesty's Customs and Excise employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any connection in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10211]

Mr. Clarke [holding answer 18 January 1996]: The staff costs of officials within HM Customs and Excise wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry since 1992 are approximately £443,000. The total staffing costs to date of the Department's Scott inquiry unit are estimated to be around £720,000. This does not include the unquantifiable costs of current and former Customs and Excise officials who acted as witnesses to the Scott inquiry who have been involved on an ad hoc basis.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department or by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry, including how much has been spent on legal advice and for whom. [10212]

Mr. Clarke [holding answer 18 January 1996]: The amount so far spent by the Treasury on external advice in relation to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry is £2,468. Some £60,440 has been spent by HM Customs and Excise on external legal advice both for witnesses who are Customs officials and for independent counsel involved in the cases considered by the inquiry. The names of the individuals and their legal advisors are confidential to them.

Self-employed People

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from self-employed people and their organisations in respect of his recent Budget proposals; what has been the nature of such representations; and if he will make a statement. [8561]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 15 January 1996]: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has received a number of representations since the Budget, but it would not be practicable to identify separately those from self-employed people. The income tax measures in the Budget will cut tax for some 3 million self-employed taxpayers. The introduction of self-assessment will greatly simplify the current outdated and complex rules for taxation of the self-employed.

HEALTH

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of carbon monoxide poisoning annually resulting in death and injury involve (a) persons over the age of 60 years and (b) students and persons under the age of 25 years. [9718]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The estimated annual average UK totals over the latest five years for non-fatal accidental carbon monoxide poisonings from all causes, but excluding work-related accidents, are as follows:

Age	Total
Under 25 years	272
Over 60 years	29

The annual average numbers over the latest five years of accidental carbon monoxide fatalities from all causes in England and Wales, again excluding work related-accidents, are as follows:

Age	Total
Under 25 years	28
Over 60 years	44

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of carbon monoxide poisoning resulting in deaths and injury annually are caused by (a) live fuel effect gas fires, (b) gas water heaters, (c) gas central heating, (d) other gas appliances, (e) live fuel effect liquid petroleum gas fires, (f) liquid petroleum gas water heaters, (g) liquid petroleum gas central heating, (h) other liquid gas petroleum appliances, (i) solid fuel fires, (j) solid fuel central heating, (k) oil-fired central heating boilers and (l) other agents. [9705]

Mr. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The estimated annual average UK totals for non-fatal accidental carbon monoxide poisonings from all causes, but excluding work-related accidents, are as follows:

	Number
Live-fuel effect gas fires	87
Gas water heaters	106
Gas central heating	19
Other gas appliances	n/a
Live fuel effect liquid petroleum gas fires	n/a
Liquid petroleum gas water heaters	n/a
Liquid petroleum gas central heating	n/a
Other liquid gas petroleum appliances	n/a
Solid fuel cooking ranges	51
Solid fuel fires	13
Solid fuel central heating	n/a
Oil-fired central heating boilers	n/a
Non-appliance-related accidents	169
Unknown source	85

n/a—No data available.

Coroners' returns of fatalities from carbon monoxide do not contain the degree of detail necessary for the categorisation specified in the question. However, the special report, "Poisoning by Carbon Monoxide from Domestic Heating Appliances", sponsored by the Department's consumer safety unit and published in 1995 by Metra-Martech Ltd., copies of which are available in the Library of the House, contains estimates of the annual totals of accidents and fatalities, classified separately by appliance and fuel type.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of carbon monoxide poisoning resulting in deaths and injury annually are caused by (a) natural gas, (b) liquid petroleum gas, (c) solid fuel, (d) domestic fuel oil and (e) other agents. [9719]

Mr. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The estimated annual average UK totals over the latest five years for non-fatal accidental carbon monoxide poisonings from all causes, but excluding work-related accidents, are as follows:

	Number
Natural gas	212
Liquid petroleum gas	[1]—
Solid fuel	64
Domestic fuel oil	[1]—
Other agents	[1]—

[1] No accidents registered on the Home Accident Surveillance System.

The annual averages over the latest five years for accidental carbon monoxide fatalities from all causes in England and Wales, again excluding work-related accidents, are as follows:

	Number
Natural gas	25
Liquid petroleum gas	3
Solid fuel	7
Domestic fuel oil	1
Unknown agents	10
Non-appliance-related	79

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of carbon monoxide poisoning resulting in deaths and injury there have been in the last 10 years. [9706]

Mr. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The number of accidental injuries owing to carbon monoxide poisoning in Great Britain from home heating appliances is estimated as follows:

1985: 215
1986: 161
1987: 176
1988: 53
1989: 130
1990: 128

The comparable figures for accidental figures owing to carbon monoxide poisoning from non-appliance-related cases are:

1985: 151
1986: 101
1987: 59
1988: 309
1989: 74
1990: 110
1991: 285
1992: 89
1993: 42
1994: 273

The annual totals for fatalities from carbon monoxide poisoning from domestic heating appliances are:

1985: 16
1986: 76
1987: 52
1988: 39
1989: 42
1990: 46

Residential Care Homes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 December, Official Report, column 1134, in what form information about residential geriatric beds is available. [8449]

Mr. Bowis: Information on the average daily number of available national health service beds, including those in wards classified as for the elderly is published in "Bed availability for England". Information on the number of beds in independent sector hospitals, nursing homes and clinics is published in "Private Hospitals, Homes and Clinics Registered under Section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1994". Information on residential accommodation provided in staffed local authority accommodation, voluntary and private homes in England for elderly and for people who are physically or sensorily disabled is published in "Residential Accommodation for Elderly People and People with Physical and/or Sensory Disabilities". Copies of all these publications are available in the Library.

Disability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9219]

(2) what guidance he intends to issue to health authorities and trusts about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9241]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Minister for Disabled People gave to him on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 417. I will ensure that my Department and any bodies for which it is responsible will be made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Autism

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the services available to (a) children and (b) adults with autism; and what plans he has to enhance these services. [9254]

Mr. Bowis: Health and local authorities are responsible for the provision and development of appropriate services in their areas in the light of departmental guidance, "The Children Act 1989 Guidance and Regulations Volume 6 Children with Disabilities", LAC(92)15 and HSG(92)42, copies of which are available in the Library. We are also funding a number of projects through the voluntary sector which will heighten awareness of the needs of people with autism and assist in the development of services.

Hormone Replacement Therapy

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies his Department is undertaking into links between hormone replacement therapy and breast cancer. [9490]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health is currently discussing research into the long-term effects of hormone replacement therapy with the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Psychiatric Nurses

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses working in psychiatric areas in the community per thousand population were employed by the NHS in (a) south Birmingham, (b) north Birmingham in the most recent five years for which figures are available. [9400]

Mr. Bowis: The information is shown in the table.

NHS hospital and community health services nursing and midwifery staff working within the community psychiatric nursing areas of work, excluding senior nurses and agency staff—by South Birmingham and North Birmingham district health authorities as at 30 September each year

Per 1,000 head of population	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
South Birmingham DHA[1]	0.134	0.131	0.127	0.138	0.140
North Birmingham DHA[2]	0.049	0.056	0.061	0.061	0.125

Notes

[1] The figure for 1990 includes data for Central Birmingham DHA which merged with South Birmingham in 1991 to form the current South Birmingham DHA.

[2] The figures for 1990 to 1993 includes data for East Birmingham DHA and West Birmingham DHA which merged with North Birmingham DHA to form the current North Birmingham DHA.

Community psychiatric nursing figures include qualified, unqualified and "other" nursing staff working within community psychiatric nursing area of work.

All nursing data are rounded to the nearest 10 whole-time equivalents.

Calculations are based on unrounded figures.

Prescriptions (Sheffield)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions were issued in Sheffield health authority for each of the last three years; and what was the total cost for each year. [9544]

Mr. Malone: The figures relating to prescriptions written by general practitioners in Sheffield family health services authority and dispensed anywhere in England are shown in the table.

Year	Number of Items	Cost in NIC £
1992–93	5,239,217	31,052,082
1993–94	5,597,739	34,109,947
1994–95	5,792,733	37,224,212

NIC="Net Ingredient Cost"—ie the cost of the drug excluding container costs and any discount obtained by the dispenser.

Emergency Service

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency patients were transported more than 50 miles to receive hospital treatment in each month of 1995; and how many have subsequently died. [9825]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

NHS Chairmen and Non-executive Directors

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a list of current NHS chairmen and non-executive directors and the posts previously held by them. [9905]

Mr. Malone: A list of all appointments to national health service authorities and trusts will be published in the summer. It is not intended to include details of appointees' previous NHS posts.

Probity Audits

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS audit activity was devoted to probity audits in (a) 1985 and (b) 1995. [9835]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Executive Directors (Severance)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if NHS trusts are required to obtain the approval of the NHS executive before agreeing severance settlements for executive directors. [9836]

Mr. Malone: No. The guidance TEL(94)3 does not require trusts to submit information regarding compensation payments to directors.

Trainee Nurses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to increase the number of nurses in training. [9837]

Mr. Horam: It is for local employers to determine the work force required to deliver the services that they have contracted to provide. They do this in the context of annual planning guidance issued by the National Health Service Executive, which maintains a national overview.

Paracetamol

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to ensure the safety of the current formulation of paracetamol. [9910]

Mr. Malone: The current formulation of paracetamol is safe when the recommended dose is not exceeded. Labelling regulations require that all packs instruct the patient not to exceed the recommended dose, which is clearly stated. Legislation restricts the number of tablets in a pack that can be bought without a pharmacist's supervision.

Attention Deficit Disorder

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those university teaching hospitals, medical colleges and other institutions involved in the training of medical doctors, indicating which of them include in their courses training in attention deficit disorder. [9017]

Mr. Malone: Each university medical school in the United Kingdom is responsible for setting its own undergraduate medical curriculum. It does so in the light of recommendations from the education committee of the General Medical Council which has the statutory responsibility for determining the skills and knowledge required for the granting of primary medical qualifications in the UK. Information on each medical school's curriculum is not available centrally.

The medical royal colleges are responsible for determining the content of postgraduate and continuing medical education programmes for qualified doctors. The Royal College of Psychiatrists is currently responsible for accreditation of postgraduate training schemes in child psychiatry and aims to ensure that all trainee psychiatrists receive a broad training in all relevant assessment and treatment interventions which would include the assessment and management of attention deficit disorder.

Epilepsy

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated in the last five years into the effects on drivers who suffer from epilepsy of light emitting diodes bicycle lights. [8618]

Mr. Bowis: None. The use of flashing LED bicycle lights is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

NHS Loto

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been received by the national health service from the NHS Loto (a) prior to and (b) since June 1995; and how much money has been spent. [8772]

Mr. Horam: NHS Loto is a lottery run independently of the Government, the Department of Health, and the national health service by Pascal and Company on behalf of the National Hospital Trust, a registered charity. I understand that 25 per cent. of the income of NHS Loto is given to the National Hospital Trust to donate to NHS hospitals. The trust makes substantial donations directly to NHS hospitals for specific projects and not via the Department of Health. The hon. Member may wish to contact the National Hospital Trust at No. 2 Centric house, Shoreditch high street, London E1 6JD for a list of donations.

Travel Vaccination

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is his Department's official policy regarding the provision of travel vaccines on the NHS; and if he is reviewing it; [9816]

(2) what plans he has to make a statement about travel vaccines on the NHS. [9817]

Mr. Horam: The position of successive Governments has been that immunisations against some infectious diseases are provided free for travellers as a matter of public health policy. This is the case for diseases where immunisation benefits not only the recipient but also the community at large by helping to prevent the spread of disease in the United Kingdom. Not all diseases covered by travel vaccines present a similar public health risk. Advice about possible risks, and measures which can be taken to avoid illness abroad, including travel vaccines, continues to be available free from general practitioners.

The Department of Health is currently considering the existing arrangements for travel vaccines in order to resolve the inconsistencies and ambiguities which have arisen over the years.

Hospital Bed Occupancy Rates

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department provides on hospital bed occupancy rates. [9818]

Mr. Horam: None.

Young People (Secure Accommodation)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many young people (a) in total, (b) by age and (c) by gender were being held in local authority secure accommodation (i) on criminal grounds and (ii) on care grounds on the last date for which figures are available; [10147]

(2) how many young people were held in local authority secure accommodation on criminal grounds, in total; and how many of them were (a) on remand, (b) sentenced using section 53(2) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1993 and (c) on other grounds at the last date for which figures are available. [10148]

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is published in "Children accommodated in secure units during the year ending 31 March 1995, England, A/F 95/21", copies of which are available in the Library.

Drinking Water

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which is his policy as to the acceptable level of (a) salmonella campylobacter, (b) E. coli and (c) cryptosporidium in potable water. [10340]

Mr. Horam: Standards are laid down in legislation for faecal coliforms, which would include E. coli. The legislation also requires that water does not contain any organism at a concentration detrimental to public health. Water which meets legislative requirements for faecal coliforms indicator organisms is unlikely to contain salmonella or campylobacter. Research has shown that well operated treatment plants reduce cryptosporidium to very low levels. If cryptosporidium is detected, water companies, in discussion with local public health and environmental health officials, are responsible for making decisions.

Legionnaire's Disease, Turkey

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Public Health Laboratory Service was first informed about an outbreak of Legionnaire's disease in Kusadasi, Turkey. [10443]

Mr. Horam: The Public Health Laboratory Service will consider that there may be an outbreak of Legionnaire's disease among residents of the United Kingdom only when two or more reported cases appear to be linked. The PHLS first became aware of a second case of Legionnaire's disease in a resident of the UK, associated with a recent stay in Kusadasi, Turkey, on 11 August 1995.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the report of the Public Health Laboratory Service into an outbreak of Legionnaire's disease in Kusadasi, Turkey, during 1995. [10444]

Mr. Horam: The report entitled, "Outbreak of Legionnaire's Disease Associated with the Hotel Imbat, Kusadasi, Turkey—Final Report and Recommendations from the Epidemiological, Environmental and Microbiological Investigations carried out by the PHLS in conjunction with the Turkish Representative of the European Working Group for Legionella Infections" is currently in preparation. Copies of this report will be placed in the Library.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in respect of which TECs she considers monitoring systems are (a) adequate and (b) inadequate. [10413]

Mr. Paice: The Department assigns financial risk banding to each training and enterprise council after assessing whether it complies with financial control provisions contained in the TEC operating agreement. These require TECs to monitor their own activities, and those of subcontractors, as well as meeting a range of obligations to young people and adults participating in training programmes.

These assessment do not cover TECs' private income nor any other internal financial matter which fall outside their contracts with Government. Financial control risk banding are reviewed quarterly, but individual TEC results are confidential.

The latest composite TEC risk banding results are for the quarter ended 30 September 1995, when all 74 English TECs fell within the Department's low risk band.

Tree People (Benefit Claims)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will ensure that her officials enforce the availability for work rule on benefit claimants living in trees near the Newbury bypass; and if she will make a statement. [10526]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Nicholson, dated 19 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about ensuring that officials enforce the availability for work rule on benefit claimants living in trees near the Newbury by-pass.

It may help if I explain that the receipt of unemployment benefits is conditional upon a person being available for and actively seeking employment. This means that they must be available to start work immediately; must not place such restrictions on the work they are willing to do which would leave them with no real prospects of finding a job and must take those steps, each week, which offer them their best prospects of obtaining work.

To satisfy the actively seeking employment condition, the steps an individual is required to take in any week are those which are reasonable in their case and which offer them their best prospects of receiving offers of employment. Steps may include applying for jobs, orally or in writing, looking in appropriate newspapers, trade magazines or other publications and following up possible job opportunities and canvassing employers. For the purposes of the actively seeking employment regulation, taking one step on a single occasion in a week is not enough to satisfy the condition unless that was all it was reasonable for the individual to do in that week.

The onus is on the claimant to show what steps they have taken to seek work. The legislation does not require written evidence but claimants are advised to keep records of their jobsearch to help them. Evidence can therefore be given orally or in writing and may include names and addresses of employers approached, copies of any written applications made and replies received, details of advertised vacancies which have been applied for, list of Jobcentres visited and job enquiries made.

I can assure you that my people in Newbury Jobcentre are applying the availability and actively seeking employment conditions to all claimants, including those who are taking part in the Newbury by-pass protest. My manager at Newbury has confirmed that, as with other claimants, protesters are seen regularly to check their jobsearch and some have applied for and been submitted to vacancies on display at the Jobcentre.

If there are any doubts about whether an individual satisfies the entitlement conditions their claim is referred to the independent adjudicating authorities for a decision. A number of adjudication disallowances have been obtained on claims made by protesters.

Out-of-school Child Care Initiative

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the details of the new funding programme for out-of-school child care commencing April 1996 will be made available. [10339]

Mr. Paice: Officials are currently working, in consultation with training and enterprise councils, to develop planning guidance for the extension in England of this initiative announced following the Chancellor's Budget statement. I expect that this guidance will be issued to TECs in the next few weeks.

Student Loans

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the Education (Students Loans) Bill allows higher education institutions to recover the costs of validating applications for private sector loans. [10294]

Mr. Forth: Our aim is that higher education institutions will receive payments in respect of the costs they incur in certifying loan applications, irrespective of whether these are for public or private sector loans. I am considering whether the Bill requires amendment to put this beyond doubt.

I shall write to my right hon. Friend once I have taken a decision.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Claimants, Walthamstow

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people in Walthamstow in receipt of income support. [8981]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathieson, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated 17 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what is his estimate of the number of people in Walthamstow in receipt of Income Support (IS).

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are not kept which are specific to Parliamentary Constituencies, the borders of which are not the same as those of benefit offices. Statistics are kept on the IS computer system on the number of people claiming IS in each Benefit Agency District.

The Lea Roding District comprises of the Ilford, Leytonstone and Walthamstow benefit offices. The number of people claiming income support from this District for the quarter ended 30 November 1995 was 62,777, this is a provisional figure which may be subject to amendment.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefits Agency (Assaults on Staff)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish for each standard region and for the United Kingdom the number of reported cases of assault on the staff of the Benefits Agency in their offices or in the course of their work for the last available three years; and if he will make a statement. [8687]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the Benefits Agency is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 18 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will publish for each standard region and for the United Kingdom the number of reported cases of assault on the staff of the Benefits Agency in their offices or in the course of their work for the last available three years; and if he will make a statement.

The Benefits Agency produces annual statistics to show the reported numbers of assaults on its staff. These statistics are not available in the form requested. Annexe A gives details of the information available.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Annexe A: Reported cases of assault on the staff of the benefits agency

Habitual Residence Test

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people who have been tested by the Benefits Agency regarding their habitual residence in the common travel area have passed the habitual residence test since it introduction in August 1994; and how many were (a) European Economic Area nationals, (b) UK citizens and (c) others; [6812]

(2) if he will now update the information contained in his answer to the hon. Member for Dagenham (Ms Church) of 20 February 1995, Official Report, column 12, concerning the number of British citizens who have passed the habitual residence test since its introduction; [6998]

(3) how many British citizens have passed the habitual residence test since its introduction. [10235]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table and covers the period August 1994 to November 1995. It relates only to income support. Housing benefit figures will not be available until December 1996 at the earliest.

	Pass
EEA nationals	11,660
British citizens	76,494
Others	14,323
Total	102,477

The Benefits Agency has placed figures relating to the habitual residence test in the Library since April 1995.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who have been tested by the Benefits Agency regarding their habitual residence have passed the test each month since its introduction, broken down into European Economic Area nationals, United Kingdom citizens and others. [10236]

Mr. Heald: The information is set out in the table.

Number of claims which have passed the habitual residence test since introduction

November 1995	800	6,085	694
December 1995	371	4,229	459

1. These figures are provisional and may be subject to change. From April 1995 onwards these figures are available in the Library.
2. The figures for "UK Citizens" and "Others" may include repeat claims.
3. "Others" include foreign nationals who have been given indefinite leave to enter or remain in the UK by the immigration authorities.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of those who failed the habitual residence test in its first year were United Kingdom citizens; what was the total estimated savings from the test in its first year; what proportion of the savings was owing to failure by United Kingdom citizens; and if he will set out the basis of his calculation. [10237]

Mr. Heald: Twenty one per cent. of income support claimants who failed the habitual residence test were British citizens. The total estimated income-related benefits savings from the test in its first year is £28 million. The proportion of savings owing to failure by British citizens is 53 per cent. of this figure. These savings are calculated on the basis that European Union citizens would have received income-related benefits, including income support, averaging £104.95 a week for an estimated period of 13 weeks before going off benefit. British citizens are assumed to have received the same amount for an estimated 26 weeks. The amount of benefit is based on the income support personal allowance for single claimants aged over 25 plus the average amount of housing benefit and council tax benefit paid in the London area. Figures relating to failures arising out of housing benefit without receipt of income support will not be available until late 1996.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on (a) the operation of and (b) the forecasting procedures for cold weather payments. [9624]

Mr. Heald: The cold weather payments scheme, which runs from 1 November to 31 March each year, works very well: payments are made automatically; current arrangements are sensible, responsive, and are based on the best scientific information from the Meteorological Office. Extra help is focused on the most vulnerable groups receiving income support, when there is a sustained period of very cold weather in their area. So far this winter, 3.8 million payments worth almost £32 million have been made.

In 1991, when the cold weather payment scheme was reviewed, we built into its operation the facility for the Meteorological Office to forecast periods of cold weather in advance. This enables the payment process to start more quickly as payments can be decided on the basis of forecasts without having to wait for seven days of recorded data. If the recorded data which follows do not confirm the forecast, the payments are not recalled. All forecasts used so far this winter have been confirmed by recorded data.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what are the principal prescribed diseases for which reduced earnings allowance is currently claimed; [10120]

(2) what were the principal prescribed diseases for which reduced earnings allowance was claimed for the first time including back-dating claims in 1994 and 1995; [10121]

(3) how many (a) men and (b) women over pensionable age in receipt of reduced earnings allowance at the end of (i) 1994 and (ii) 1995 were in paid employment in each region; [10125]

(4) how many people were awarded, and how much money was paid in, claims, backdated more than 12 months, of reduced earnings allowance in 1994 and 1995, in each region; [10126]

(5) what was the average backdating of those claims backdated more than 12 months for reduced earnings allowance in 1994 and 1995. [10127]

Mr. Heald: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were awarded reduced earnings allowance for the first time in each of the months in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995. [10122]

Mr. Heald: The available information is in the table:

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total amount currently paid in reduced earnings allowance each (a) week, (b) month, and (c) year to people over pensionable age. [10128]

Mr. Heald: The table gives current estimates of the amount paid.

£ million

Estimated amount currently paid to reduced earnings allowance recipients over pensionable age	Total
(a) each week	2
(b) each month	8
(c) each year	85

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest £1 million, but are not accurate to that degree.
2. The figures for each month are based on a standard month of 4.33 weeks.
3. Figures are given at 1995–96 prices.
4. Includes frozen or restricted reduced earnings allowance payable to those who had retired before 10 April 1989.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of (a) the numbers of people who would be affected by, and (b) the cost of, extending the four-week extended payments of housing benefit to people who start work having been on (i) incapacity benefit, (ii) severe disablement allowance, (iii) income support disability premium and (iv) in receipt of incapacity benefit within 26 weeks of starting a job. [10141]

Mr. Heald: It is not possible to estimate the number of people who would be affected by, or the cost of extending, the four-week extended payments of housing benefit to those moving directly into work from incapacity benefit, severe disablement allowance or income support disability premium. In 1996–97, the cost of extending the scheme to people in receipt of incapacity benefit within 26 weeks of starting a job is estimated to be £2 million[1] with around 15,000 people affected.

Note:
[1] Estimate applies only to people registering as unemployed after leaving the short term higher or long term rate of incapacity benefit.

Income Support Disability Premium

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of (a) the costs of and (b) the number of people who would benefit from increasing the £15 earnings disregard for claimants of the income support disability premium to £24.50 per week. [10136]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table:

	Effect of increasing the earnings disregard for those with the IS disability premium, from £15 to £24.50 per week
Total cost	£5 million
Gainers	10,000

1. The estimate assumes an increase in the earnings disregard in Income Support only. Costs include increased costs of housing benefit and council tax benefit due to increased entitlements to those benefits.
2. Modelled using the 1991–1992 and 1993 Family Expenditure Surveys, and the May 1994 Quarterly Statistical Enquiry, uprated to 1996–97 levels. Costs rounded to the nearest £5 million, gainers to the nearest 5,000.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people currently claiming incapacity benefit are (a) single, (b) in a couple, (c) in a couple with children and (d) single with children. [10138]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Number of beneficiaries of incapacity benefit on 31 May 1995

	Number
All beneficiaries	1,846,000
No dependency increases	1,373,000
Adult dependency increase only	345,000
Child dependency increase only	54,000
Both adult and child dependency increase	72,000

Figures taken from a 5 per cent. sample of the incapacity benefit computer system, rounded to the nearest thousand, and excludes a small number of cases paid clerically. Totals may not sum due to rounding.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people currently claiming severe disablement allowance are (a) single, (b) in a couple, (c) in a couple with children and (d) single with children. [10143]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Number of beneficiaries of severe disablement allowance on 31 May 1995

	Number
All beneficiaries	324,000
No dependency increases	317,000
Adult dependency increase only	2,000
Child dependency increase only	4,000
Both adult and child dependency increase	2,000

Figures taken from a 5 per cent. sample of the incapacity benefit computer system, rounded to the nearest thousand, and excludes a small number of cases paid clerically. Totals may not sum due to rounding.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the numbers of appeals currently lodged against a decision that the claimant is capable of work; what is the average waiting time for appeals to be heard; and in how many appeals the claimant has been represented. [10132]

Mr. Heald: The information requested is not currently available. However, provisional figures show that there are currently 17,649 appeals outstanding against the incapacity benefit all-work test.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently claiming disability working allowance; and what are (a) the total administration costs and (b) the average weekly administration cost per beneficiary. [10174]

Mr. Heald: The number of people in receipt of disability working allowance at the end of December 1995 was 7,388.

The latest information on administration costs is for the year 1994–95. In 1994–95, the average number of people claiming disability working allowance was 5,000 and the total administration costs were £5.7 million. This gives an average weekly cost per beneficiary of £23.08.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of disability working allowance receive housing benefit; and what is the average amount payable. [10131]

Mr. Heald: On 31 May 1994, 1,000 housing benefit recipients declared disability working allowance as income. The average weekly amount of housing benefit payable was £30.19.

Notes:

1. Figures refer to benefit units which may be a single person or a couple. In the case of a couple, either the claimant or partner was in receipt of disability working allowance.

2. Recipients have been rounded to the nearest thousand and the average amount to the nearest penny.

3. The information given is based on a very small number of sample cases and is therefore subject to a high degree of variance.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average gross weekly earnings received by claimants of disability working allowance who also receive (a) invalidity benefit, (c) incapacity benefit, (c) disability living allowance, (d) disability premium in income support, (e) disability premium in housing benefit, (f) disability premium in council tax benefit and (g) severe disablement allowance. [10135]

Mr. Heald: A person in work cannot be in receipt of invalidity benefit, incapacity benefit, income support[1] or severe disablement allowance while in receipt of disability working allowance.

The information in the table shows the average gross weekly earnings, by main qualifying benefit, of people in receipt of disability working allowance at the end of July 1995:

	Numbers in receipt of benefit on 31 July 1995	Average gross weekly earnings £
All cases	6,544	82.12
Main qualifying benefit
Invalidity benefit	1,052	71.72
Incapacity benefit	132	78.33
Disability living allowance	4,210	88.72
Disability premium in income support	668	66.85
Disability premium in housing benefit	19	90.87
Disability premium in council tax benefit	18	61.35
Severe disablement allowance	445	68.76

Notes:

1. There are some infrequent circumstances in which income support and disability working allowance may be paid together.

2. Claimants can be in receipt of more than one qualifying benefit and therefore actual numbers in receipt of each qualifying benefit may be higher.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims for the disability living allowance mobility component in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96, were accompanied by (i) both supporting statements, (ii) only statement 1, (iii) only statement 2 and (iv) neither statement; [10455]

(2) what was the number and percentage of decisions for the disability living allowance mobility component where the adjudication officer (a) required an examining medical officer's report, (b) required a general practitioner's factual report, (c) required any other evidence and (d) relied on the claim pack alone, in (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94, (iii) 1994–95 and (iv) 1995–96. [10456]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Claims for disability living allowance are for the benefit as a whole and not for individual components. Statistics are not routinely kept on the number of supporting statements supplied with claims.

The figures in the table cover decisions made on initial awards where a mobility component was awarded.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the cost of and (b) the numbers of claimants who would be entitled to disability working allowance by (i) raising the applicable amounts by 5 per cent., (ii) increasing the maximum disability working allowance by 5 per cent., (iii) disregarding in full any income from a spouse or partner and (iv) reducing the hours of work from 16 to 10. [10137]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

The costs are given at 1995–96 prices and are net of income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit offsets

1995–96	Net cost £ million	Gainers
(i) Raising applicable amounts by 5 per cent.	1	8,000
(ii) Raising maximum DWA by 5 per cent.	2	8,000
(iii) Disregarding spouse earnings	40	10,000
(iv) Reducing hours rule	2	1,000

Notes:
Estimates for (i), (ii) and (iv) are given at 1995–96 prices rounded to the nearest £1m and 1,000 gainers, (iii) is rounded to nearest £5 million and 5,000 gainers.
1. Information from the Family Expenditure Survey 1991, 1992 and 1993 is used to estimate the effects of these changes. The data contains insufficient disability working allowance cases to allow direct modelling, therefore the changes have been modelled using proxy groups. These have been calibrated to the 1995–96 disability working allowance forecast caseload.
2. The use of proxy groups means that these estimates are subject to wide margins of error and should be treated with considerable caution.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the cost of raising the £3,000 lower capital threshold for disability working allowance to (i) £4,000, (ii) £5,000, (iii) £6,000, (iv) £7,000 and (v) £8,000 and (b) the numbers of claimants who would become entitled to increased benefit in each case. [10175]

Mr. Heald: The estimated effects are given in the table. Costs are given at 1995–96 prices rounded to the nearest £1 million, and are net of housing benefit/council tax benefit offsets. Gainers are rounded to the nearest 1,000 and include people who would float on to the benefit.

Family Credit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 24 November, Official Report, column 357, if he now has provisional figures for July 1995 for the numbers of people receiving the £10 weekly allowance with (i) family credit and (ii) disability working allowance for working more than 30 hours per week. [10176]

Mr. Heald: As at 31 July 1995, the number of family credit and disability working allowance recipients who were benefiting from the 30-hour premium was 25,000 and eight respectively. By 31 August 1995, the latest date available, these had risen to 87,000 and 45. Claimants working 30 hours or more a week, who were in receipt of benefit when the premium was introduced on 17 July 1995, will receive the additional benefit when they renew their claims.

Social Fund

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many additional claims have been made to the social fund by ex-prisoners not in their own home. [10453]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. The available information about applications to the social fund by all ex-prisoners in Great Britain is in the table. The information relates to community care grants for 1995–96.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what steps have been taken to monitor the change in housing benefit regulations on the additional benefits claimed by prisoners on their release after losing their entitlement to housing benefit under the new regulations; [10451]

(2) how much has been saved in housing benefit since the implemention of the new regulations reducing the period of entitlement for prisoners' claims from 52 to 13 weeks. [10452]

Mr. Heald: New rules concerning the treatment of temporary absence from the home were introduced in housing benefit from April 1995. Information about the number of prisoners affected by the new rules will be available around the end of 1996. While benefit savings arising from the change to prisoners are estimated to be up to £10 million in a full year, the difficulty in quantifying behavioural effects prevents more robust estimates being made.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish his report of the review of the accuracy of housing benefit claims. [11314]

Mr. Lilley: I am today publishing the main report of this review which shows that housing benefit fraud costs the taxpayer £1 billion a year. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library. I am grateful to the 52 local authorities and their staff who carried out the field work. The results establish for the first time the amount of loss through fraud, abuse and error and indicate where the highest risks of such losses lie.

This level of fraud is clearly unacceptable. Local authorities which are not putting effort into tackling fraud and abuse must address the problem urgently. We already give local authorities financial incentives to detect fraud, rewarding success and penalising those who do too little. The success of this scheme has doubled savings from £92 million in 1993–94 to £171 million in 1994–95.

It is the responsibility of each local authority to protect taxpayers' money and not allow fraud to go unchecked. The results of the new review will enable them to concentrate their efforts on high risk categories of claimants and tenants.

Using this information, I am developing a five-year strategy which will crack down on this unacceptable level of fraud effectively and efficiently.

I will be strengthening the financial incentives for local authorities to detect fraud by increasing the rewards for success and the penalties for those who do too little.

I will be making funds of up to £10 million available specifically to enable local authorities to develop innovative ideas to tackle fraud.

I will be launching a national register of housing benefit and council tax benefit. This will match data across local authorities against departmental fraud detection systems—catching people claiming from more than one local authority.

We will be working closely with the Audit Commission to tighten up local authority methods of preventing fraudulent claims getting into the system.

Income Support

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people currently claiming income support with a disability premium are (a) single, (b) in a couple, (c) in a couple with children and (d) single with children. [10139]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table:

	Number
Total number of income support recipients with the disability premium	722,000
Of which:
Single	534,000
Single with children	56,000
Single without children	477,000
Couples	189,000
Couples with children	108,000
Couples without children	80,000

Benefit Levels

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the average amounts currently payable to claimants of (a) severe disablement allowance, (b) unemployment benefit and (c) incapacity benefit. [10142]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table:

Average weekly amount of severe disablement allowance[1]	44.60
Average weekly amount of unemployment benefit[2]	49.02
Average weekly amount of incapacity benefit[1, 3]	83.48

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many people qualified for a concessionary television licence in each year since 1990 in the area covered by Easington district council. [9512]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The numbers of concessionary television licence beneficiaries in the Easington district council area for each financial year since 1990 were:

1990–91: 2,665
1991–92: 2,477
1992–93: 2,161
1993–94: 1,995
1994–95: 1,878
1995–96: 1,817 (to date).

WALES

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinons (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5976]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information requested is as follows. The total cost of the surveys listed was approximately £420,000. The cost of individual contracts is confidential.

In addition to the items listed, the Welsh Office commissions statistical surveys which sometimes include questions seeking the views of respondents. particular cases include the 1995 Welsh health survey, which contained some questions about public attitudes to services provided by the national health service and social services and the 1994 Welsh employer survey, which among other things, sought the views of employers on reasons for problems in filling vacancies and opinions of the service provided by various organisations. The marginal costs of including these questions in statistical surveys cannot readily be calculated. Reports on all such surveys are published.

Severn Estuary

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with (a) the chairman of the National Rivers Authority, Wales and (b) other relevant environmental protection bodies as regards the designation of the Severn estuary west of the Severn bridge as a coastal water within the meaning of the European Union municipal waste water treatment directive. [10658]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey) on 18 May 1994, Official Report, columns 511–12, by the then Minister of State for the Environment and Countryside.

Methicillin Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what estimates he has made of the incidence of MRSA in Welsh hospitals; when he last issued guidelines with respect to information to be supplied between hospitals as regards incidence of MRSA when patients are being transported between hospitals and in other circumstances relevant to the spread of infection; and if he will make a statement; [10656]

(2) what guidelines he has issued to hospitals, as regards the information to be supplied to (a) health authorities, (b) fundholders and (c) community health councils concerning (i) the incidence of MRSA, (ii) precautionary measures to be taken with respect to reducing the spread of MRSA and (iii) prescribing policies of general practitioners and hospital physicians; and what other steps he is taking to reduce the incidence of the MRSA virus. [10657]

Mr. Hague: Last year, the Chief Medical Officer in the Welsh Office invited the Public Health Laboratory Service in Wales to undertake a surveillance project on MRSA in Wales.

Revised guidance on hospital infection control management arrangements, which includes new advice on the surveillance of MRSA, was issued to the NHS in Wales in June 1995.

My Department has commended to the NHS guidance issued in 1986 and 1990, by the Hospital Infection Society and the British Society for Antimicrobial Chemotherapy on methods for the control of the spread of MRSA. This emphasises the need for effective communication between relevant parties when managing an infectious disease.

The Department has not issued any formal prescribing guidelines regarding MRSA. However, policies and procedures developed at health authority level are available to all provider units.

Rented Housing (Consultation)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what response he has received to the consultation document. "More Choice in the Rented Sector," issued on 4 August 1995; and if he will make a statement. [11463]

Mr. Hague: The consultation paper set out Government proposals to increase competition in the rented sector by removing current restrictions on who should be able to compete for housing association grant or take on transferred local authority housing. It argued that new forms of non-profit landlord should be able to register with Housing for Wales, and that a licensing system should be established to enable profit-making landlords to receive grant and transferred stock. A series of proposals regarding the monitoring and regulation of social housing were put forward, including rent controls and provisions to recoup excessive surpluses. The paper also sought views on the establishment of a statutory ombudsman for the independent rented sector; and on the appropriate approach to determining the standards to which housing schemes must conform.

Forty-seven responses were received. A list of respondents has been placed in the Library of the House. Copies of individual responses may be obtained through the Library. One response was submitted on a confidential basis.

These replies have been considered carefully. The Government have decided to proceed at once with proposals to allow new forms of non-profit landlord, such as local hosing companies, to register with Housing for Wales. I have also decided to take statutory powers to establish an ombudsman service in due course. The necessary provisions are contained in the Housing Bill which was published today. The Bill also provides new powers for Housing for Wales to protect publicly funded stock and tenants' interests in the event of a landlord becoming insolvent.

In order to facilitate transfers of local authority stock to these and other registered landlords, the Government will adopt a flexible approach to the size limit for transfers. My Department intends to issue guidance on hosing transfers incorporating advice on this and other policy changes.

The Government also intend to take forward its proposals to introduce profit-making landlords to the sector, with the associated controls over rents and surpluses. Because of the urgent need to deal with leasehold issues in a Bill of manageable size, legislation to effect this proposal will be deferred. My Department will consult on draft clauses for these provisions, with a view to including them in future legislation. Given the postponement of legislation on opening up competition on housing association grant to profit-making companies, the Government do not intend to abolish tax relief grant at this stage.

On scheme development standards, Housing for Wales will retain the present approach for the time being. The Department of Environment and the Housing Corporation are commissioning a study into the feasibility of developing a series of housing quality indicators. A report is expected in May. I shall consider the results of the study and make a further statement on scheme development standards in due course.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much each local authority took from its reserves to fund their budgets for 1995–96. [10283]

Mr. Gwilym Jones [holding answer 18 January 1996]: The amounts local authorities budgeted, at the beginning of the year, to take from their reserves to fund expenditure in 1995–96 are given in the following table.

DEFENCE

Coastal Arms Dumps

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom coastal areas have been used by his Ministry as arms dumps in addition to Beaufort's dyke. [9459]

Mr. Soames: Complete records of past MOD sea-dumping operations are not available. However, from surviving records it has been established that, apart from Beaufort's dyke, the following approximate areas were designated as conventional explosive dumping grounds around the UK coast before 1973. Many of the sites listed may have been used for emergency purposes only, if at all.

Area	Position
Hurds Deep	49 30 00 N	3 34 00 W
East of Orford Ness	52 07 00 N	1 55 00 E
Inner Sound of Raasay	57 19 00 N	5 51 00 W
Isle of May, Firth of Forth[1]	56 10 45 N	2 30 15 W
Isle of May, Firth of Forth[1]	56 11 24 N	2 29 00 W
St. Catherines Deep	50 35 00 N	1 12 00 W
East Swin—Kings Channel	51 47 30 N	1 30 00 E
North West of Alderney[1]	49 50 00 N	2 18 00 W
North West of Alderney[1]	49 47 00 N	2 17 00 W
South South West of Guernsey	49 18 00 N	2 42 00 W
Whitesand Bay, Playmouth	50 18 45 N	4 16 00 W
Milford Haven[2]	51 34 30 N	5 01 00 W

Sound of Mull	56 30 00 N	5 37 00 W
East of Aberdeen	57 09 00 N	1 58 30 W
Loch Linnhe	56 30 00 N	5 37 00 W
Firth of Clyde	55 37 00 N	4 59 30 W

[1] Two sites.
[2] Three sites.

The adoption of the London and Olso Conventions in 1972 ended sea dumping of conventional munitions on the UK continental shelf. With one exception of an emergency dumping in 1976 at Beaufort's dyke, dumping was restricted from 1973 to an area some 400 miles south west of Land's End around the approximate co-ordinates of 48 20 00 N 13 40 00 W.

Records show that the dumping of chemical munitions ended in 1957. Dump sites were located in the northern Atlantic between 50 and 100 miles west of the Hebrides, 80 miles north-west of Northern Ireland, and 250 miles south-west of Land's End in the western approaches. A small quantity of chemical munitions was disposed of in Beaufort's dyke.

Combined Heat and Power Schemes

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many of his Department's sites combined heat and power has been installed; and on how many further sites and over what period it is planned to install combined heat and power. [10096]

Mr. Soames: Of the 19 sites considered for combined heat and power:

(a) six were discarded as not providing value for money;

(b) combined heat and power has been installed on eight sites;

(c) the remaining five sites are included in MOD's future works programme for funding of combined heat and power projects.

First Aid Training

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy regarding the marketing of training in first aid by the armed forces to outside organisations. [10032]

Mr. Soames: No specific first aid training is marketed or provided to outside organisations by the Ministry of Defence. However, first aid training modules are included in some specialist training courses undertaken by outside agencies.

Contract Power

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those of his Department's sites in which his Department is examining contract power. [10098]

Mr. Soames: The five sites are:

RAF Fylingdales

Aldershot military power station

RAF Saxa Vord

HM naval base Portsmouth

British forces Falkland Islands

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many of his Department's sites contract energy management has been implemented. [10097]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Two contracts for contract energy management have been placed, along with three water management contracts which were tendered simultaneously; 28 sites are still under consideration.

Helicopter Flight School

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what offset arrangements are being made in respect of the order of helicopters for the Defence helicopter flight school. [10031]

Mr. Arbuthnot: There are no offset arrangements being made in respect of the order of helicopters for the DHFS because the aircraft will be purchased and owned by the contractor, not the MOD.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British Gas awards have been made to his Department's units or establishments which have achieved significant savings in fuel consumption in each of the last eight years. [10095]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Under the British Gas awards for defence energy efficiency, four awards per year have been made. From time to time, MOD establishments have entered for the gas energy management awards, a British Gas award scheme open to all organisations. In 1992, MOD's best year, establishments won one national GEM award and four regional GEM awards.

Bosnia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the relationship between British forces serving in Bosina-Herzegovina and the third corps of the Bosnian army. [10288]

Mr. Soames: British forces in Bosnia are liaising closely with all of the former warring factions and are operating from bases on both sides of the ceasefire line as part of the implementation process.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what practical steps are being taken by British military units in Bosnia-Herzegovina to prevent attacks made upon them by Mujaheddin fighters; and if he will make a statement. [10289]

Mr. Soames: UK troops are well trained and equipped for the demands of their mission and are alert to all potential risks. Measures are taken to ensure the protection of our forces, but it would not be appropriate to go into detail.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who was responsible for attacking British troops in Sanski Most and Bosanska Krupa on Saturday 6 January; and if he will make a statement. [10293]

Mr. Soames: Bosnian Government soldiers were responsible for the incident at Bosanska Krupa on 6 January when shots were fired at a British base. Although no fire was returned, British troops adopted a high state of readiness and there were no further attacks. In a second incident later that day near Sanski Most, a British vehicle came under sustained fire from a Bosnian Serb army bunker and escorting troops returned small arms fire. No British troops were injured.

Ammunition

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average budget allocation for the purchase of 155mm ammunition for (a) 1979 to 1985, (b) 1986 to 1990 and (c) 1991 to 1995. [10584]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The average annual budget allocation for the period (c) 1991–1995 is £10.04 million. Complete figures for the earlier periods are no longer available.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many 155mm Howitzers of all types are currently in use and in storage for Her Majesty's forces; what is the current average annual training allocation of live 155 mm rounds per 155mm Howitzer; and what is the average annual number of rounds per gun used in training for (a) 1979 to 1985, (b) 1896 to 1990 and (c) 1991 to 1995. [10586]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Of the two types of 155mm Howitzer currently in service, the AS90 and FH70, 205 are currently in use and 25 are held in storage. The current annual training allocation of live 155mm rounds per 155mm Howitzer is 167 rounds per gun. From 1993 to 1995, the average number of rounds per gun used in training was 286 rounds. Records are not available for the period up to 1993.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what length of time it was his Department's policy to retain production and storage records of 155mm shells, including X-ray records from (a) 1966 to 1979, (b) 1979 to 1985, (c) 1986 to 1990 and (d) 1991 to 1995. [10652]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Data record cards are held for the life of the stored ammunition. This has been a consistent policy over recent years.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many rounds of 155mm ammunition were produced in the United Kingdom in each of the years 1990 to 1995 which were for (a) his Department and (b) export. [10654]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The number of 155mm rounds purchased by my Department and manufactured in the United Kingdom during the stated years are:

1990: 0
1991: 1,000
1992: 10,000
1993: 0
1994: 14,590
1995: 14,590

The production of 155mm ammunition for export is a matter for individual companies.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many rounds of 155mm ammunition were (a) purchased by his Department in 1980 and (b) sold by his Department in 1980. [10655]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Purchase records dating back to 1980 are no longer available. With regard to sales in 1980, the relevant files were transferred when the Royal Ordnance factories were vested in British Aerospace plc in 1985.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many rounds of 155mm ammunition were, in addition to normal requirements, (a) acquired for use in the Gulf conflict and (b) actually used during the Gulf conflict. [10583]

Mr. Soames: Some 70,000 additional rounds of 155mm ammunition were acquired from allies for use in the Gulf conflict. Some 13,000 rounds of ammunition were fired, including ammunition used in training in the theatre of operations.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of the number of 155mm rounds written off or otherwise destroyed in (a) 1979 to 1985, (b) 1986 to 1990 and (c) 1991 to 1995. [10585]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No 155mm rounds were written off or otherwise destroyed during the stated periods.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many rounds of 155mm ammunition were (a) purchased by his Department in each year since 1990 and (b) sold as surplus or disposed of by his Department for any other reason in each of the same years. [10587]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The following numbers of 155mm ammunition rounds have been purchased since 1990:

1990: 15,676
1991: 28,072
1992: 46,820
1993: 30,002
1994: 51,438
1995: 14,590

No rounds have been sold or disposed of since 1990.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons records of 155mm shell sales and records for the disposal of surplus 155mm shells between 1985 and 1990 by his Department are not available as indicated in his answer of 7 November 1995, Official Report, column 666. [10651]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My previous answer related to the sale by MOD of surplus 155mm ammunition and not disposal of such ammunition by other means, in the period between 1985 and 1990. Papers relating to such sales, from which the information sought could be obtained, are routinely archived and destroyed when no longer current. Residual file lists suggest that no sales of surplus 155mm ammunition were made by my Department in that period.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (a) the maximum safe storage time of 155mm artillery shells used by his Department and (b) the recommended safe storage time; if he will list (a) and (b) for (i) 1980, (ii) 1985 and (iii) 1990; and what factors underly differences between (a) and (b) for each year. [10653]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Since 1980, all 155mm ammunition procured by the MOD is designed to provide a service life of 10 years. No distinction is made between maximum and recommended safe storage. For each nature, the service life may be extended subject to appropriate tests and trials being concluded satisfactorily.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement; [9734]

(2) what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned; [9736]

(3) what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9735]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answers 17 January 1996]: My Department has an enabling arrangement with Motorola Telco to provide mobile and car phones. A number of our agencies in the UK make use of this enabling arrangement which runs from 1 October 1994 to 30 November 1996. A total of 554 phones has been supplied via this arrangement. The total cost to public funds, which would include rental and call charges, is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

My Department is not liable to cancellation charges under its enabling arrangement if the contract for an individual phone is cancelled after 12 months. The minimum contract period is twelve months. No figures are held centrally for the number of cancellations and this information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

My Department's enabling arrangement with Motorola Telco was awarded after a public competition under EC rules during 1994 which included Hutchison Ltd. and Vodaphone Ltd. A fresh public competition under EC rules is underway for a new enabling arrangement to take effect from 1 December 1996.

Where these matters fall to the chief executives of my Department's agencies, I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. R. Drew to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about mobile phones and car phones in Defence agencies.

The Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO), an agency with some 3,300 staff spread over 20 sites throughout the UK, currently has agreements covering the use of 23 mobile phones. The majority of the phones were procured using the rates centrally negotiated with Motorola Ltd. by the MOD Information and Communications Services. Some ABRO workshops have sought to obtain value for money by using their local purchase authority to negotiate their own rates. One took advantage of preferential rates already negotiated by other MOD users, single tender action was taken by another and one ran a competition involving the Mobile Phone Centre, Colchester, Mercury, Vodaphone and the winners, Securicor Cellular Services.

A summary of the arrangements within ABRO is provided on the attached sheet. The agreements cover a variety of hardware and tariffs, depending on the individual requirements of each part of the business. Total costs only have been provided in order to avoid breaching commercial confidences with the individual suppliers.

None of the contracts are for fixed periods and no costs have been incurred as result of withdrawing from contracts.

I hope that this is helpful.

Letter from Kevin Goad to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of mobile telephones as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Base Storage and Distribution Agency (ABSDA).

I confirm that within UK all mobile telephones owned by ABSDA have been purchased under central MoD arrangements negotiated by Director General Information and Communication Services (DGICS). I am sure that Directorate will be responding to your question with regard to that contract.

To address specially, the points you raise:

First, in answer to your enquiry about the provision of mobile telephones, ABSDA currently has 13 units, purchased under the central MoD agreement, with Motorola Telecommunications. A further 15 telephones were purchased locally in Germany (for use by staff in the ABSDA depots in Germany) through Headquarters United Kingdom Support Command (Germany) as the UK central agreement does not cover telephone equipments that are compatible with the German telecommunications system. As with the UK purchases, however, ABSDA was not involved with the tendering process. The cost to ABSDA of these agreements is:

a. 13 Mobile phones in UK purchased from Motorola Telecommunications annual charges: £5100 per annum

b. 15 Mobile phones purchased in Germany from Hutchinson Mobilfunk: £4310 per annum

Secondly, regarding your point about the cost of withdrawal from contracts. As we have not withdrawn from any of our contracts to date, no costs have been incurred.

I hope that this reply answers your questions. If you require further clarification or information please come back to me.

Letter from Danny Thomas to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Defence Accounts Agency who is away at present.

All contracts for the provision of mobile phones used by the Defence Accounts Agency were negotiated centrally within the Ministry of Defence and I understand that these will be covered in the reply from the Minister of State for Defence Procurement.

Letter from Danny Thomas to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence what costs have been incurred to his Department and executive agencies as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided. I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Defence Accounts Agency who is away at present.

The Defence Accounts Agency has not incurred any charges as a result of cancelling any contract or agreement with a mobile phone supplier. But all contracts for the provision of mobile phones used by the Defence Accounts Agency were negotiated centrally within the Ministry of Defence and I understand that these will be covered in the reply from the Minister of State for Defence Procurement.

Letter from Danny Thomas to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile car phones; and if he would list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contract, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Defence Accounts Agency who is away at present.

The six mobile phones held by the Defence Accounts Agency were purchased centrally within the Ministry of Defence and I understand that these will be covered in the reply from the Minister of State for Defence Procurement.

Letter from Paul Altobell to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your three recent questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about mobile phones as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency.

The Defence Analytical Services Agency has no agreement with any companies for the provision of mobile and car phones. The Defence Analytical Services Agency has incurred no costs as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided.

The Defence Analytical Services Agency has awarded no contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones. The Agency would follow the procedures laid down by our parent Department (MoD) should such a contract arise.

Letter from Andrew Roache to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Defence Animal Centre (DAC) I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding what costs his Department and its executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and a list of those companies concerned.

The DAC has no involvement with the arrangements required should it be necessary to withdraw from such a contract and therefore is not aware of the costs involved or the companies concerned. This matter is dealt with by Divisional Headquarters at York.

Letter from Andrew Roache to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Defence Animal Centre (DAC), I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; the list of the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement.

The DAC has no involvement with agreements regarding the provision of mobile and car phones and consequently has no knowledge of the companies who have the contracts, their duration, the number of phones covered or the cost to public funds of each agreement. This matter is dealt with by Divisional Headquarters at York.

Letter from Andrew Roache to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Defence Animal Centre (DAC) I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence with regard to what procedures his Department and its executive agencies use in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and executive agencies; and the names of the companies concerned in tendering for these contracts.

The DAC has no involvement with the awarding of such contracts and is not aware of the companies concerned in tendering for these contracts. This matter is dealt with by Divisional Headquarters at York.

Letter from M. J. Roycroft to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about mobile and car telephones, as they are used in the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency, in my capacity as its Chief Executive.

This Agency currently has 5 separate agreements, all with Motorola Telecommunications Limited, covering a total of 6 telephones. Each agreement is for an initial contract period of 12 months, after which withdrawal can occur at any time without a cost penalty. The costs of each agreement vary, dependent upon the number of calls made, the date that the telephone was first taken into use and the purchase price of the equipment. For this Agency, the costs to public funds, inclusive of VAT, are as follows:

Agreement 1 (2 telephones) : £3,068.28

Agreement 2 (1 telephone) : £455.61

Agreement 3 (1 telephone) : £1,643.67

Agreement 4 (1 telephone) : £649.21

Agreement 5 (1 telephone) : £892.87

To date we have not withdrawn from any mobile telephone contracts and therefore no costs have been incurred.

All our mobile telephones are ordered from a contract let by MOD's Director General, Information and Communications Services, whose organisation determines the procedures for the awarding and tendering of such contracts.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about agreements with companies to provide mobile and car telephones, the procedures used to award initial contracts and the costs in subsequently withdrawing from these agreements. I am answering all three questions in this letter.

In April 1993 the Defence Research Agency (DRA) sought quotations for the provision of mobile telephones from industry in line with MOD Procurement Procedures. The following companies were invited to tender for the contract. In the event only the first four responded.

Mercury Mobile

British Telecom

Direct Mobile Communications

Vodac

Motorola

Hutchison

Cellular Communications Corp. plc

Tenders were evaluated against the published Statement of Requirements (SOR) and a 3 year enabling contract was eventually awarded to Mercury Mobile.

On its formation in April 1995 DERA inherited a range of additional mobile telephone contracts and related support services from organisations joining the DRA that were already in place. These telephones had been supplied as a result of many competitive tender procurements for small numbers of telephones with the exception of a single tender to Hutchison who was the sole known supplier providing access to the Orange Network at the time of purchase. The companies listed below (but excluding Mercury Mobile and Hutchison) were invited to tender for each of these individual procurements. These existing contracts will continue for the useful life of the mobiles or until a more cost effective means of service provision is identified.

In summary DERA now therefore has in place the following contracts at the costs shown:

Supplier	Number of mobiles	Purchase cost £	Running costs £
Mercury Mobile	675	198,000	424,000
British Telecom	63	—	28,000
Hutchison	26	—	11,000
Motorola	28	—	20,000
Orange	14	—	7,000
Talkland	3	—	1,000
Mobile Telecom	4	—	2,000
Peoples Phone	2	—	700
Vodafone	19	—	6,000
Uniqueair	2	—	700

Our policy is not to withdraw from contracts until any guaranteed rental period with the original supplier has expired thus ensuring there is a cost benefit for DERA in making a change. At that stage the only costs incurred for withdrawing from contracts have been for the connection charge to transfer existing mobiles from one service supplier to another. The connection charge is £45 per telephone and a total cost of £1,600 has been incurred for such changes during the last three years.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from T. McG. Brown to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your three Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about mobile telephones as I am responsible for their procurement and use within my agency, the Defence Postal & Courier Services Agency (DPCSA).

Taking each question in turn, the information you have requested is as follows:

PQ9927G—DPCSA currently operates 47 mobile phones, the large majority of which are used by Defence Couriers and drivers of MoD Mail Service delivery vans. DPCSA operates mobile phones under three agreements. Most are supplied by Peoples Phone, but we also use a small number of phones from BT Cellphone Services and Mercury One-2-One. The agreements are not fixed term. They continue until either DPCSA or the supplier chooses to terminate them. The cost to public funds is dependent on the use of each individual phone. The rates charged are those available under existing MoD contracts.

PQ9928G—DPCSA has not incurred any costs as a result of withdrawing from a mobile phone contract.

PQ9930G—DPCSA obtained phones from Peoples Phone after soliciting tenders from 4 companies, Peoples Phone, Vodaphone Centre, Hutchinson Telecom and Tancroft Phones. Normal MoD tendering rules applied. BT Cellphone Services and Mercury one-2-One phones were obtained under individual contracts as required. Any future requirements will be met from an MoD enabling contract established to allow MoD Agencies and other organisaitons to obtain mobile phones at preferential rates.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Letter from M. G. R. Hodson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Questions (9927G, 9928G and 9930G) to the Secretary of State for Defence, about mobile telephones, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive Agency (DTMX).

A new contract for three mobile telephones has been let through the Ministry of Defence Information and Communciations Services (MOD ICS), to Motorola. This is an existing MOD contract which is due to run out during March 1996, however, existing subscribers will not be affected. The estimated costs over a one year period are in the region of £850.

DTMX cancelled an existing contract with Hutchison Telecom, at the end of a contract period, having given the required notice. The four telephones owned by DTMX will be withdrawn on 28 January and replaced by three new telephones supplied by Motorola.

As I have pointed out above, DTMX used the existing MOD ICS contract and was not involved in any tendering process. I view this switch of contracts as good housekeeping, bringing as it will, a financial saving.

Letter from Keith Ellender to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about mobile and car phones, as these matters fall within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Disposal Sales Agency.

My Agency has two agreements for the provision of mobile phones. The agreement with Hutchison covers 8 phones, costing £25 each per month plus calls, less a 10% overall discount. The agreement with Motorola covers a phone, costing £22.50 per month plus calls, less a 10% discount on calls only. Both contracts are ongoing. My Agency does not have any agreements for the provision of car phones.

My Agency has not withdrawn from any contracts under which mobile phones are provided.

The contracts to supply mobile phones to my Agency were awarded by the Directorate General Information and Communications Services (DGICS). They will be able to advise on what procedures were used and which companies were involved in tendering for the contracts.

Letter from G. H. Wilson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning agreements with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of this Agency.

My Agency has no agreements with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones.

Letter from M. R. Pack to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

1. Your Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about the provision of mobile and car telephones and related contractual aspects have been referred to the Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Office for reply. Unfortunately Admiral Essenhigh is, at present, absent from the Office on official duty so I am replying to you on his behalf.

2. In so far as the Hydrographic Office Defence Agency is concerned we currently possess a total of 15 mobile telephones and 2 car telephones. The phones were procured from British Telecom (2 mobile phones) and Motorola (13 mobile phones and 2 car phones). The estimated costs of procurement was £360 in respect of British Telecom and £2,300 in respect of Motorola. These phones, apart from the cost of purchase obviously incur both a line rental charge and a cost in respect of usage. It is estimated that in the current financial year (FY 95/96) the rental and usage charges will amount to £8,600; we estimate this total would be apportioned as follows:

(i) 2 x BT mobile phones—£3,500

(ii) 13 x Motorola mobile phones—£4,020

(iii) 2 x Motorola car phones—£1,080

3. In purchasing these phones the Hydrographic Office did not enter into any contractual arrangements with either British Telecom or Motorola.

4. Turning now to the questions about withdrawing from mobile phone contracts, no such contracts have been entered into by the Hydrographic Office and consequently we have not withdrawn from any contract.

5. Finally in regard to your questions about the procedures used in awarding contracts for the supply of phones, the Hydrographic Office did not enter into any form of competitive tender action. The cost of the equipment fell within local purchase arrangements.

6. I hope this information has been of assistance.

Letter from A. W. Pollard to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19th January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence Procurement about various aspects of the hire by executive agencies of mobile and car phones. As Chief Executive this falls within my area of responsibility for the Logistic Information Systems Agency (LISA).

LISA currently hires a total of 37 mobile phones. Details of the number of telephones hired from specific companies and their respective costs are attached at Annex A. No contracts are negotiated on a "fixed-period" basis. Therefore no costs have been incurred as a result of withdrawal from contracts. LISA adopts the standard procedures contained within the Director General Information and Communications Systems (DGICS) Catalogue to procure its requirements.

If you have any further questions, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about the provision and use of mobile and car phones in the Meterological Office as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Agency.

I attach at Annex details of our current contracts for the provision of these services. The majority of the equipment is needed to gather observations and to maintain operational services. Since April 1995 only two contracts have been terminated. During 1994–95 five were terminated and in the previous year three. The penalty in each case has been no more than £67.50 per mobile.

With the exception of a very small number of specialised equipments the Meteorological Office procures its mobile phones under a contract negotiated centrally by the DGICS organisation in the Ministry of Defence.

We currently have agreements with 5 (five) companies:

Annex: Mobile phones

All contracts are for a minimum of one year.

Letter from A. J. Hoon to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about costs incurred as a result of withdrawal from mobile telephone contracts as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Military Survey Defence Agency.

Military Survey has incurred no costs as a result of withdrawing from mobile telephone contracts.

Letter from A. J. Hoon to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the procedures used in the award of contracts to supply mobile telephones as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Military Survey Defence Agency.

Recent purchases of mobile telephones have been made from the selection available in the catalogue issued by the central MOD authority responsible for telecommunications equipment. The catalogue is produced following a competitive process to identify the most cost-effective solutions to a range of requirements.

Earlier purchases were made after locally arranged competitive tendering with a number of suppliers. A list of companies invited to tender is attached. I regret that the list may not be exhaustive as details of tendering exercises are not normally retained for longer than three years.

Letter from A. J. Hoon to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about agreements for the provision of mobile telephones as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Military Survey Defence Agency.

Military Survey has no agreements as such with mobile telephone companies as all instruments have been purchased outright. Information regarding the contracts for telephones in use in the Agency is attached. You also asked for details of the costs involved; I regret that it is not our practice to divulge this commercially sensitive information.

Letter from W. S. Graham to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

1. I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, that sought details of procedures used by the "Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation (NARO)" in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones as the matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the NARO.

2. A number of local companies are approached by phone for costs and the one with the best deal at the time is selected.

3. Only 2 companies have been used to date:

Hutchison Telecom and The Peoples Phone Company.

Letter from W. S. Graham to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

1. I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, that asked for details of costs, if any, incurred by the "Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation (NARO)" as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones have been provided as the matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the NARO.

2. No costs incurred.

Letter from A. D. Ferguson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 18 January 1996:

I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA) to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about what agreements the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA) has with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; a list of those companies, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement.

The details requested are as follows:

Company	Duration of contract	Number of telephones	Annual cost £
BT	12 months	4	948
Cellnet	12 months	15	1,668
Cell Phone Direct	12 months	1	201
Mercury	12 months	1	153

Company	Duration of contract	Number of telephones	Annual cost £
Mercury	12 months	1	457
Talkland	12 months	7	1,914
Vodac	12 months	3	864

You will also wish to be aware that the NRTA has 80 telephones that were provided by MOD DGICS prior to Agency status at a total cost of £26456 per annum.

Letter from A. D. Ferguson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 18 January 1996:

I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA) to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about what procedures were used in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to the NRTA; and asking for a list of the companies involved.

The procedures used were a mixture of competitive tendering under government contracting rules or by local purchase action as appropriate. The companies involved were as follows:

BT

Cellnet

Cell Phone Direct

Mercury

Talkland

Vodac

Letter from A. D. Ferguson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 18 January 1996:

I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting Agency (NRTA) to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about what costs NRTA has incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and the companies concerned.

We have withdrawn from one agreement to date, with Talkland. There was no cost penalty. None of the agreements will attract a cost on withdrawal provided the required notice is given, 30 days in the majority of cases and 3 months the remainder.

Letter from B. Raine to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence/Her Majesty's Government about mobile car phones as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Queen Victoria School.

We have had no agreement with any company to provide a mobile and car phone, nor have we awarded any contracts. Therefore, we have incurred no costs as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided nor were we involved in any procedures to award such contracts.

Letter from R. H. Kyle to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence a number of questions concerning agreements and related costs of providing mobile and car telephones. I am replying as the Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Maintenance Group Defence Agency.

I understand that you will be receiving a separate reply direct from the Secretary of State covering mobile and car telephones which have been provided under departmental arrangements. This reply therefore only covers those instruments which have been obtained under delegated contractual authority. You will appreciate that my Agency comprises a number of Royal Air Force stations across the country, each of which enjoys the appropriate delegated authority in its own right. For simplicity of presentation a consolidated response to your various questions has been prepared and is attached to this letter.

I hope that this information is helpful.

Royal Air Force Maintenance Group Defence Agency Mobile and Car Telephones

1. Companies from which mobile and car telephones in use have been obtained:

British Telecom

Challenger Communications Ltd.

Hutchison Telecommunications

People's Phone

Roadphone

Securicor

2. Challenger Communications Ltd. has provided 4 mobile telephones on a short term contract for a specific operational requirement. All other telephones, which have been purchased, involve running contracts and related costs for line rental.

3. The total number of telephones concerned is 56. The total of instrument purchase costs is £724.38 (inc. VAT). The total of monthly rental costs is £1,205.29 (inc. VAT).

4. No costs have been incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts.

5. Where mobile telephones have been obtained under delegated contractual authorities the standard published Royal Air Force and Ministry of Defence procedures have been followed.

6. The following companies have been involved in tendering:

British Telecom

Challenger Communications Ltd.

Co-Channel Elec Ltd.

Hutchison Telecommunications

K - Phones

Letter from P. C. Ayee to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the costs that have been incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment Defence Agency.

No costs have been incurred by the Agency as the result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones have been provided

Letter from P. C. Ayee to Mr. Brian Dohohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the agreements his Department and its Executive Agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones, the companies having those contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment Defence Agency.

This Agency has annual rental agreements with Hutchinson Telecom for 4 mobile phones at a cost of £3600 per annum and Peoples Phone Company for 18 phones at a cost of £5040 per annum. All the contracts are of one year's duration with an option of cessation after 3 months notice.

Letter from P. C. Ayee to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the procedures were used in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones, and what companies were involved in tendering for those contracts, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force signals Engineering Establishment Defence Agency.

Standard Ministry of Defence procedures for the procurement of mobile phones were used. The companies involved in tendering for the contracts were British Telecom, Hutchinson Telecom and The Peoples' Phone Company.

Letter from A. A. Nicholson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the procedures used in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones.

The contracts to supply mobile phones to the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency are dealt with centrally within the Ministry of Defence.

I am sending a copy of this letter to the Agency's owner, the Air Officer Commanding-in-chief Personnel and Training Command.

Letter from I. S. Mitchelson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about provision of mobile and car phones in so far as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Service Children's Schools (North West Europe) Agency.

Service Children's Schools (NWE) currently operates 7 mobile phones. These were procured on our behalf by Headquarters United Kingdom Support Command (Germany), who are responsible for the provision of telecommunications equipment and related services within British Forces Germany. This is the normal procedure, and for the Agency to seek to set up separate arrangements for such limited requirements would not make any real sense. This of course means the Agency has not withdrawn from any mobile or car phone contracts.

I understand that the Department will cover the procurement arrangements.

Letter from J. R. Prince to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 January 1996:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of mobile and car phones, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Technical Support Agency (ATSA).

The information you have requested is set out below (please note that it relates to mobile phones only; ATSA does not possess any car phones):

Company	Number of phones
Callmaster	5
Motorola	23
Unique Air	9
Hutchinson Telecom	3
Total	40

The cost of the phones amounted to £3,100, and the estimated annual cost, including line rental, calls and VAT is £13,700. Lines are rented from BT, Motorola, Unique Air and Hutchinson Telecom.

The majority of the phones were purchased through existing Departmental enabling agreements, which were approved only after competitive tendering had been undertaken. Those agreements that have been made within the last 12 months require 1 years notice to terminate; those more than 12 months old require 90 days notice. One agreement has been terminated, with Unique Air, incurring a charge of £30.

Training

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 101, what is his calculation of the sums spent by regiments and groups other than his Department on training for each service in each of the past five years. [9725]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 16 January 1995]: Any such expenditure, if it occurs, would be from non-public funds and therefore would fall outside the accountability of my Department. Consequently, the information requested is not collected centrally.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 269

SESSION 1994–95

9th January—19th January 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
